Crime Evidence Tangle May Take Year To Unravel

Fact and Rumor Woven Into Confusing Web

TORONTO (CP) — Fact and rumor, allegations and denials in connection with reported government links with organized gambling are being aired before an Ontario royal commission on crime, which has just completed its first full week of hearings.

Names of politicians reaching from the provincial premier, Leslie Frost have been mentioned before the inquiry being conducted by Mr. Justice W. B. Roach of the Supreme Court of Ontario.

Mrs. Frost took the witness stand to deny knowing anything about a particular gambling club or any government activities in connection with it. The evidence has at times been a confused tangle, some of it being relayed at third or fourth hand and the commission being forced to dig back to find original sources, and always successfully.

It proved to date indicates the inquiry will be a long one, and no one connected with it will know how long it is, at least how long it may last. It could run for a year.

4 TOP MEN NAMED

In one connection or another, the inquiry has brought references to Attorney-General Kelso Roberts, former attorney-general Dana Porter, chief justice of Ontario, former premier T. L. Kennedy and former premier James Maloney.

The latter two now are dead. The witness suggested Mr. Kennedy was responsible for keeping open the Centre Road Veterans Club in Cooksville, described by police as one of the three most troublesome in the province. The club eventually was closed in 1955.

E. A. Cudney, deputy provincial secretary, testified that, at a 1954 meeting, it was decided to determine whether the club's existence should be continued, the minutes ministry had telephoned him to suggest that it would be "no hard" on the club.

The name of the chief justice came into the picture in evidence that in 1954 as attorney-general he had been asked to halt the questioning of 34 persons arrested in a 1937 raid.

The officer—gambling squad Sgt. John Anderson—also testified at an inquest into gambler Vincent Feeley had asked him one day to call off a raid on a club competing with that operated by Feeley and had purported to represent Mr. Frost. He had done there would be no "back talk" from the attorney-general's department on this score.

ROBERTS SAID INVOLVED

Provincial Police Commissioner W. H. Clark testified that Mr. Roberts had suggested Rob. Wris, hailed as undercover investigator into gambling and police bribery, as commissioner indicated he wished to have investigated. But the attorney-general felt that since it had been declared a police office, to be corrupt, he should not be interested promptly.

Police Lieutenant Const. Robert Wright, along with Feeley and gambler Joseph McDermott, both convicted of conspiracy to obtain information illegally from OPP Constable George Scott.

QUEBEC (CP) — Secession-ist leader Dr. Marcel Chaput said during the weekend he would be pleased to send representatives to celebrations of Canada's centennial in 1967—as representatives of a sovereign state.

Dr. Chaput told a gathering of Quebec members of his Rassemblement Pour l'Independance Nationale that he hopes Quebec will be independent within five years.

He rejected the name "separatiste."

"We are not separatist," he said. "We are, on the contrary, nationalists, and all the others are provincialists."

"We can even say that we are the only French-Canadian nationalists."

Quebec police, meanwhile, were examining a device found by a watchman at the hall in which Dr. Chaput spoke. They had been warned by letter that a bomb would be planted in the hall and a search turned up the device.

Police said they believed the thing is timed to go with an alarm clock and some wiring and a 9-volt battery apparently a hoax. It did not appear to be explosive.

Dr. Chaput said English-language minorities in an independent Quebec would be treated "just the same as the French-language minorities currently in the rest of Canada."

He said his movement is not anti-semitic and will use only democratic methods to have Quebec secede from Confederation.

Denying rumors that the organization's members are mostly students, he said the average age of members is 36 and they represent all classes of society "including the clergy."

FIFTEEN KILLED AS TORNADO HITS FLORIDA

Nothing Left In Three Blocks

MILTON, Fla. (AP) — A tornado which officials said may have been the most powerful ever to strike Florida ripped through Milton Saturday, killing 15 persons.

The opinion on the twister's strength was given by Governor Farris Vryant and a group of officials who toured the devastated residential area of this northwest Florida town Sunday.

Bryant said he was appalled at the violent force of the winds, which in one area blasted a group of houses so thoroughly that the foundations couldn't be found. It was to this area that most of the fatalities and injuries took place.

For the width of about three blocks, the twister swept down every house and ripped every tree to shreds, leaving only bare stumps.

SEES ESTIMATE

Bryant said federal authorities in the area today will begin assessing the damages for distribution to private civilian defence organization and highway patrol have fixed a preliminary damage figure at $1,500,000.

Bryant flew over the seven mile path of the twister in a helicopter, then toured by automobile.

The 3 gentlemen and highway patrolmen closed off the storm area Sunday to keep out sightseers and prevent looting.

Some residents returned, however, to search through the ruins for small items of sentimental value.

The task of burying the dead gets under way today and will continue through the week. Individual funerals will be held except for Mrs. Gertrude Johnson, 50-year-old Negro woman, and her three children—Rickey, Debra and Jessie—who will be given mass burial Wednesday.

ABOARD THE EMPRESS OF ENGLAND (CP) — A country-side test of babies begun by family doctors 18 months ago has discovered for the first time in Canada a case of phenylketonuria, a rare condition that leads to severe mental retardation.

As the result of the early discovery of this condition in a baby at Picton, Ont., there is a chance to treat it with a rigid, special diet.

Consultants referred to in medicine as PKU, phenylketonuria doctors only once in 30,000 live births.

The College of General Practice of Canada sent to more than 2,000 doctors a test kit for PKU, urging the family doctors to test all newly born babies twice before the age of two months.

The Picton case was discovered two weeks ago and made known to the college's ninth annual scientific assembly aboard this Canadian Pacific liner that is nearing the end of an eight-day Mediterranean cruise.

More than 300 general practitioners, more than half from small communities across Canada, are attending the five days of scientific sessions.

The PKU case was discovered by Dr. F. W. Murphy of Picton. In the sixth of a family whose first three children are normal.

PKU is a condition in which a child is born lacking an enzyme needed to enable the body to handle phenylalanine, a substance found in a normal diet. If the condition is not discovered before the child is six months old it causes severe damage to the developing brain.

A special diet developed in 1950 can reduce mental retardation so that the child will acquire an IQ of 70 or more. Such a child can be trained to have a useful place in society.

In some instances early treatment seems able to prevent mental retardation entirely.

Dr. W. A. Ochrane, associate professor of pediatrics at Dalhousie University, Halifax, said PKU is the turning point in the attitude of family doctors towards mental retardation. Often doctors looked on mentally retarded cases as hopeless and spent little time on them. Now that treatment is available for one cause, the emphasis has swung from hopelessness to prevention

Warm Weather And Heavy Rains Cause Floods

HALIFAX (CP)—Skies were clearing in much of the Maritimes today following a weekend of warm weather, heavy rains, torrential rain and destructive floods.

Flooding was rampant in several towns; homes were reported flooded in Moncton; a 15-year-old girl was swept to her death in a river chewed out a section of road in Cape Breton, Oxford in northern Nova Scotia was cut off from the highway traffic and a bridge washed out in Prince Edward Island.

The storm also reported victim was Stella Moore of Pleasant Bay on the northern tip of Cape Breton who drowned when she was carried into a river by the action of a highway washed out.

CAIRO (AP) — Army officers demanding reunion of Syria and Presiden, Nasser's United Arab Republic were reported in revolt today in northern Syria.

A broadcast from Aleppo, Syria's second largest city, said a "free officers command" had "freed" Aleppo and military leaders who broke with the U.A.R. last September and then seized the country's civilian government last week.

The Aleppo broadcast said the rebel command had declared martial law in "northern and eastern areas" of Syria.

The embattled junta announced immediately it was willing to hold a plebiscite on the question of reuniting with Egypt.

Damascus radio said the Syrian junta had "unity with all liberated Arab countries and all of all with Egypt, provided this unity is built on sound foundations and conditions ensuring the dignity and status of this country to avoid past errors and provided these conditions are voted on in a free national referendum."

The offer in effect seemed to say: "We will agree to unity again but this time on equal terms and after the people have voted on it."

With all its conditions, the offer could amount to a proposal that Syria, Egypt and possibly other Arab states form a federation rather than the unified republic that existed until Syria withdrew from the Egyptian linkup.

Commonwealth Conference Appears Likely Next Fall

LONDON (CP)—Britain's reluctant flirtation with the idea of Commonwealth prime ministers conference, continues to spotlight political maneuvering.

After many months of thinking it over, Prime Minister Diefenbaker first popped the question last summer—it now looks as if there may indeed be a conference in the next few months.

But there's still one big headache—finding a time that will suit all 13 prime ministers.

The timing is delicate. Britain wants to hold a conference after she knows the full price of entry into the European Economic Community.

If she calls a conference prematurely, she may wind up with not one but two meetings of prime ministers.

Then there are the conflicting work-schedules of the visiting prime ministers, some of whom may face elections on their hands.

This applies particularly to Canada and Australia, the two countries most eager to get Britain in early.

Some sophisticated witnesses wonder whether the British government would really be upset in its heart of hearts, if the prime ministers found themselves unable to decide on a mutually satisfactory note.

Commonwealth Observer, a Sunday newspaper;

"The possibilities of delay are promising, and almost endless. It is a situation whose complexity is just agreeable to the government, which is still as determined as ever to settle this thing for Britain's entry into Europe."

Behind such subtleties apart, one guess is that this most discussed and speculated upon of all Commonwealth conferences will be held this year, most likely in September or October.

Joining the speculation, The Financial Times publishes, editorial cautioning Prime Minister Macmillan from agreeing

THREE CHILDREN AT WOODSTOCK PERISH IN FIRE

Parents and Two Others Rescued

WOODSTOCK (CP)—Three of the five children of Mr. and Mrs. Ramsay McDonald were killed early Sunday when a fire creating intense heat raced through their 1½-storey home.

Mrs. McDonald was sleeping in a downstairs bedroom, were awakened by smoke as the fire began to sweep through the frame house. Mrs. McDonald fled outside with Donna, 4, and Barbara, 1½, both sleeping downstairs.

Mr. McDonald attempted to extinguish the fire which was spouting, he said, from the bottom of the attic stairs but the room where Donna and Barbara were sleeping.

The flames spread too rapidly and Mr. McDonald was forced to flee the house.

The three children who died, all sleeping upstairs, were Maria, 11, Jimmy, 7, and Sharyl, 5.

TWO IN BEDS

Marie was found by firemen on the kitchen floor. They said she probably tried to escape but was overcome. The other two children were found in their beds.

The flames were so intense that Capt. N. H. Pratt of the Woodstock fire department said it would have been suicide to enter the house from the front.

A neighbor, Arthur L. Clark, said he was watching television about 4:30 a.m. when he saw smoke coming from the McDon.

Pediatrics Professor Is Alarmed About Added Vitamin D in Foods

ABOARD EMPRESS OF ENGLAND (CP)—The number of foods and food preparations in Canada that have excess vitamin D added is reaching "somewhat alarming," a leading child doctor said today.

Dr. William Cochrane, associate professor of pediatrics at Dalhousie University, Halifax, told a meeting of family doctors aboard this Canadian Pacific cruise ship that despite "readily available vitamins, there are certain vitamin deficiencies among children in various parts of Canada—particularly of vitamins, vitamin B6, ascorbic acid and vitamin D.

"It is also necessary perhaps that the physician be aware of the potential danger of excessive amounts of vitamin D. In Canada it is somewhat alarming to record the number of foods and food preparations that have excess vitamin D added.

"It now is possible that young children may receive up to 2,500 international units of vitamin D daily when their actual requirements are greater than 400 international units."

Error in deficiency continues to be one of the most common in children in the world today, Dr. Cochrane said, and is a most significant problem in Canadian children.

The causes of iron deficiency are most commonly due to the lack of knowledge on the part of the mother of the proper foods that she should be giving her child and that this lack of iron is frequently due to lack of instruction on the part of the family physician."

New Terrorist Wave Launched By Secret Army

French Counter-Attack Yields 38 Prisoners

ALGIERS (Reuters) — The terrorist Secret Army Organization today launched a new wave of shootings, bombings and holdups in Algiers.

After the quietest Sunday this year in Algeria, the Secret Army today wounded two Moslems with plastic bombs, a grenade and a sub-machine-gun attack and got away with 249,000 new francs (£40,800) in three armed robberies.

Three Moslems were wounded when a grenade was thrown into a Moslem store on the fringe of the Casbah, another in one of the city's poorer suburbs, and a fifth by a sub-machine-gun burst from a passing car as the grenade - throwers sped away.

However, the French Army—in the midst of a stepped - up drive against the terrorists—announced it had captured 36 members of a 100-man Secret Army commando unit which attacked three army command posts in western Algeria last Wednesday.

The army said seven officers, including a lieutenant colonel as Liaut. Delhomme, were captured during the Secret Army counter-attacked after the Secret Army captured the three posts. Five have been killed and 38 taken at least 15 other automatic weapons were taken from the terrorists.

The army high command said ex-Col. Yves Gastaud, reported to be in charge of the Secret Army's Algiers organization, led the gang that attacked the three posts.

Security forces, he added, occupied the posts briefly, seized arms and fled 10 convicts to Donna, 4, and Barbara, 1½, both sleeping downstairs.

Mr. McDonald attempted to extinguish the fire which was spouting, he said, from the bottom of the attic stairs but the room where Donna and Barbara were sleeping.

The flames spread too rapidly and Mr. McDonald was forced to flee the house.

False Signal In Berlin Crisis Says Paper

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Washington Star said Saturday in a copyrighted story that a false signal at the height of the Berlin crisis last fall indicated the United States might be under attack and planes carrying hydrogen bombs rushed to the borders of Strategic Air Command bases all over the world.

"The bombers did not take off because it was a false alarm," the story added.

Reporter Richard Fryklund wrote:

"The four harrowing minutes that the incident lasted revealed a flaw in SAC and Air Defence Command communications. But it also showed that the safety devices that control our retaliatory force worked and it proved for the first time that SAC actually has half its bomb-ers on the effective 15% - minute alert."

The Star said this story was kept secret by SAC and the Pentagon for two reasons:

First, the Pentagon feared that if the public learned about the alarm, people would think the world war 3 was imminent. Second, SAC wanted to find the cause of the communications break and correct it before the enemy could find any possible advantage in the incident.

Fryklund said the malfunction has been found and corrected.

Eight Members Of Two Families Killed in Crash

DRUMMONDVILLE, Que. (CP) — A visit to relatives turned into grief-provoked for the biggest single traffic tragedy of the year Sunday when eight members of two families were wiped out in a car-train collision.

A car driven by Michel Fortier, 34, was sliced in two by a freight train at a level crossing near Drummondville, 85 miles northeast of Montreal.

He was killed along with his mother, Mrs. Rose Fortier, and his brother Claude, 20, and sister Louise, 30. Also killed were passengers in the car, Mrs. Armand Gagnon, 33 and 27 respectively, and their children Bernard, 8, and Andree, 6. The Gagnons are from Thetford Mines, Que., and the Fortiers from Robertsonville, Que.

Provincial police said the driver's vision might have been obscured by falling snow. The car hit the train, bound from Montreal to Joliette, Que., between the first and second diesel units and the train dragged it 50 feet, strewing the bodies of its occupants along the railway right-of-way.

Prime Minister Asks Clemency For Prisoners

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Diefenbaker Sunday added his voice to a public appeal to the Canadian government asking that clemency be shown toward the nearly 1,200 invasion prisoners now on trial in Havana.

"In view of the widespread concern in Canada about the fate of the prisoners, I express the hope that clemency will be exercised and that there will not be resort to the death penalty in the determination of sentence," he said in a statement of which this appeal to the government of Cuba on humanitarian grounds."

Diplomatic sources said the plea was officially conveyed by the Castro government through the Canadian embassy in Havana.

It was the third time in less than two months that Canada has attempted to intercede on behalf of the prisoners captured during the ill-fated invasion at the Bay of Pigs April 17.

CANADIAN AMONG GROUP

In his statement Mr. Diefenbaker said: "We have been particularly concerned that these trials are taking place behind closed doors. We are still hopeful that impartial observers and members of foreign governments may be given access to the trials in order to establish that, with full regard to all the circumstances, the proceedings are conducted in accordance with normal principles of justice."

Canadian representatives to the Castro government in the past have been effective, but most of them concerned matters of direct Canadian interest.

GUARD RAIL STOPS CAR FROM ENTERING RIVER

A heavy steel railing along the Moira River on Station street prevented a Belleville man from getting wet Saturday night when he lost control of his car while proceeding west on Station St.

It is believed that while William Roy Sager of 30 West Moira Street was travelling west on Station street, he lost control of his vehicle and broke off two parking meters in front of the post office.

Damage to the car was estimated at approximately $500 and $75 to the railing.

Mr. Sager was uninjured in the accident.

Council Will Review Budget At Special Meet

A special meeting of city council is expected will be called later this week to deal with the 1962 budget.

City Manager J. R. Reynolds said today the city's budget was now completed but would be reviewed by finance committee before being brought before council.

Before bringing down the year's budget, however, council will have to formally adopt the 1961 audit report.

Mr. Reynolds said a special meeting of council was expected to be called for Thursday or Friday to deal with the audit report and it was hoped that the 1962 budget could be approved at the same time.

Stiff Breeze Needed to Take Out Bay Ice

The warm weather of the past week has taken its toll on the Bay of Quinte ice and only a stiff breeze is required until the Bay will be again open for navigation season.

Over the weekend the ice moved out from around the Belleville waterfront and the Bay is open from the Bay Bridge down to The Narrows.

"I imagine that in the next few days the last of the ice will disappear from the Bay", Max Smith, harbor master, noted today.

Apollo Club Retains Mercier Trophy

Weightlifters from the Apollo Barbell Club and Belleville Y.M.C.A. met to determine supremacy of the Paul Mercier trophy at the Y.M.C.A. Saturday night.

A total of eleven men from the two different clubs competed for top honors with the Apollo Club retaining the trophy.

In the bantamweight class Bruce Fleming of the Apollo Club was pushed to his limit to defeat Roger Taylor of the Y.M.C.A. by ten pounds in what proved to be the closest fight of the contest. Jerry Mullins lifting only a few month's after a lay-off surprised himself by beating his best total and beating Tony Wright of the Y.M.C.A.

Bob Langsbeer of the Apollo Club for the first time realized his true potential as a middleweight in making a 645 pound total. His opposition Jack Rushnell of the Y recovering from a severe back ailment made a fine total under the circumstances.

Ken Carr-Brant, coach of the Apollo Club kept up his good record of not missing a district meet and made his best total lifetime total of 620 to defeat one of his own lifters, Joe Lewis, who has been having a rough time lately in the snatch lift and missed them all.

In the middle heavy class, John Lewis of the Apollo Club who should prove to be potential bait for the next Empire Games made his best total of 870 pounds and also the top lifter at the night. Jerry Vickers of the Y exceeded his best total to make 735. Price Morris, the only heavyweight to fell just short of the 800 mark with his best 790.

This year due to the new set of rules set up, lifters who are not up to the competition were eliminated from competing thus making for a better and more interesting meet.

Former City Woman Drowns As Car Skids Off Highway 7

A former Belleville woman, Mrs. Rhoda Cooke, 32, of Ottawa, was drowned Sunday night when her car skidded out of control on Highway 7 about 10 miles west of Perth and plunged into a creek.

Two children, a woman who were following Mrs. Cooke's car attempted a rescue, with Percy Hall, 24, of Ottawa the driver, diving twice into the water in unsuccessful attempts to free Mrs. Cooke.

He told provincial police at Perth that he was unable to open the doors of the car. Police later recovered the body.

Mrs. Cooke was on her way home from Belleville where she had been visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. C. Mc-Gowan, R. R. 6, Belleville, and her twin sister, Mrs. Jim McGregor.

She left for home shortly after the supper hour despite entreaties from her parents and brother-in-law to remain until morning due to slippery road conditions.

Originally Mrs. Cooke had intended to bring her four children with her but at the last moment decided to leave them home with Mr. Cooke and the youngest child is a five months old baby.

The late Mrs. Rhoda Elizabeth (Betty) Cooke was born at Stratford, 32 years ago, being the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil McGowan and resided in Belleville some years, when the husband, Dana John Cooke was organist at Christ Church. She had been living at 2713 Bank Street in Ottawa for the past eight months.

Mrs. Cooke was an adherent of Bethel Chapel and is survived by her husband, Dana John Cooke of Ottawa, four children, Susan, Elizabeth, 7; Dana Bruce, 6, Larry Frederick, 4, Sharon Ann, five months, two sisters, Mrs. Nancy McGregor of and twin sister, Mrs. James (Peggy) McGregor, both of Belleville, and two brothers, Harry C. McGowan of this city, and Elgin G. McGowan of Port Hawkesbury, N.S.

Resting at the Pinkston and Luscombe Funeral Home, 84 Victoria Avenue at Church Street. Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

Mantle of Snow Dumped Over Quinte District

The opening of March failed to much resemble a lion but what is hoped to have been a final kick of cold Old Winter saw a mantle of light snow dumped over the Quinte district making driving conditions treacherous.

Approximately 2 inch of the snow fell in the Belleville district last night as sort of an April Fool's joke.

Despite the tricky driving conditions there were no serious accidents though visibility at times was cut almost to zero.

Setting himself a formidable task, playing 36 boards simultaneously, Lionel Joyner of Montreal, Canadian chess champion, came through with flying colors yesterday. In a magnificent display of chess, he won 33 of the 36 games, including one blindfold played blindfolded, lost two games and drew one.

The exhibition, the closing event of the Southeastern Ontario Chess League season, was staged in co-operation with the Brockville YMCA at the Hotel Brockville ballroom. About 50 of Canada or Mr. Joyner's opponents were Brockville public school youngsters. Others, however, included top league players. The two players who were their games were Eric Bechofer of Kingston and E. Beauchamp of Brockville. Mr. Beauchamp Prescott got a draw.

Four Belleville players participated. All lost, but of the 36 boards their games were Joyner's ninth due.

John Ward, Grade 9 Quinte Secondary School student who normally plays Board 6 on the Belleville team, was selected to play Joyner blindfolded. Against Mr. Joyner. His was the second game to finish, he resigning as Joyner, moving his pawn. A move or so later, and Mr. Joyner's win due to a fork, ten minutes, after 51-2 hours of play, Martin Hanchilk resigned, on the board of the pawns against king, bishop and seven pawns. The game was moves earlier the other two Belleville players had bowed Mr. Joyner. Dave Bates after remaining in the middle game, rendering to invincible forces Joyner's. Then Bates easily outplayed in an end game, and neatly mated with king, knight and pawn. Peter Bates resigned pawn at the other end of the board were a square off queening.

Before the simultaneous cards started, the league president, Dr. G. Danilov of Kingston, presented the league trophy to Stanley Eric Bedford, also of Kingston, for mailing to the Ottawa club, which won the league title, but was the only club of the five in the league to have completed games. Ottawa won 45 of 64 games in the league. Kingston was 43 1-2 with one game to be adjudicated, Belleville 36 1-2, Brockville 32 and Cornwall 16 1-2. The game to be adjudicated between Andrew Kalotay of Brockville and Dr. Danilov of Kingston, in which Kalotay had a pawn up, was a clear win. If this is confirmed by adjudication, it will be the league's only Belleville point. Kalotay has lost in league play. Kalotay and Dr. Danilov were present at Sunday's event, but neither played against Joyner.

to an early Commonwealth meeting.

Such a meeting, the newspaper said, "would only be useful if the conditions on which Britain would gain entry were by then known in broad terms."

"Moreover the fears of the unknowns which most if not all of the prime ministers would be expressing would furnish the critics of the government's European policy with formidable ammunition.

"A prime ministers' conference before the autumn thus would represent a definite setback for the British government."

Non-ops Hold Conference In This City

The past, present and the future of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Transport and General Workers (known in railway parlance as the Non-Ops), was outlined to local union members at their weekend conference here Saturday and Sunday at the Engineers' Hall in Belleville.

A good turnout of employees from the Picton, Trenton and Belleville areas attended the meeting at which various phases of working conditions were discussed. Speaker for the occasion was Donald N. Secord, national secretary - treasurer of the Non-Ops.

Among subjects discussed at the conference were the new agreement and seniority rights and changes the CNR pension plan; health and welfare plan; and the workmen's compensation plan.

The conference was under the direction of Harry Jacks of the Brotherhood Education Department, Toronto, assisted by Mr. Norman of CNR pension plan, William Gori, educational chairman of Local 126, Belleville, and Herbert W. Pointer, chairman of the Belleville local, and James Morey, president of Local 126.

Mr. Secord stressed the importance of participation on the parf of the Brotherhood, declaring that it should never be allowed to be a "quality of inquiry."

"We must never be content to accept the status quo, to rest on our laurels, to exchange probing minds for minds frozen in attitudes of placid complacency. Smugness is the death of any organization," he said.

Looking to the future Mr. Secord said the union will be an ethical, well-integrated, efficient and democratically administered organization and an important part of the highly organized society.

He said it would play an even more important part in society because it will be dedicated to the principle that justice must prevail for all and that the most valuable benefits to be gained for members will come as a result of first considerations being given to the welfare of the community as a whole.

Pearson's Train Goes Flying By, 'Engineer Is Tory' Liberals Cry

Mr. Pearson was willing and anxious to stay over at Brighton on his way through to Cobourg from Montreal.

Some 50-odd party members, headed by Dr. Pauline Jewett, Liberal candidate for Northumberland, hastied in little knots on the CNR station platform at Brighton, were willing and anxious to have him stop.

The wind was cold and snow was falling. But an air of gaiety and expectancy pervaded throughout the greeting party on the platform.

TORY WEATHER

Hands were raised aloft in greeting and little Miss Judy Rundle stepped forward. Judy had been given the delightful task of presenting a corsage of white carnations to Mrs. Lester B. Pearson.

Dr. Jewett and Bernard Morgan, president of the Brighton Liberal Association, also stepped forward, prepared to welcome their national leader suitably.

The train stopped. But the baggage car was opposite the welcoming party at the station and the parlor car in which the Pearsons were riding, was still far, far, down the tracks, to the east.

The train started up again. Again hands were raised in greeting. Again official greeters stepped forward.

But the train wasn't crawling, as expected. It was gathering speed. Suddenly, it was gone.

"What the— heck!" said someone.

TORY ENGINEER

"It's backing up," came the welcome news.

And the train did back up. And Mr. and Mrs. Pearson did alight. Judy presented her corsage. Everyone from the youngest to the oldest Liberal in the crowd got to shake hands with "Mike", (plus a few known/Tories).

Mr. Pearson put his arm around Judy.

Dr. Pauline/Jewett wanted a candidate for Northumberland, we wanted one with intelligence, so we came to Brighton," he told the delighted audience.

Mr. and Mrs. Pearson rested in Brighton before continuing their journey to Cobourg, where they attended a banquet and a Liberal rally.

Flash Fire Leaves Family Homeless

TRENTON—A family of three lost its home and household possessions as the result of a flash fire in Trenton Saturday afternoon. Damage to the dwelling, owned by Kee Perry and located at 20 Hanna Street, was considered extensive by fire chief.

The fire department was called shortly before four o'clock.

The Berrys are staying with relatives until arrangements for living accommodation can be made. Mrs. Perry is expecting another child within a few weeks.

Mr. Perry is employed by the Benedict - Proctor Company.

TOW TRUCK NEEDED

Nathan Heim of Frankford had an unpleasant experience Sunday morning.

Driving along a side road, just off Highway 33, north of the Queensway Hotel, Mr. Heim suddenly felt his car "sinking."

The car had literally "dropped" through the road, up to the hub caps.

The services of a tow truck were secured and the car was hauled out of its muddy resting place.

On Sunday, William G. Brown, of Belleville, regional vice-president of the Ontario Group of the RCAF Association, symbolically handed over the "Bon Voyage" program to F/L Grey Waddell, officer in charge of No. 2, Air Movements Unit at RCAF Station Trenton, while Mrs. Heather Waddell and 18 months' old Cleo looked on approvingly. The Bon Voyage kit bag, containing games for the grown-ups, and toys, will be put aboard overseas aircraft on which RCAF dependents are passengers. Formerly, the kit bags were put aboard at Montreal; now they will be given out at Trenton.

Ontario Group RCAF Assoc. Favors Canadian Sweeps

TRENTON — The 50-plus delegates to the RCAF Association's Ontario Group, Quinte Regional Conference at RCAF Station Trenton on Sunday, were hardly well served on the gambling picture in the province.

Acting at the instigation of Trenton 413 Wing, delegates approved a resolution "that the Ontario group of the RCAF Association petition the provincial government for permission to operate an Irish-wide sweepstakes on the Stanley Cup and the Grey Cup; first prize to be $100,000."

The resolution will be sent to Ontario Group convention where it will be voted upon.

Approximately 30 per cent of the proceeds from the sale of sweepstakes tickets would go for prize money; ten per cent for administration costs and the remaining 40 per cent would be used by the association's wings across the province for benevolent purposes.

The general feeling was that gambling, in one form or another, was going on and that it would be a good move (and popular one) to legalize sales of sweepstakes tickets.

The delegates were told that the Peel County council had sent out a questionnaire to councils throughout the province recently and that 200-out of 300 councils contacted had voted in favor of the legalized sale of sweepstakes tickets.

"Even the staid, solid British government sponsors a draw in connection with the sale of government bonds," Jack Radcliffe of Trenton told the group.

A number of wing members from Cornwall and Brockville were present as visitors.

Bill Caverley represented the Oshawa Group.

A resolution sponsored by the Peterborough wing, "that the RCAF Association urge the government of Canada to arm any operational squadrons fitted with nuclear warheads", was defeated by the group, 19 to 18; the balloting being the first "polled" voting on the issue.

The resolution will be forwarded to the Ontario Group, regardless.

The feeling of the proponents was that there wasn't much sense of having Bomarc missiles if they were of no value.

Argument against the resolution was that the government and the military leaders knew what they were doing. Some felt that the resolution "overlapped" a similar resolution passed at a national level of the association last November, asking that Canada's armed forces be provided with the best weapons available".

Some delegates felt that the issue was a "political football".

The Ontario Group will also be asked to consider a resolution (also sponsored by Peterborough) that an air force blue beret (with crests) replace the be recognized as alternate head-gear) the wedge cap. Some felt that the wedge cap were distinctive; others that the beret was more positive-and easier to care for.

The regional wings will ask that any ex-air cadet, who has completed two years' training, and attained his 21st birthday, be accepted as an associate member. It was felt that this was one way of getting "new blood" into the association.

The resolution sponsored by the Kingston wing, asked that the words "equal consideration" when it comes to permanent quarters and the use of the messes in all centres where they are located. This will be forwarded to the Ontario group, although some wing members felt this was "an old chestnut" and would not be considered by the military.

Len McGoughery of the Trenton wing, was told by Bill Caverley that the benevolent Fund had turned down a resolution sponsored by Trenton that funds be made available for veterans' housing. The fund cannot use money for "speculation."

Bill Caverley urged the wing members to publicize their "foster parents' plan" in the hope that it would be taken up by other groups. He said that the need was great. In Ontario, 17 RCAF Association wings sponsor children in other lands. Assistance provided for the child and his family is provided with household necessities, and clothing supplies where indicated. The Belleville wing has "adopted" a child in India.

An award of merit was presented to the Peterborough group by Mr. Caverley in recognition of the wing's progress.

ment out of office Wednesday it promised to set up a government which would strengthen Arab ties, particularly with Egypt.

Later, however, the army denied reports spread by "rumor mongers" that the new regime was drifting back into an alliance with Egypt.

Reports reached Beirut, Lebanon, of demonstrations against the junta in Aleppo, Homs, Tarious and Deir ez Sor. At least five soldiers were reported killed in a clash Sunday at Homs, 100 miles north of Damascus, between pro-Nasser civilians and government troops.

Telephone contact between Beirut and Aleppo was cut, but circuits remained open between Beirut and Damascus. The junta in a series of broadcast communiques banned meetings of more than five persons, proclaimed a nightly curfew throughout the country from 8 p.m. until 5 a.m. and closed the frontiers although not the airports.

The rebellious officers denounced the junta as as "erring, self-styled group," and accused it of seizing power again last week to "satisfy individual ambitions, disregarding the interest and security of the country."

Great Theories Are Vulgarized By Followers

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Freud once remarked tartly, "I am not a Freudian," but as Marx is said to have told a friend, "I am not a Marxist," and Einstein rejected his own theory of relativity as applied to moral and social behavior.

All great and powerful theories — whether right or wrong — are distorted and vulgarized by their followers; by the time they reach the public, these theories have usually been mangled out of recognition.

As a particularly apt example of the sort of thing that made Freud wince, consider the hideously popular word "frustration" today. It is commonly believed that frustration is a "bad thing" and that the goal of psychiatric treatment is to "get rid of frustrations."

To most people this sounds as if Freud were advocating the loosening of all repressions and the free acting out of sexual desires. Actually, as a highly moral man, Freud would loathe that thought in Freud's mind.

In truth, the neurotic is not able to handle his frustrations in a powerful and rational way. All of us have frustrations; they are an especial part of life. How we cope with them is the measure of our maturity. And the person who refuses to accept and tolerate certain frustrations needs help as much as the man who is weighed down by them.

Another common misuse of psychiatric terms is "rationalization." Many persons (even quite educated ones) believe that rationalization means "excuses" or "repressions — and this, to them, means that all devoted and loose morals or uninhibited display of our instinctual drives.

He normally has a job to do. He meant simply that certain childhood resentments are buried deeply in the unconscious, where they tend to shape and distort the adult's behavior, so that our feelings do not correspond to the present reality.

"Getting rid of" these repressions means bringing them up to the conscious level, and seeing them for what they are — exercises in memories of childhood wounds and wishes. When we are able to do this, we are no longer their slaves in a sense-acting out. It has nothing at all to do with "unrepressed" or engaging in promiscuous behavior.

Even the word "love" as used by Freud has become narrowed and distorted in popular usage; and even some psychiatrists, such as Reich, took the term in too strictly literal a sense. What Freud meant by "sexuality" was, in fact, far deeper, far broader, than the sexuality we in fact, far broader, than the sexuality we in itself.

STRENGTH FOR THE DAY

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

BUILT-IN RETRIBUTION

We often use the word "web" when speaking of deceit. It is like "the spider's web which catches the fly for the spider later to devour. Sometimes we use the word "trap" in the same connection. The evil man falls into the trap of his own wicked devising. He finds that laid down the plan of His universe according to certain lines which seem, sometimes, to other things, to include the punishment of evil by the evil itself.

If we deceive, we are eventually caught in the web of our own deceit. If we lie, the lie comes back to haunt us and perhaps to destroy us. If we hate, lying. If we set a trap for others, we are more likely than not to fall into it ourselves.

Every evil has a certain retribution built into it. If we succumb to that evil, the retribution is likely to overwhelm us. This is just another way of saying that in the world as God has created it evil is a very large extent punishes itself. We do not have to wait for the heavy hand of God to strike us. Nothing external needs to come upon us to punish us for the nature of our evil, and the disadvantage, and perhaps danger, in which it involves us.

Evil cannot cure itself, only God can do that. But evil can punish itself. And when we are tempted to say evil we need to bear in mind the built-in retribution with which it is equipped.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

April 2nd, 1942

A new day dawned for Canadian motorists today as service stations across the country opened for business prepared to sell gasoline only to drivers with ration coupons. It was the first compulsory rationing of any commodity imposed in Canada during the Second Great War, although an honor rationing system has been applied to all purchases, and many buying restrictions are in effect covering a wide range of products.

Mystery surrounded the theft of a case of wine stolen from a large transport, the property of the Barnes Wine Company of Niagara Falls, here last Monday night. P. C. Wright went to the scene of the crime, the truck being parked on the market square. A lock had been removed from the back door of the truck, but no visible signs of force could have been employed by the culprits were in evidence. The padlocks as well as a case of bottles of wine, were all missing.

Taken from a cloak room at the Belleville General Hospital last week, was a wallet stolen from R. T. McFee, hospital employee. It was returned to him through the mails over the weekend. However, the cash in the wallet was not enclosed.

Cigarettes valued at $40 could have been captured or despatched in the cosgry and the bounty collected from the Provincial Treasurer's office, since the beginning of the year. Eight wolf-cubs were captured near Lonsdale a few weeks ago, and promptly killed.

Fearful Toll Taken by Hate

Winnipeg Tribune

From Spain, to Nazi Germany, to Palestine, to Cyprus, to Indo-China to Algeria the tale of blood-letting during the past 25 years is almost all understanding. Men, women and children have been and are being butchered in the most revolting of hate that might well upset the moralist to ask— "What is the value of such a civilization?"

At least there is an awful warning in all this. Every nation has within its borders extremist individuals who would push their own beliefs beyond the art of compromise. When they do, the sort of hysteria seizes —otherwise reasonable people which only ceases when oceans of blood drench the participants.

It is against the fact that our minds and hearts are dulled to tales of rapine and murder most foul, of which the history of hate and hysteria in Algeria may yet teach us that reason and compromise are the only hope for human survival.

In this way, perhaps, the martyred innocents may yet serve the greater good.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

TRUE AND BLUE

There is an appeal in genuineness, that is not matched by anything else. Let the moment you look into some eyes you know you are beholding a genuine man or woman.

Sincerity outlaws all pretense. You know that the rich and gorgeous colorings of the peacock are not going to fade, even though it is not attempting sun. Every God-color is sun-fast.

And this impulses are born with the human being. What education does is merely to bring out the glow of the burning flame within the heart. Even the worst education means to "lead out."

Sincerity is the cornerstone to all art, to all genuine and lasting effort.

A man may fail in his plan, but he will succeed in his character. He may not win the prize, but he will win himself. He may not be able to do the thing he wants to do, but he will be able to be the thing he wants to be.

Sincerity is the cornerstone to all art, to all genuine and lasting effort.

A man may fail in his plan, but he will succeed in his character. He may not win the prize, but he will win himself. He may not be able to do the thing he wants to do, but he will be able to be the thing he wants to be.

Mighty Sea Untamable

Miami Herald

On all sides is the sea, which covers most of the earth's surface and makes up inland dwellers. The sea is older than anything save the earth; with age it has authority and the ancient wisdom of the long years.

The sea is a source of life, benign and inspiring. But often it is remorseless and deadly. The huge waves which have battered Gold Coast piers and the Eastern seaboard with a fury known only to hurricanes and tidal waves, remind that the will of the waters is unquenchable.

Our Atlantic, named by the Greeks for the Giant Atlas, can stand tall in its strength and cold in its fury. One wave 12 feet high strikes with a force of more than 100 tons for every foot of its length.

Waves set running by earthquakes or volcanoes have swept halfway around the world, disregarding land in one furious descent. Some have been known to run at a speed of 600 miles an hour.

The watery assault upon our shores from the storm-tossed 1,000 miles at sea may have been swells at one point. When they crossed the continental shelf and ran for the beaches they came alive with the terrible strength of storm. Farmers had known far at sea. Unable to fish waters, they had run deep and troubled waters.

So man with all his atoms and his genius is a pitiable thing beside the muscular sea. It is unconquerable. It answers only to Creation.

Too Many MPs Are Yahoos

Financial Post

In Canada we are inclined to be self-righteous about the way the John Birch Society and kindred political lunacies do not flourish here. But this complacence if ever justified, will certainly not survive recent utterances by our M.P.s.

To accuse a politician of gambling, which is merely reasonable, is absurd; all politicians are ambitious. To talk of "spending the public's pretends", in ostensibly serious affairs like running a big country, is worse than absurd.

This sort of ranting has been condemned by responsible people; it is also the politics of the feeble-minded. Worst of all, by the feeble-minded weary. If this sort of moronic stuff is going to be the theme of the 1963 election campaign, Canada will be in deep trouble; "Heaven help democracy".

A point which may get through to the dullest skulls of offenders is that the game of politics played at this level does not pay. Politicians don't believe it; but then consider the disbelief in the words of Cicero. Canadian voters are not merely as sheeplike and trusting as the Romans were; and intellectuals who behaved like intellectuals, to office.

The commonest critic of the Canadian scene recently wrote: "Sociologically Canada have not as yet collected any statistics on the matter, but I would think it unquestionable that the percentage of yahoos in the present House of Commons is higher than it has been in any parliament since Confederation Dawn."

Some M.P.'s seem determined to live up to this description. They should be trying, if they can, to disprove it.

To Your Good Health

Tic Douloureux Strikes Victim With Savage Pain

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: We read your article on tic douloureux a few days ago, as my husband had it for 14 years. Six years ago he had an operation behind his left ear, a neurectomy. It has given him great relief.

The surgeon said my husband would have to take pain for numbness, which he was willing to do. — Mrs. E.G.

Tic douloureux is an affliction of the trigeminal nerve, which is particularly sensitive to pain. The nerve is part of our protection against damaging the delicate organs of the face — eyes, nose, mouth, ear.

When for some reason the nerve is injured or affected it transmits pain signals with great intensity. Tic douloureux has been compared to "a toothache of the face," "a headache lower down," or "an acute attack of sinus that keeps on and on."

It has a tendency to start and stop, which gives the victim a little time to relax between attacks. But it is savage.

I wish that all who are reading this column will write us every time it — but I know from statistically. Some readers, comfortable now, will have it.

"Tic" is not always as severe or lasting as in today's case. Sometimes the nerve corrects itself. Whatever is bothering the nerve ceases to do so.

Alcohol injections are sometimes used to deaden or anesthetize the nerve for a period of weeks, or perhaps even months, in the hope that the trouble will end.

Sometimes it doesn't. Then comes the nerve cutting I mentioned. With the nerve cut out, the pain impulses no longer can reach the brain, and the victim is permanently comfortable.

Dear Dr. Molner: In the matter of "trading pain for numbness," and after continued pain, the latter is a reasonable price to pay.

• • •

Dear Dr. Molner: What causes cold sores? — H.C.C.

A virus invariably the root of a nerve. You'll notice that if a nerve is subject to cold sores, they tend to recur in the same area. Why? Because some nerves are more easily vulnerable to repeated attacks.

• • •

"Dear Dr. Molner: Is jaundice the same as hepatitis? Are people who have had jaundice permitted to donate blood? — Mrs. H.B.

Jaundice is the symptom — the yellowing of skin, eyeballs, etc. Hepatitis is the disease, or any one of the diseases, which inflict the liver and causes the jaundice.

I suppose in time we will be able to decide with certainty whether a person who has had hepatitis (or jaundice) may safely give blood, but as a right, now, we don't know. Therefore it is safest to refuse blood from people who have had jaundice. Why? Because sometimes the virus lingers after the patient has recovered. Whoever receives the blood might get the virus, and the disease, from the transfusion.

• • •

Dear Dr. Molner: A group of us mothers often discuss your column. We would like an explanation when one is sterile and when fertile. — Mrs. Agnes Jones, M.

There are variable factors, but here's the average pattern. In a perfectly regular, 28-day cycle, ovulation (which is the time of fertility) occurs in midcycle, approximately the 12th to 16th day after the beginning of the preceding period.

There is no absolute rule, however. Nerves, a cold, fatigue, any such factor can alter the timing a little. Besides, although the fertile period — which is not long, usually 48 hours or so — is customary in mid-cycle, it doesn't have to be so for all people.

Determining the time precisely is done by taking daily morning temperature, preferably rectally, and watching for a small, temporary drop that's a degree, which signals ovulation and the beginning of the fertile interval.

No Party Can Be All Wise

Ottawa Journal

When Mr. Robert Macaulay, Minister of Economics, was making the Ontario Legislature last week for some $11,000,000 for the operation of his department he was outlining how this money would be spent. He said:

"Let me first state that we do not consider any one of these projects to be sacred; if study or practice show that they are not sound we will not hesitate to discard or modify them — to do it always in the best way to adopt new points or courses of action as circumstances warrant."

Three loud cheers for this, a wholesome contrast to the doctrinaire rigidity and foolish consistency with which so often curse our politics!

Pragmatism can be carried to extremes. But it can never be as bad or as dangerous as the state of mind which professes to have all the answers, which confuses principles with the application of principles, or which thinks it can blueprint politics to meet all the contingencies of tomorrow.

Franklin Roosevelt, who was not afraid to change his mind, used to compare himself to a football quarterback. "If I try a play and it works," he said, "and find that it doesn't work, my job is to call another play tomorrow."

And that, of course, was but common sense. For no man and no party can be expected to have all the answers for everybody's ills — or even for some talk and write as if they had.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

Who really wants peace? Who will be the first to answer readers of the morning paper and watchers of the news analysts of the United States, on the radio and TV, asked the question.

Do these news analysts want peace? What would they talk about if peace came? Do all the ambassadors who talk on TV, coming and going, want peace? How frightened would they resign the fights in defence lets all over the earth, the parades in the streets, the fly palaces, attended every moment by flunkies, secretaries, aides and flying squads of police?

These crowded UN halls, full of politicians from every quarter of the globe, would these gentlemen like to return to the style of living to which they have formerly been accustomed? See these mobs of newsmen, cameramen, swarming at the heels of the notables. Would they go back to the good old days of severing town council meetings?

Who really wants peace? Are we living in a world in the hands of the right people?

The Bread Business

by Mary Moore

(First instalment — Fruit Breads; Second instalment next week — Yeast Whole Wheat Breads).

The bread business is flourishing.

Today I am giving you the recipe for a banana bread which I have just borrowed the Sabbath to make; and a reader's recipe for lemon loaf.

Early next week I will give you my recipe for a newish whole wheat bread (with one-third part white flour). I am freezing the whole loaf to see how it weathers that treatment. When I defrost and slice and taste and toast and taste again, I'll let you know what I think. (I know very well what I'll think, but I must maintain a researchy attitude.)

I froze one loaf of banana bread too but that's not quite fair for fruit breads are invariably better the second day even unfrozen. The frozen loaf was defrosted on the 24-hour unfrozen loaf so that makes it better than better and with butter its better still.

MONDAY

Dinner Menu

Swedish Meat Balls; Buttered Noodles; Red Cabbage Salad; Rye Bread; Peach Cottage Pudding; Cream or Top Milk; Coffee.

BANANA LOAF

1-3 cup shortening, 3-4 cup dark brown sugar, 1 cup mashed bananas, 2 eggs, 1-2 cup milk, 2-3 cup chopped walnuts.

Cream the shortening with sugar. Add the mashed bananas and eggs. (I used 3 1-2 medium sized very ripe bananas and which I beat with the eggs and sugar were well creamed I added the mashed bananas to the bowl and beat them well at high speed until they were blended into the sugar-shortening mixture, then added the eggs.) Sift the flour with salt and baking soda and add to the creamed mixture, alternately with the milk. Add nuts. Bake in a buttered standard loaf pan (8 1-2 x 4 1-2 x 2 1-2") at 350 deg. Fahr. for 1 hour and 10 minutes. Cool on rack; wrap and store in refrigerator. This bread is at its best when 24 hours old.

LEMON LOAF (Courtesy Betty B.)

2 tablespoons butter, 1 cup white sugar, 2 1-2 cup milk, 1 1-2 cups sifted flour, 1 teaspoon baking powder, 1-4 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon lemon flavoring (see note below) 1-2 cup chopped walnuts.

(Note from Emem: I prefer —instead of lemon flavoring— 1 teaspoon grated lemon rind and 1 tablespoon lemon juice.) Mix with the usual creaming method. (Note from Emem: Same as banana loaf above). Put in greased loaf pan in warm place for 30 minutes and allow to stand. Meanwhile mix juice of 1 lemon with 1-3 cup sugar. Bake 1 hour in slow oven. (Note from Emem: between 325 and 350 deg. Fahr.) When slightly cool, spoon mixture of juice and sugar over top of loaf. Slice very thin when cold.

SPEAKING of MANNERS

By PATRICIA LEWIS

DISCUSSING THE DETAFF SIDE

A fellow I know feels he has to have his say about women. Just women in general. He thinks that most women have good manners, but he points out, a number of gals are giving other members of their sex a bad name.

The major reason for his complaint, he says, is that women generally are considered well-mannered. Terms like the "weaker sex" or "gentler sex" have gone to their pretty heads and they are taking advantage of it, he thinks.

It's true that women usually take more interest in the rules of etiquette. They write the greater number of letters to this column, checking on the finer points of good manners. They head up the family social life, as men are apt to be aware of the proper thing to do.

But it's also true that some surrender to base "one first" instincts when out in the world of strangers. Their actions stand out like a sunflower in a field of daisies, primarily because his girl-watching.

But let's let the man speak his piece and be interesting if, perhaps unwittingly, you aren't occasionally guilty of the following catalogue of female crimes against courtesy.

As our man puts it, Knights of the Round Table with lances poised never posed more danger to the unwary than a woman wielding an umbrella on a rainy day. He's tutored ever she handles it like a dagger. Most men hold their umbrellas by their ear as a where they're going and who they might stab. But not all women, he claims.

Women who even when they walk are another sore point with this gentleman, who obviously spends a lot of time watching them. He means the type, who ambles from one side of the street to the other and puts up a block everytime someone tries to pass her, "why can't women walk in a straight line?" he asks.

My friend is a commuter. His current pet peeve is the female who, with almost masculine vigor, plunges into and settles herself into a seat that should seat four. To add insult to injury, she then piles parcels and handbag down between herself and the next passenger, thus unhygienically and unshod tootsies on the opposite bench.

While on the subject, our male researcher also cited as a horrible example the woman who drops babes all over herself and her companions when emptying a cigarette; loads herself down with the assortment of parcels just before meeting a taxi then, expects him to carry every last one of 'em; takes out a lipstick in a restaurant and brandishes it about as though it was a shish-ke-bob; dashes through a door and lets it slam in the face of the newly one behind; borrows a dime to make a phone call then doesn't come out of the booth for an hour or so.

Inconsiderate women, he laments, simply drive him to Distraction, a small town in the interior where he frequently retires to sample the springs, and look out the kink he gets in his neck from shaking his head over the inconsistencies of women.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

Mrs. F.J.—She's forcing too much independence on her child too soon.

Mrs. B.R. — I want Rowena to know she's free to make her own decisions.

Mrs. F.J.—This is the third time Rowena, my friend's daughter, has come to me to help her make a decision. She encourages her to make difficult errand. It has suddenly come to the point where she is taking time, turning to me because her mother is loading her down with too much responsibility too soon. When I mention this to Betty, however, she calls it "pushing Rowena out of the nest," and insists it will develop her resourcefulness.

Yesterday the child, who is 12, appeared at my door with a 10-dollar bill. Her mother had told her to go to a department store and get herself a blouse and a sweater. Rowena seemed disinterested. "I'm a bore with me," she said. "I'm tired of being so independent!" I don't know her. Betty should give her more guidance.

Mrs. B.R. — When I was 12, my mother still held me by the hand crossing streets. She gave me more of a voice in a good deal than Rowena has. I'm sure Betty has her reasons for letting Rowena assume the responsibilities she does. But I force myself to bite my tongue and I suffer terribly in the process.

That's why I want decision-making to come easy to Rowena. I want it to be an everyday experience for her as she grows up. How will she ever learn how to shop, how to handle money, how to travel or what to order in a restaurant if I'm always along supervising her? The worst that can happen is she'll select a real monstrosity. So what? She'll learn that way. Either she'll return it, or she'll have to wear it. Either way, she'll learn. That spells everything.

The Council: Mrs. R.'s method of developing Rowena's resourcefulness is unfortunate to a degree. It has made Rowena resourceful when beating it. She slips over to Mrs. J. and finagles guidance from a grandmother. But after a call, I have it from a mother.

Mrs. B.R.: What Mrs. R. had in mind. We know what she had in mind. It was to impress upon Rowena how much a child could accomplish on her own, to fill her with self-satisfaction, with a sense of worth and achievement. But it's not cold-blooded. It's not "all or none" about parental influence. Betty is not the only point of view it looks a lot like desertion.

Mrs. B.: Babies get thrown into deep water to teach them to swim, and fledglings are literally pushed out of the nest to learn to fly. But it takes years of skilled supervision from expert scientious adults, before a child acquires enough know-how to navigate safely through life's shoals. Mrs. R.'s mother made the mistake of giving her daughter no practice in ventures on her own." Mrs. R.'s method is making the mistake of plunging Rowena into too many independent situations, for which she isn't, strangely, are the same.

Rowena seems just as unsure of herself as was (and is) her mother!

The answer for Mrs. R. is for the modern-day mother to let her daughter chafe a bit, too much dictation than her apron strings. Rowena is a child, she would become a tyranny of passion and self indulgence. Rowena will be better off if she grows up able to make wise decisions, realizing, at the same time that they are subject to a "higher court." Right now, Mrs. R. must serve as that court.

Women Hear Minister Say PCs Will Win

PETERBOROUGH (CP) — Veteran Affairs Minister Churchill told a group of Progressive Conservatives Saturday Prime Minister Diefenbaker will lead the party to victory in the next general election. He was speaking to more than 300 women attending a one-day workshop called The Women and the Party.

He described the Liberal group in the House of Commons as "the rump of once great party—disunited, subject to internal dissensions, unable to do thinking and dissatisfied with its leader.

Premier Robarts expressed a wish to see women of the party elected to the Ontario legislature in the next provincial election.

Mr. Robarts, speaking to women from PC organizations from the counties of Durham, Northumberland, Victoria and Peterborough, made no reference to a coming election.

But he said he had learned from his predecessor as prime minister, former Premier Leslie Frost, to make "only vague mention of elections." Mr. Frost was in the audience.

Mr. Robarts said he has a high regard for the position women occupy in the field of public affairs in general, and politics in particular.

Senator Jose Quart said women's PC associations must seek to offset the effects of a "smear campaign" against Mr. Diefenbaker.

Consultant Advises Women To Stay in Background

VANCOUVER (CP)—Stay in the shadows, lady, and let the man in your life take the spotlight.

That's the advice of Sherle Maguire, a consultant and public relations executive from Denver, Colo.

Twice-married Mrs. Maguire calls herself a creative communication consultant but her specialty is getting the message across to people.

She flies more than 100,000 miles a year to make sure the message strikes home.

Women are a necessity in business, she says, but her advice to women is to stay in the background.

"Be an assistant. You're more use there than up front. A woman's role is one of assisting, helping, soothing and, of course, mothering.

"All women will mother their son, husband or boss, but the important thing they have to watch is the degree of mothering they do."

Mrs. Maguire says she uses her sex constantly to drive a point home.

"That doesn't mean I wear tight skirts, sweaters or plunging dresses."

"It's worked."

"I need terribly to talk to you . . ." is a sinecdotic opening one of the many traps this Colorado businesswoman uses to snare a client.

But she says she never forgets she's a woman, housewife and the mother of a 19-year-old son.

Beach Beauties

By VERA WINSTON

Resort clothes for '62 indicate that young things on the beach, come summer, will look like the flappers of yesterday only a bit more so.

The cotton knit pants have drawstring laces to permit she's a woman, housewife and the mother of a 19-year-old son. "Work hard at your career," she says. "But stay feminine, too."

Nice, too, in black and white, as well as all-white.

Parents of New Debutantes Will Pay a Record Sum

LONDON (AP)—The parents of Britain's new crop of debutantes are expected to spend a record $5,600,000 to launch their daughters into the social season beginning Friday.

The season, as it is called, dates back to the gay days of King Charles II in 1660.

From Friday until early August the debs will be in full swing.

Before the Second World War, about 100 girls a season made their official debuts. This year there are about 600.

So far as parents are concerned, the whole purpose of the season is getting their daughters engaged to suitable young men.

Queen Elizabeth II abolished debutante presentation parties in 1958. Some Londoners sadly called that the twilight of the debs. But the opposite has happened.

Seal Hunters Have Short Over Ownership

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP) — RCMP said Sunday that violence and theft reported on the Gulf of St. Lawrence seal hunting grounds appear to be the result of a misunderstanding.

Police questioned several men here in connection with claims Saturday by seal hunters from the Halifax vessel North Star II, that a helicopter swooped down on the ice floe 45 miles north of P.E.I. and started off 350 of the North Star's pelts.

An RCMP spokesman said William Sumarah Jr., co-owner of the North Star Sealing Company Limited with his father George, also complained that the helicopter crew disarmed two North Star men stationed near a pelt.

The police spokesman said Sunday the matter appeared to boil down to the ownership of the pelts. Both helicopter and vessel crews claim the seal hunts on the Magdalen Islands, southern Prince Edward Island.

CAMPBELLFORD

Budget Figures Of Four Boards Are Accepted

CAMPBELLFORD — At a special meeting of Council, all budget figures presented by the four committees were accepted. The estimates indicated there would be no appreciable change in th 1962 spending of council as compared to last years.

The general government committee forecast an expenditure of $27,040, a decrease of about $750 over last year. The largest saving resulted in the area of arrears of 29,000, rents $1,600, council pay $1,600, general administration $1,000, fire $1,000 and garbage $5,800. The committee suggested an increase of $3 per week in the assistant clerk's salary, and advocated membership in the Lake Ontario Development Association with both being approved.

Grants of $1,000, capital contingency of $1,800, and the library board levy of $3,200 were also approved.

The general services committee (parks, recreation and health) budget is $14,250, an increase of about $1,700 over the actual cost last year. It is planned to put the new property recently purchased into better condition and this, plus the recommendation that Mr. A. Bey, caretaker, be given an increase from $1.00 to $1.00 per hour raised the budget figure.

The Public Works committee budget is $32,000, which compares with a budget of $35,000 last year and probably slightly over $31,000 was spent.

Additional protection under Police was up $1,000, due to increased allowances and salaries for the five departments. Increased to 21 men and without counting on Seymour's participation, was up from $3,315 last year to $6,200 for 1962. Other protection $10,200, includes hydrant rental, lighting of streets, etc., making a total general protection budget of $20,900, an increase of $3,500 over last year's expenditure.

WILL BE OFFSET

An overall decrease in expenditures of about $1,500 will be largely offset by the decrease of $1,200 in the P.U.C. annual grant.

Messrs. G. W. Rutherford and Don Bennett attended council and offered the board explanations asked by members concerning the High School Area budget.

The increase in the transportation budget was questioned. It was up about $7,500 from the 1961 figure. It was said to be due in part to the increase in students at school and is larger than in 1961 at this time and increases will be forthcoming in September. The cost per pupil is up slightly. This brought the matter of a late bus into discussion. It was felt it was not so that country pupils may participate in the after-school activities such as glee club, art, sports, and also that they might receive extra instruction. The late run three days a week for part of the year will cost $1,840. A figure included in Auxiliary services budget for $2,650.

Capital outlay for 1962, a figure of $18,731, was asked to be explained. It includes the cost of the department, such as art, home economics, geography, commercial, building, science, physical education and a major up of the requirements of each new subject, expenditure. In last year $7,468 was spent and this year's budget is $18,731. A large purchase of supplies to equip a large commercial room with 35 desks and chair, 30 typewriters. Bleachers and a system, clocks and other items under this heading, other departments involved in viarable increases were industrial arts with a budget of $1,221 and science with a budget of $1,451.

ENROLMENT CONSIDERED

The matter of expecting enrolment was again considered. In September, 1961, there were 460 pupils a figure now reduced to 408 by those leaving school, but in September of 1962 an increase of 540 is expected.

Mr. Bennett stated that what seemed like a large increase in the 1962 budget is not so large considering that the $32,000 deficit of last year would decrease the actual requirements for this year to about $300,000 and the tax levy required to $136,000. The $31,000 levy of last year should actually have been $118,000 making the increase $18,000.

Both Mr. Bennett and Mr. Rutherford stated that the North-East Northumberland Area School budget compares favorably with similar budgets in the area.

The Red Cross Society was given permission to hold a Tag Day on Saturday, March 31st.

Applications for caretaker for the Town Offices were read and on motion, Mr. William R. Nicholas was employed.

The by-law for 1962 road expenditures was read and the matter of renting the weigh scales to Mr. W. F. Sol was laid over for discussion at next meeting in April.

Reeve H. Free was appointed Council's representative to the L.O.D.A. and the Chamber of Commerce Representative D. R. Mayhew, was confirmed by Council.

The budget of the H. S. Area Board, the Public School Board and the Recreation Committee were accepted.

STIRLING

School Pupils Will Receive Safety Stickers

STIRLING — On the evening of March 30th, the committees members of Hastings County Farm Safety Council convened in the board room of the Department of Agriculture in Stirling. Wesley Farrell chaired the meeting with Sidney MacDonald as secretary.

It was decided to have safety stickers distributed to the schools and from there they will be taken home by the children and it is hoped the parents will have them displayed in some prominent place at the house or barn so all can be aware of the need to be safety conscious.

The Council has colorful place mats and serviettes which they are to distribute free to Women's Institutes for use at their district annuals and other district functions. This idea was adopted as a good way to put across messages of safety on the farms and in the homes. There will be in readiness in about two weeks and it is hoped the three district annual conventions held in Hastings County will avail themselves of this opportunity. They can be procured at the local agricultural office in Stirling about April 15. In this discussion period it was noted that probably some of the traffic warning signs near the schools might be broken. Reeve Kenneth Mumby of Rawdon Township was tasked to check on his township and others will be contacted. It was decided to refer a letter to the clerk of each municipality asking that all warning signs near schools be checked as soon as possible. If damaged then it is felt they should be repaired. The council will provide a speaker on safety for any group which may desire it. It was formed about this worthwhile job.

There will be a competition for 1962 re a design for a place mat. Any individual or group may win the $25 award. The design may be most original and their is great scope for broad casting the department of service. For further details contact the chairman or secretary.

New Argentine President Faces Difficult Task

BUENOS AIRES (AP)—President Jose Maria Guido today neared completion of a patchwork cabinet to get the stalled Argentine government machine going.

The quiet, diminutive, chief executive, who moved into the presidency after the ouster of Arturo Frondizi, has filled all cabinet posts except foreign relations, economy and the three military secretaries that operate under the defense ministry.

Guido's selection of a cabinet—like four days of effort—left him with the support of an unfriendly Congress when it reconvenes May 1. Most politicians turned a deaf ear to a plea for a political truce by the armed forces chiefs who ousted Frondizi and imprisoned him.

Though Guido is a leader of Frondizi's Intransigent Radical Party, the party's central committee was critical of the military domination of the government and declared it "has lost power with Frondizi, we leave with him."

Another headache confronting Guido is whether to recognize the election March 18 of a majority of deposed dictator Juan D. Peron, the issue that brought the crisis.

The majority of the politicians—including the Intransigent Radicals—favor giving the Peronists the five state governorships and 14 Congressional seats they won last March. The military is determined to keep the exiled Peron and his supporters out of political life permanently, the issue behind the largest vote in the March 18 election.

Even if the Peronists were allowed to take their seats in Congress, Guido would still have a majority if the Intransigent Radicals and the Christian Democratic Party opposition Popular Radicals joined together some kind of working relationship. The military showed no sign of getting together.

The Navy, meanwhile, continued to sit quietly on the sidelines, waiting until the new administration has shown a policy before they determine their own strategy.

9th TABERNACLE GROUP

On Thursday, March 29th, the Annual Father and Son banquet was held in the vestry, 9th hall of Tabernacle Church. The Mothers' Auxiliary of the 9th Belleville are old hands in this line of business, but they surely surpassed themselves on this important event. Tastefully appointed place settings on gleaming white tablecloths with a centrepiece of beautiful flowers spelled a warm "welcome" to the nearly 200 guests who were fortunate enough to be invited. The hall is ideal for banquets, bright and cheery.

After the colorful flag-raising ceremony, the "Queen" and goose by Rev. M. Mother-ease, boys and fathers, did full justice to the excellent dinner served by the ladies. Huge platters of turkey, piping hot vegetables, and all the trimmings prepared to perfection were the order. Dessert and all the manner wholly satisfactory to Scouts Who Knows. The Appreciation of all was summed up by Cub Tony Sprackett who declared, "I ate so much that I feel fatted even better than it looked." President Mrs. Rita Lott welcomed everyone and Mrs. Laura Lott assisted by Mrs. Marion Sprackett, mistress of members of the auxiliary can be assured that the thanks and compliments received were well deserved. We can personally vouch for the delicious relish pie.

HEAD TABLE GUESTS

Chairman Lew Andrews introduced the head table: Larry Grey, president Men's Club; Scoutmaster Maxwell Gilbert; Scout Scott McClelland; Pete Sprackett, president District Council; John Barker, Cub; John Andrews; Rev. M. McFarlane; Cub Commissioner Murray Maw; Ted Sprackett, Cub Tony Sprackett; Mr. Archibald; Cub Larry Akey; Gord Russell, A.D.C. Akey.

Scoot John Andrews, proposed a toast to the fathers, thanking them for their material gifts but stressed that it was something more than loyalty, guidance and companionship that were valued most.

Mr. Ted Sprackett, in reply, said they had many reasons to be truly proud of their boys and proud of their Boy Scout affiliation.. He thanked the branch for the fine banquet given the boys.

Scout McClelland in his toast to the church, emphasized that the church was a real part of the Scout movement but also a meeting place for fathers and sons with a common purpose of doing good to others as well as themselves. Rev. M. McFarlane expressed great satisfaction with young people who attend not only on Sunday but at various other day meetings, particularly Boy Scout and Cub meetings. The church is active every day of the week and there will always be room for more. He stated he was proud to be present.

HEADQUARTERS GREETINGS

Mr. Pickering extended greetings and "Good Scouting" from District Council. He mentioned the fine work and times given by leaders. The smart, clean appearance of the boys is a great credit to them and leaders. The president was very pleased to learn that the Scouts were working hard for their Religion and Life awards.

District Commissioner Murray Maw remarked on the very good progress during the past ten years due almost entirely to the faithful leaders and the committee men. Scouting, he went on, makes better citizens and obligates boys in Scout uniform to be a little bit better because of the uniform as proudly worn. Each day Cubs and Scouts can show their good training by their politeness and courtesy to everybody they meet along the way. We only pass this way once and we should make the most of it.

John Babbish introduced the leaders: S.M. Mac McClelland; A.S.M. Wallace Hutchinson; A.S.M. Dr. Walter Ladolph; Akela Roy Pearson of "A" Pack; Scott Scott McClelland, Jack Pitts, Doug Shaw and Ross Rogue was a Cub. Scout and now Leader with nearly ten years' service in the 9th.

Akela Milton Akey of "B" Pack with Akelas Mrs. Akey, Weldon Prindle, Martin Leblanc, Bill Adems, John Lyon and Ted Wallace.

Chairman Lew Andrews paid tribute to the leaders and stated that ten years ago there were five committee men, three leaders and three Cubs. Today the group is 100 strong. He singled out Brad Winters, district secretary, as the busiest man in Scouting. High praise indeed from a man who gives every Saturday afternoon teaching cubs to tie knots and is group chairman and district treasurer.

ENTERTAINMENT

Mac McClelland and Gord Russell had the group working on a real humdinger, having Sweet Little Susie, packing up suitcases and putting their shoulders to Zenith's Concerto.

The Cubs and Scouts presented a very entertaining and instructive. A well planned and well acted performance.

Congratulations Tabernacle that it was a wonderful evening and many thanks for your invitation.

Anti-Aircraft Missile System Is a 'Dog' - - Flood

By HAROLD MORRISON

WASHINGTON (CP) — Congressman Daniel Flood says the Bomarc anti - aircraft missile system is a "dog" and he plans to rub the United States Air Force's nose into it for the next 30 years.

The Pennsylvania Democrat, a sharp critic of the Bomarc, made the statement during a congressional committee hearing after an air force general hastily corrected himself in stating that the Bomarc B model had successfully intercepted a target firing at twice the speed of sound.

"I want to correct my statement regarding March 2 (twice the speed of sound) and have it read "supersonic target," said Maj.-Gen. Sam W. Agee, air force operations director. A copy of the transcript was made public Sunday.

Agee made his correction after Flood described the Bomarc A model as something useful only for shooting down pigeons and demanded verification of the statement that the Bomarc B had successfully shot down March 2 targets.

Agee said the Bomarc A has been demonstrated satisfactorily against targets at heights from 2,500 to 30,000 feet and from a low range of 40 miles to a high range of 300. The Bomarc B is supposed to have a range of 400 miles. Canada will have two squadrons of Bomarc B missiles.

Issues Clearly Defined Says NDP Leader

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) A new political party has been formed in Canada to take to the electorate the issue of a "free enterprise system" versus the "private enterprise society" being perpetuated by the two old-line parties, New Democratic Party leader T. C. Douglas said here Saturday night.

Under the private enterprise system advocated by the Conservatives and Liberals, three-fifths of the nation's economy was controlled by a small group of men "you could put in the corner of a room—an elite that controls the cartels and monopolies of the country," he said.

"Two-thirds of these very few men don't even live in Canada," he added.

Mr. Douglas said monopolies control 45 per cent of consumer prices in North America, and that by going against the law of supply and demand, they increase the cost of living.

He charged national corporations donate 60 per cent of each paign funds to the government party and 40 per cent to the opposition, so that they "couldn't lose. It doesn't matter who wins the elections, because the monopolies would still come out on top."

He said the Liberal and Conservative parties are the "toboys" of the big corporations.

"It is time for the mice to vote for other mice to run their affairs," he said, "and not create time fiddling whether the black cats or the white cats run them."

CATTLE DEVELOPER DIES

SARONVILLE, Neb. (AP) — Albert Hultine, 85, developer of the polled shorthorn breed of cattle, died Sunday at a Hastings, Neb., hospital.

The Easter Seal Campaign opened March 20 when Easter Seals will be sent to all homes in the province. Offering work being done by the Ontario Society for Crippled Children and its associated Service Clubs throughout the province. Service Club members not only raise funds for crippled children's work, but also have a personal concern that can only be given by men and women interested in the care and treatment of crippled boys and girls. The 1962 objective for Ontario is one million dollars.

Error Made By Researcher 'Slipped By'

NEW YORK (AP)—Alger Hiss Sunday night expressed "elation" at a statement made in a new book by former vice-president Richard Nixon. He said he hoped the statement would end clear him of the perjury charges that sent him to prison.

However, Nixon's chief researcher on the book said later in Los Angeles that the statement in the book was "an error made by a researcher" and had "slipped by" Nixon when he was checking the book.

Nixon was the chief congressional investigator of Hiss. In 1950, Hiss, then a state department official was convicted of perjury for denying he passed government secrets to confessed Soviet spy courier Whittaker Chambers.

The Nixon statement which Hiss hopes will vindicate him was first cited in an article by Fred Cook in the current issue of The Nation magazine.

Hiss said they were "flat contradictions" of past government contentions.

In The Nation, Cook wrote that throughout the trials that led to Hiss' conviction the FBI maintained it never had possession of the typewriter on which Chambers charged Hiss' wife had copied government documents.

But Cook quoted Nixon's book, Six Crises, as saying:

"On Dec. 13 (1948) FBI agents found the typewriter . . . on Dec. 15, the critical last day, an expert from the FBI typed exact copies of the incriminating documents on the old Woodstock machine and had them flown up to New York as exhibits for the members of the grand jury to see."

Cook recalled that a government affidavit by late assistant FBI Director Earl Connelley opposing a Hiss motion for a new trial had sworn that the FBI "does not have in its possession and never did have in its possession any typewriter known, believed, or considered to be the Woodstock machine" owned by Hiss.

Hiss, who served 44 months of his five-year sentence and was released in 1954, lives in New York and works as a salesman. He has steadfastly maintained his innocence.

said house. When he got outside, he said, the house was already in flames.

Joan Smith, 18, and three companions were driving past the McDonald house, she said, when "I saw a man and woman come running out of the house. They looked panic-stricken."

TRY TO ENTER

Miss Kennedy drove off to phone the fire department while two of her companions tried to enter the house but were forced back by the heat.

Deputy Fire Chief Harold Lennox, 56, suffered a dislocated shoulder when he fell while dragging a hose and Robert Hewitt, operator of a nearby restaurant, was also injured fighting the blaze.

Mr. Hewitt, an amateur skindiver, ran to the scene with an air tank and mouthpiece. He climbed a small porch and broke a window, suffering a deep cut, as he tried to get into the house. The heat, however, was too intense and he was forced to jump to the ground.

Farmers' Hopes Lie in NDP Says Leader

GUELPH (CP)—Ontario New Democratic Party Leader Donald MacDonald said here Saturday the political bargaining position of the Ontario farmer has deteriorated rapidly since the Second World War and that the only hope lies in the NDP.

"If the farmer has failed to get a fair shake in the past, his chances in the future are even indeed," Mr. MacDonald told the last of four regional conferences of the NDP's farm committee.

He said farm population has dropped from 25 per cent in 1945 to 12 per cent today and will be about six per cent of the total population by 1980.

The farmer must be convinced, he said, "that his best interests can be served only through co-operation with labor in the NDP, rather than with the big business interests and the old parties."

Ottawa Theatre Group Wins At Kingston

KINGSTON (CP)—Le Theatre de la Colline of Ottawa won the Eastern Ontario Drama Festival Saturday night with a performance of Federico Garcia Lorca's La Maison de Bar. Arenda.

Adjudicator Peter Symcox described the play as "very much caviar which takes a fine palate" to appreciate it.

"It was excellently done," he said.

Mr. Symcox praised the actors and said they had succeeded in bringing the spirit of the play to the audience with considerable impact.

Two other trophies went to Ottawa.

Therese May, treasurer of the EDOL, won the Canadian drama award given annually to four or five persons in Canada for distinguished services to the theatre.

She took part in the French play and also assisted in the direction of Louis Pack in Anger, presented by the Ottawa Little Theatre.

WIN AWARDS

Sheila Haney of Cornwall and David Coleman of Kingston, won the Leonard Beaudoe Memorial Trophies awarded to the best actress and best actor in the festival.

The OKLC award, given for the first time this year, went to Marian Webb of Kingston, chairman of the eastern section EODL. The award was given for outstanding contribution to the theatre through the EODL during the current season.

Longer Vacations for U.S. Steel Workers Seen Likely In Pact Ratified by Parties

By NORMAN WALKER

PITTSBURGH, Pa. (AP) — Considerably longer vacations for United States workers generally can be expected if the new terms of the new steel labor settlement are installed in other industries—as they usually are.

The steel pact, ratified over the weekend, extends workers' vacations to the point that in a few years it will be a common thing for a veteran steel industry employee to take two months off every year at full pay.

Longer vacations will mean not only more leisure time but will mean more jobs will be opened up to fill the places of vacationing workers.

Negotiators for the 11 major U.S. steel companies arranged to meet with separate Steelworkers' union bargaining teams today to translate the economic terms agreed upon Saturday into individual contracts. They hope to get finished for signing ceremonies next Friday.

Besides the new vacation benefits, ratified by Union President David J. McDonald as a major breakthrough in collective bargaining, the settlement calls for improved pensions, layoff benefits, grievance procedures, seniority and minimum weekly pay guarantees.

KENNEDY PRAISES

President Kennedy warmly praised the union and industry for meeting his appeal for an early and responsible agreement. He said the settlement was obviously non-inflationary and called it "industrial statesmanship of the highest order."

The new steel pact provides no immediate pay increase for the 450,000 workers in the U.S. basic steel industry now already average $3.28 an hour. But the contracts can be reopened at any time after Aug. 1, 1963, for renegotiation of pay rates, pensions, insurance and up more jobs by increasing other matters.

The basic settlement is for two years, but some features were buttoned down for longer periods, continuing and layoff pay provisions, for example, are not subject to change at least until 1965.

The agreement was reached three months ahead of the June 30 expiration of present contracts. The industry said it was the most moderate in years and the first achieved without a strike since 1956.

ABOUT 10 CENTS

The settlement price was calculated at 3 per cent additional labor cost—around 10 cents an hour. Labor Secretary Goldberg said that with industry efficiency increasing about three per cent annually, price stability seems assured.

The industry said the most important feature of the negotiations had been "the spirit of co-operation and understanding" evidenced by the bargaining teams on both sides.

With heavy job losses due to automation, union negotiators were mainly concerned with increased job security.

The expanded vacation and pension benefits were designed to help ease those job fears and create openings for some long-lifing industry workers already laid off.

TO SHARE TIME

Lengthening vacations is a technique that was adopted to share the available work time because his horse, Edmund, took the Grand National at Aintree, England.

In fact, the first thing the 46-year-old bachelor did after hearing the news was to go out and buy the bread and cheese.

When he got back to his apartment, newspaper men were waiting to see him and his phone was ringing, incessantly.

Mr. Pagnan, machinist-foreman at a Montreal aircraft factory, said then he was going out again shortly and "I won't be reached all week-end."

He had no immediate plans for spending the money Nor was he going to leave his job, "not right away anyway, because I know that my employers might have some difficulty making a fast adjustment to a vacancy."

GETS HER KITTEN

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) The little girl who was rescued after falling over the cliff of the Niagara River gorge Thursday has been given the kitten rescuers promised her when they found her on a narrow ledge after an 11-hour search. April Lynn Hubbard, 5, was presented with the kitten by the volunteer searchers.

Sweeps Winner Had Regular Dinner Sat.

However, that's all Maurice Pagnan had planned to eat for dinner Saturday, and he did not change his mind, even after getting a phone call from a radio station.

The phone call informed him that he had won $147,500 as an alternative to the more drastic step of reducing the stable's workforce by one.

Regular vacations will be changed in this fashion: Workers with three-five years service will receive two weeks off with pay, instead of one, now; those with 10-15 years service will get three weeks off with pay, rather than two weeks with 2½ weeks pay; those with 25 or more years of service will get four weeks off with pay, instead of three weeks off with 3½ weeks pay.

In addition, there will be an extra week special vacation for every ten years of service after Dec. 31, 1960. This means that 25-year employees, for example, will have a vacation beginning next year, and a fifth week vacation beginning Jan. 1, 1964, and so on.

These special extra weeks of vacation can be set up by employees, with the amount of money earning interest and payable to the employees in cash if he wants it.

The industry agreed to put three cents an hour into this "new vacation and pension plan" and to boost the present five cents an hour contribution to the supplementary unemployment benefit plan fund to 9½ cents an hour.

It was agreed an employee will receive a minimum 32 weeks of regular pay in any week whether he is required to work that long or not.

Retirement can be made more attractive, in an effort to open up more jobs, by increasing benefits both for older employees at age 65 and those who were forced by unemployment to retire at an earlier age.

The union, which had substantially abandoned a cost-of-living escalator clause in the 1959 strike settlement, ended it entirely in the new pact, except that more than four cost allowances remain in effect.

The governor said he had decided not to seek an unprecedented fifth term because he needs relief from the physical stresses of the office and he wants to do some writing.

Faubus also said he feels racial integration at the social level would "destroy racial integrity."

Hull Wins Eastern Pro Hockey Title

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The Eastern Professional Hockey League, its final standings already decided, eased to the completion of its regular schedule Sunday with two games that meant virtually nothing.

Before Hull-Ottawa Canadiens smacked down Kitchener-Waterloo Beavers 7-2 they had first place tucked away safely. And the Beavers could say the same for their third-place berth.

Both clubs clash again Wednesday in the opening of the best-of-seven semi-final.

Meanwhile, North Bay Trappers and Sudbury Wolves tied 6-6 at Sudbury.

The Wolves, with a late-season burst, vaulted into the fourth and final playoff spot some time ago. They finished with 66 points, 10 ahead of North Bay. Sault Ste. Marie Thunderbirds had 45.

WIN BY THREE POINTS

Hull - Ottawa completed the schedule with 87 points, three up on Kingston Frontenacs and five ahead of the Beavers.

The Tracks

NEW YORK (CP) — Ridan and Cicada staged a seizing-the-lead stretch duel in the $125,800 Florida Derby Saturday with Ridan winning by a nose. Admiral's Voyage was third in the race, run at Gulfstream Park, just outside Miami Beach, Fla.

Ridan, the favorite, paid $4.70, $3 and $2.20, Cicada $2.70 and $2.20 and Admiral's Voyage $2. Ridan, winner of six races in 12 starts, added $95,800 to his owner's bankroll and now has earned $424,954.

At Aqueduct, Globemaster ran the fastest mile of the young New York racing season and won the $28,750 Westchester Stakes by a neck over Rideabout, who was a nose ahead of Merry Ruler.

Globemaster, now winner of $355,424, paid $3.80, $2.70 and $2.20. Rideabout returned $4 and $2.70 and Merry Ruler $2.90.

Sports in Brief

BAN BOXING

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Professional boxing was kicked out of Tampa Saturday as a result of the injuries suffered by Benny (Kid) Paret in his welterweight title bout with Emile Griffith last week in New York.

The 116th Field Artillery Boxing Commission, official co-sponsor of professional ring events here for more than 40 years, announced it is suspending boxing at Port Homer Hesterly Armory "until the face of this sport changes."

While the commission has never promoted fights, it has served as the co-sponsor that is required by Florida law. It is the only organized body in the city which is a member of the National Boxing Association.

GILBERT JOINS RANGERS

NEW YORK (AP)—New York Rangers of the National Hockey League called up Rod Gilbert Saturday for possible emergency service in the club's best-of-seven Stanley Cup semi-final against Toronto Maple Leafs. Gilbert, 21-year-old right winger with Kitchener-Waterloo of the Eastern Professional League, worked out with the Rangers Saturday. He will not be eligible to play unless another Rangers forward is injured.

WILT CHOSEN MVP

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Wilt Chamberlain received a trophy as the most valuable player in the National Basketball Association Saturday and then went out and proved it as he scored 41 points in leading Philadelphia Warriors to a 110-106 victory over Boston Celtics. The win deadlocked the eastern final playoffs at two games apiece.

TOPS 16 FEET

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP)—John Uelses rocketed to 16 feet, ¾ inch in the pole vault Saturday to become the first man to clear 16 feet outdoors. Uelses, the first to break the so-called 16-foot ceiling indoors last winter at the same height, erased the existing world record of 15 feet, 10½ inches, set in 1961 by George Davies of the U.S.

WINS GRAND PRI X

BRUSSELS (AP) — Willy Mairesse of Belgium, driving the only Ferrari in the race, won the Brussels Grand Prix, run in three heats Sunday. Mairesse finished third in the first heat and won the next two. Each race was at 62.226 miles. Sweden's Joachim Bonnier, driving a Porsche, was second.

WIN QUEBEC TITLE

MONTREAL (CP) — Quebec Citadels advanced to the Eastern Canada Memorial Cup semi-final with a 4-1 victory over Montreal Palestre Nationale Saturday. The Citadels, who won the best-of-three Quebec Junior Hockey championship 2-0, will meet the winner of the Ottawa-Halifax series in the eastern semi-finals.

Hawks Hit Back Hard, Whip Habs 4-1

Fleming Star, Boomer Out?

By LAURENT CHASSON

CHICAGO (CP)—Coach Rudy Pilous told his Chicago Black Hawks to get tough before Sunday night's Stanley Cup semi-final game against Montreal Canadiens and the edict was followed almost to the letter.

The result was a decisive 4-1 triumph over the Canadiens. Chicago's first win in the best-of-seven series after dropping two one-goal decisions at Montreal last week.

The defending cup champions fired up after Pilous' pep talk, were definitely the masters before a noisy partizan crowd of 16,559. They scored twice in the first period and never looked back.

Pilous was obviously satisfied after the game, but warned that "one victory doesn't win a championship."

"Now we have a breathing room. This is one game we had to win. We couldn't let Canadiens take the first three games and expect to bounce back."

HAS NO ALIBIS

Coach Toe Blake of Canadiens, meanwhile, said he had "no alibis."

But Blake was left with something to worry about besides the loss.

It was not immediately known whether the Boomer would be available for duty when Canadiens and Hawks clash again here Thursday night in the series' fourth game.

Geoffrion missed six games with an injury to the inner ear suffered during regular-season National Hockey League play.

The rough-house Black Hawks set a blistering pace from the start and never let up much until the last 10 minutes of the third period but then it was too late for Canadiens.

COUNT IN FIRST

Bronco Horvath and Stan Mikita got the Hawks rolling with first period goals. Bill (Red) Hay added second goal early in the second and Ken Wharram scored the fourth early in the third.

The lone Montreal goal was scored by rookie Gordon (Red) Berenson at 14:27 of the third. Berenson's first Stanley Cup goal.

Chicago might have run up a higher score if it hadn't been for the sparkling play of Jacques Plante in the Montreal net.

Plante, 33-year-old winner of this season's Vezina trophy as the NHL's best scored goalie, pulled Canadiens out of tough spots time and again.

Among his 22 saves were three fine stops against Ab McDonald, an ex-hab.

Glenn Hall of the Hawks had more saves, 30, but most of them were easy.

FUCK WITH 'EM

"The cup was rolling our way," said Pilous. "And that was because of our aggressiveness."

We played as well as we did in the second game, only this time we didn't fall apart in the third period."

In the second game, the Hawks led 3-1 as late as the 12th minute of the third period. But they wilted and Canadiens got a furious three-goal blitz to win 4-3.

"We fell asleep in the first period," said Blake, "and we couldn't recover. They (the Hawks) worked hard and they deserved to win."

PRAISE FLEMING

Both coaches had words of praise for Reggie Fleming, rugged Hawk defenceman-forward who played one of the best games of his young professional hockey career.

Fleming was a going concern all night, being particularly effective in a penalty-killing role. He also took a regular turn on a forward unit with Horvath and Eric Nesterenko.

The Hawks now find themselves in the reverse position of last spring when they upset the Canadiens in a similar semi-final series and went on to win their first Stanley Cup in 22 years.

After three games, Hawks led the series 2-1 last year, but the fourth here, but took the next two, both by 3-2 scores. They beat Detroit Red Wings in the Cup finals.

After Tuesday night's game, the teams travel to Montreal for a fifth game Thursday night. If further games are necessary to decide a winner, they'll be played at Chicago next Sunday night and Montreal April 10.

LEAVE 'EM OPEN

Bill Hay held the right wing on Horvath's stick just inside the Montreal blue-line and Horvath got away with it. Horvath's hard shots to beat Plante from 30-40 feet, one at 9:06 of the first period.

A defence blunder by Montreal led to Chicago's third goal. Montreal's Lou Fontinato lost control of the puck behind the Canadiens net and Ab McDonald pounced on it, in a tickle-pass to Ken Wharram for Hay and into the net.

Chicago Fan Almost Had Stanley Cup

CHICAGO (CP) — An impatient hockey fan tried to lead Chicago Stadium with hockey's prized Stanley Cup Sunday night, but was stopped by police and ushers before he could get out the door.

Chicago police said the fan, identified by police as a Montreal, pushed the cup out of a glass-display case in the lobby of the stadium during the third period of Sunday night's game between Montreal Canadiens and Chicago Black Hawks.

They said he was trying to haul it away when interrupted by two policemen and ushers.

Lieut. John L. Sullivan, head of the stadium police detail, identified the man as Kennedy Kilander, 25, of Montreal. Lieut. Sullivan said Kilander told him that an unidentified Montreal man offered him $400 if he would deliver the cup to him in a few days. Kilander was held for questioning.

Macs Bow To Waterloo In Opener

By GARET ALEXANDER
Staff Writer

KITCHENER — The Waterloo Siskins scored three unanswered goals in the third period here Sunday afternoon to defeat a crowd of 1,400 to shade the Belleville Mac's hopes 5-3 in the first game of their Junior "B" round-robin playdown series.

The Macs expect to play either Woodbridge or Dixie in Toronto this Wednesday night before taking on Waterloo here Friday. Definite word should be available shortly concerning both these games.

With goalie Gord Parker playing a tremendous game in the Macs nets, Belleville held their own over the first forty minutes. They came out of the first period tied 1-1, fell behind 3-1 midway through the second but scored a pair of quickies to lead 3-2 at the end of the period.

The Siskins who found Parker their main stumbling block all day as he turned aside 36 Macs 35-25, buzzed the Belleville nets from the opening whistle in the third.

They tied the count 3-3 when Larry Dietrich, who was crashing the goalmouth, took Oliver's pass out and sunk a quick backhander behind Parker for one of the play. The home club continued their fast scoring two-on-one and three-on-one tactics in rapid succession but the Macs held them off.

Overlapping penalties to Oliver and Clairmont at 7.42 and 8.33 gave the Siskins their chance but they failed to come up with the finish inside the Waterloo blueline. McGuire had the best chance when he got behind the defence but Parker was ready to pass behind his back and in too close to be good for a good shot.

Hunter of the Siskins was in the penalty box when Waterloo scored the winner at 12.26. Terry Oliver, the Siskins' 5'8" scoring ace who fired three goals and set another, was tripped in from his point position. Clairmont's man-and-puck rushed the trigger finger dead in front.

Once ahead, the winners stepped up the pressure and G. Bell, Dietrich, Bardwell's volunteering pass off the boards and scored on a hard slap shot to make it 4-2 at 16.25. Parker was under more difficult saves as time ran out.

Back in the first Dave Smith opened the scoring for the Macs on a three-way play with Wes Ston and Mavety at 2.45 while the Siskins were a man short. Parker made two fine first-period saves with Hunter off shortly after but Oliver got the first goal on a pretty passing play tied it at 9.20. Waterloo outshot the Macs 18-8 in the period.

Belleville, led by the Weston duo and Mavety, carried the play early in the second with Bob Zupan robbed Mavety on three quick shots from his doorstep. Parker pulled a great save to beat Clairmont on the nine-minute mark and Lister robbed Bender when he broke in alone. Parker and Clairmont missed it up in a lively fight at 10.08 and both drew minors and majors. Oliver was also penalized on the play but seconds later Weston was caught interfering and the teams played four aside. Oliver got back to give his club the lead advantage and he scored on a low, hard corner shot at 12.31 to put Waterloo ahead 2-1.

Zupan came 35 feet out of his net to beat Hunter in the race at 17.07 but the Mac winger picked the puck away from the goalie and flipped it into the open net to tie it 3-3.

Belleville went in front at 19.17 when Weston headmanned the puck to Smith who cut in alone for his second marker of the day. Hunter started the play with a good passout from his own end but only the one assist was given.

Then came the third and the Macs just didn't have the legs to stick with the Siskins.

Waterloo drew eight of the game's 15 minor penalties.

Referees: Jack Clancy and Bev Hamilton, both of Hamilton.

Loses Four In Five

Spahn Causing Concern

By MIKE RATHET
Associated Press Staff Writer

What's wrong with wonder Warren?

That question referring to Milwaukee's Warren Spahn arose after the Braves' great lefthander absorbed another pounding, giving up 10 runs in six innings during a 12-6 loss to Chicago Cubs at Mesa, Ariz., Sunday.

Spahn, who'll be 41 in April, has been one of the top pitchers in major league history with 309 victories in a career that started with Boston Braves in 1942. But, with the exception of the season just a week away, Spahn has yet to make a strong showing.

In five outings, Spahn has been the loser four times—he wasn't involved in the other decision—and has been tagged for 28 runs in 28 innings. Against the Cubs the 12-time 20-game winner was belted for a two-run homer by Ernie Banks and another pitch driven out of the park by Lee Thomas.

Brock, however, failed to touch home plate in his tour around the bases after connecting a Spahn toss over the scoreboard. Alert Milwaukee catcher Joe Torre spotted the mental lush, called for the ball and got Brock out.

The top production effort of the pitching season came at Lakeland, Fla., Sunday as Kansas City Athletics rapped 22 hits in a 12-5 victory over Detroit.

In other games, San Francisco defeated Boston 7-4 at Phoenix, Cleveland edged Los Angeles Angels 4-3 at Las Vegas, St. Louis beat New York Mets 7-4 in 10 innings at St. Petersburg and Chicago White Sox whipped Cincinnati 10-6 at Sarasota.

Marr Wins Azalea Open

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Dave Marr rolled in a three-foot putt on the first hole of a sudden-death playoff with Jerry Steelsmith Sunday to win top money of $2,900 in the $20,000 Azalea open golf tournament. Steelsmith, of Glendale, Calif., won $1,900.

The two had tied over the 72-hole route in the 281, seven under par. They finished a stroke ahead of Mason Rudolph, who shot a 73 Sunday and won $1,400.

Jerry Magee of Toronto, whose rounds of 71, 72, 69 and 72 gave him seventh place at 284, earned $800.

Al Johnston of Montreal shot rounds of 70, 74, 72, 72, and Stan Leonard of Vancouver 71, 73, 71, 73 for 288 totals. They earned $583.34 each.

Kid Paret Manager Gets Threat

NEW YORK (AP)—The manager of Benny (Kid) Paret said Sunday he had received threats against his life for criticizing referee Ruby Goldstein.

While Paret, former welterweight champion, remained in a coma for the eighth day, manager Manuel Alfaro said he was told "your body will be found floating in the East River" if the criticism of Goldstein continued. Alfaro did not say who made the threats or how they were made.

Alfaro has said repeatedly that Goldstein let Paret absorb too much punishment from Emile Griffith, before stopping the March 24 title fight in the 12th round with Paret slumped against the ropes.

Goldstein was exonerated of any wrong-doing in the fight in a report prepared by the New York State Athletic Commission for Governor Rockefeller.

Barons Meet Indians In Playoffs

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Cleveland Barons and Spring-field Indians, division champions of the American Hockey League, get the first round of the Calder Cup playoffs off to a rousing start Wednesday. The Barons clinched their title during the weekend.

Cleveland's 6-4 victory over Buffalo Bisons Saturday night nailed down first place. The Bisons finished second and Rochester Americans third in the west. Springfield long ago won the east's pennant, while Hershey Bears finished second and Providence Reds third. The first three teams in each division will participate in the playoffs.

In regular-season finale Sunday night, Cleveland defeated Buffalo 5-3 and Providence turned back Quebec Aces 10-7. The Aces finished last in the east and Pittsburgh Hornets were last in the west.

On Saturday action, Springfield edged Quebec 4-3, Hershey belted Rochester 13-0 and Providence defeated Pittsburgh 7-4.

Five Barons shared the honors in Cleveland's win Sunday night, Fred Glover, with his 40th goal of the season, and Mikol, Ed Mazur, Bill Sutherland, and John Ferguson were the marksmen. Wayne Hicks, Ron Ingram and Ian Cushenan scored for Buffalo.

Crawfords Beat Guelph In Playdown

Belleville Crawford Metals came up with a strong second-half here Saturday night on their way to a 74-56 victory over Guelph in the first game of their OABA quarter-final playdown series.

The Crawfords will play the return game in the two-game, points-to-count series at the OAC gym in Guelph next Saturday night at eight o'clock.

Guelph, with a big but rather slow-moving club, jumped into a 9-2 lead in the game's opening minutes here before the Crawfords started to hit. Belleville enjoyed a 36-31 lead at the half-way mark in the game.

Crawford coach Tom Hookings switched his club's style in the second half and the move paid off with an 18-point lead to take into the second game. Belleville used a zone defence to control the visitors and opened up their lead on fast-breaking plays.

C. Beghetto, Guelph's tall scoring ace, was held to six points in the first half of the game and was kept off the scoresheet altogether in the second half by the winners' zone defence.

Don Haynes topped the Guelph scorers with 18 points while the next high man was Brian Ruddy with seven.

Wilson, Gendron Stood Out

Blues Win 5-4 Toughie From Leafs

By BOB EDGAR

NEW YORK (CP)—New York Rangers finally found some opening in their front range Sunday night and fought their way to a tough 5-4 decision over Toronto Maple Leafs that cut Toronto's lead to one point in the Stanley Cup semi-final.

Forwards Johnny Wilson and Dave Balon each collected a goal apiece for the Rangers but rookie Steve Vickers and defence lady Hebenton contributed the big third-period goals that pulled the Rangers two far out front for the Leafs to catch up. Toronto leads the best-of-seven set 3-1.

Bob Pulford fired the game's last goal at 13:43 of the final session after being stymied by Rangers goalie Lorne (Gump) Worsley all night, along with several other Leafs who often outskated the defenders only to be beaten by Worsley.

WILSON HITS TWO

Wilson scored twice on Johnny Bower in the Leafs' net after Guy Gendron's pickup goal at 1:25 of the second period had tied it 1-1.

Defenceman Tim Horton got the only goal of the first period on a pass from Dick Duff at 5:39. Rangers defenceman Al Langlois had fired a high clearing shot from the corner that Duff moved over to Horton, who nicked Worsley's skate from 30 feet out.

In the second period Gendron came in along the boards on the right side and managed to get a step past Horton just inside the blueline, backhanding one past the surprised Bower into the far corner.

MADE PARTIAL STOP

Wilson's first goal was just 19 seconds later. Taking a pass from Balon, he skimmed one along the ice that Bower got a piece of but couldn't stop. The shot came from just inside the blueline and was partially screened.

With less than a minute to play in the second period—seconds after Worsley had robbed Mahovlich on a hard drive—Wilson snatched the puck away from Leaf defenceman Al Arbour and shot it past Bower from about 10 feet out.

A screen shot by Toronto's Red Kelly at 4:47 of the third period tied it 3-3 but goals by Hebenton and Balon within four minutes of Kelly's tally gave the Rangers the lead they fought to protect from then on.

Horton had stopped a clearing shot with his hands and passed to Kelly, who drilled the puck through several pairs of legs into the net. Rookie Ron Gilbert of Kitchener-Waterloo, called up for the game by the Rangers, had entered the penalty box 17 seconds earlier for interference.

LEAFS FENALTY COSTLY

Armstrong was waved off for elbowing at 4:37 and it was just five seconds later that Hebenton scored. At the face-off Dean Prentice carried the puck into the corner and centred it to Balon in front of the net. He slapped it in easily.

Balon's goal—the one that turned out to be the game-winner—came while both teams were at full strength. Bower had made stops off Wilson and Gilbert in quick succession when Balon picked up the second rebound at the left side and poked in into the open net.

Pulford fired home his own rebound after taking a pass from Bob Nevin for the game's last goal. Coach George (Punch) Imlach pulled Bower with a full minute to play but the Rangers managed to keep possession most of the time.

Barons Call Al Cullen

Cullen, 20, showed an average of 1.2 goals in 50 games with the Barons earlier this year. In that stretch, he had three shutouts while the Barons were winning eight games.

ASKS BOYCOTT

OTTAWA (CP)—Canon Cecil Roach of St. Matthias Anglican Church called on his parishioners Sunday to boycott stores that have announced they will stay open Good Friday.

Easily Defeats Hank

Tiger Lopsided Win

NEW YORK (AP) — Dick Tiger, the British Empire middleweight champion from Nigeria, bested Henry Hank a terrific beating Saturday night to win a lopsided 10-round decision over the Detroit contender. It was the seventh straight winning night for the Nigerian, hottest of all the middleweights.

Tiger immediately put in a bid to meet Gene Fullmer, Terry Downes or Paul Pender. "I plan to go to Boston next Saturday to challenge the winner of the Downes-Pender fight that night," said Tiger, Jersey Jones, Tiger's manager, said he has posted a certified cheque of $2,500 with the National Boxing Association for a title fight with Fullmer, the NBA-recognized champion from West Jordan, Utah.

HAD EASY NIGHT

Tiger, who dropped down 27-year-old Hank with blistering combinations to the body and head, was almost as big a target.

The three officials had him ahead as follows: Referee Art Mercante 10 rounds to none; Judge Leo Birnbaum 9 to 0 and one even and Judge Bill Recht 8-1-1.

Tiger, the 2 - to - 1 favorite, weighed 160 to Hank's 158¾. Hank's record is 39-15-3, Tiger's 45-12-2.

Larks Beat Riders in 'Hockey Title'

OTTAWA (CP)—The score was 3-2, or maybe it was 8-2. Nobody was quite sure after Montreal Alouettes and Ottawa Rough Riders played an exhibition hockey game Saturday.

And, if you aren't too particular, it was really 8-5.

One thing was certain, however: The Alouettes won.

A big difficulty in keeping track of the score was the occasional appearance of two pucks on the ice, plus assorted players rigged out in football helmets and carrying sticks.

The two football teams played it as a benefit for the Ottawa Youth Services Bureau and was attended by Governor-General and Mrs. Vanier and 1,500 fans.

Rough Rider Angelo Mosca was presented with a trophy as the worst player but won plenty of applause for his performance of the twist with Miss Rough Rider, Stephanie Laird.

Westerner Wins Ten-Pin Title

WINNIPEG (CP) — Regina's Ray Glasser staved off a great challenge by Toni Chibi, the 1961 Canadian champion from Leamington, Ont., to win the Canadian 10-pin singles championship Saturday night.

Glasser finished the two-day tournament with a 15-game total of 2,856. Chibi had 2,841.

The four-wheel drive Scout has the power and brawn to go anywhere. Optional front wheel locking hubs convert it in seconds to conventional two-wheel drive for highway travel.

4-way conversion gives Scout unique versatility

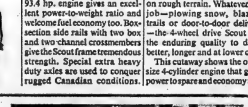
Talk about versatile! It's like getting four vehicles for the price of one! The safe, sturdy standard steel cab is easily and quickly removed in one piece. Doors can be taken off and windshield lowered as required.

Or if you prefer, there's the full length all-steel travel top, for all-weather protection of loads and riders. You will find as many uses for the Scout because it does so many jobs so well.

1 Stripped for action — 2 Doors on—windshield up — 3 Hard-top pickup (standard equipment) — 4 Steel-bodied station wagon

Truck-tough components for tough Canadian conditions

First requirements in designing the Scout were power, endurance and brawn.



The truck type, 4-cylinder 93.4 hp. engine gives an excellent power-to-weight ratio and welcome fuel economy too. Box section side rails with two box and two channel crossmembers give the Scout frame tremendous strength. Special extra heavy duty axles are used to conquer rugged Canadian conditions.

Synchromesh transmission assures easy shifting. Muffler, gas tank and steering controls are all above the frame for safety on rough terrain. Whatever the job—plowing snow, blazing trails or door-to-door delivery—the 4-wheel drive Scout has the enduring quality to do it better, longer and at lower cost.

This cutaway shows the over-size 4-cylinder engine that gives power to spare and economy too.

800 INTERNATIONAL truck dealers sell and service the Scout

Parts and service will never be a problem with Scout owners. They are built in Canada at Chatham, Ontario and are backed by a coast-to-coast network of trained maintenance experts. Why not arrange now for a test drive in the sensational new Scout.

INTERNATIONAL HARVESTER COMPANY OF CANADA, LIMITED - 51-81 BATHURST STREET, TORONTO, ONTARIO - 2336 ST. CLAIR AVE. W., TORONTO, ONTARIO

Traction, power and versatility make Scout ideal for many jobs

The new 4-cylinder International Scout is a totally new kind of vehicle. It's comfortable, attractive and fun to drive. Yet it's the toughest little four wheel work horse ever built.

The Scout can go anywhere. It can plow through wet, sticky mud. It can splash four feet of water across creeks and climb steep hills with ease. And with its short 100 inch wheelbase it's even easier to drive than most cars.

Carefully calibrated springs and shock absorbers soak up the bumps—even after you leave the road behind. The comfortable full width seat has plenty of room for three.

Interior trim is neat and stylish—instrument grouping easy to read. Doors open a full 39 inches. Fitted steel doors seal out the weather, while the really effective heater keeps passengers cozy in any weather.

It has a practical 5-foot box to earn its keep by hauling many sized loads. Special equipment like a winch, snowplow, or power take-off makes it the perfect all-round workhorse for contractors, utilities, farmers and service station operators. It's the greatest vehicle for holiday fun too. Campers, fishermen and hunters can take the 4-wheel drive Scout to unspoiled wilderness spots they could never reach in a car.

The Scout is the most versatile vehicle ever designed. It converts quickly into four different kinds of units, to do a hundred-and-one different jobs.

Contractors can travel to the roughest job site in the Scout and use it for hauling materials and men.

Service Stations will find the Scout ideal for service calls and plowing. Attractive styling will build station prestige.

Farmers will welcome 4-wheel drive for muddy lanes and in-the-field chores. Capacity is ample for most farm loads.

Campers and Sportsmen will have room off the beaten track in style with Scout 4-wheel drive...

British Television Program About Canada's Problem As U.S. Partner Criticized

By ALAN HARVEY

LONDON (CP)—Visiting Canadians sometimes complain that they suffer from a sense of "displacement" in Britain.

"It's the British newspapers," they say. "There isn't any news in them."

What they usually mean is that they can't find the National Hockey League scores. Canadian news generally makes little impact on British papers; Canada remains for most Britons a distant image decked in maple leaves and swathed in vague goodwill.

Suddenly things have changed. Instead of being too little in the news here, Canada suddenly looms large—for some too large.

The biggest stir has been caused by a British television program portraying Canada's problem as the junior partner of a continent dominated by the United States.

The hour-long show, viewed by many Britons, concentrated on the question of how Canada can "live with" the American giant on doorstep and still develop a distinctive personality.

AMERICAN TUNES

The cameras of a commercial TV company — Associated-Rediffusion — probed into the communities of Guelph, Ont., and Hyacinthe, Que., recording along the way such incidental intelligence as the fact that only 3 of the tunes in a St. Hyacinthe juke box are in French, the rest being of American origin.

The program, Living With a Giant, made a considerable impact among Canadians in London. Reactions ranged from sharp interest to mild criticism and angry bewilderment.

George Drew, Canada's high commissioner, discussed the program in unflattering terms at a dinner gathering of London newspaper, The Daily Mirror, promptly dubbed him "the angry Canadian."

Drew said the show was "silly trash." He objected to "sloppy, gum-chewing" youngsters being considered typical of Canadians. Himself a native of Guelph, he noted that the stone fronts of Guelph's main street stores were constructed 100 years ago by Scottish stonemasons, rather than in an effort to create American "garishness" as the program had indicated.

DREW DRAWS VIEWS

Drew said the show also was factually at fault in saying that automobile production at Windsor, Ont., is entirely an American affair.

Details apart, the burden of his complaint was that the TV production exaggerated Canada's dependence on the United States.

In private conversations, a reporter found that a number of Canadians shared the high commissioner's views.

Some went farther and saw the show as another move in a sinister, typically subtle, British campaign to jettison the Commonwealth and plunge boldly into Europe.

These Canadians are experienced men who would not depend to the street-corner level of labelling Britons as "Limeys." Their disenchantment arises out of a sense of outrage about what they regard as Britain's cavalier approach to the Commonwealth. They seek what may be tortuous explanations for commonplace actions.

One reproach heard, for instance, is that Prime Minister Macmillan never goes to London airport to meet Prime Minister Diefenbaker — whereas Diefenbaker is always on hand to welcome Macmillan when the British prime minister goes to Canada.

SHOW FAIR-MINDED

Some Canadians found the program fair - minded, though they said it tried to cover too much in too short a time.

No complaints came from a three-man panel that discussed the program some days later. Members of the panel were Bob Elson of Time magazine, a native of Cleveland who was raised in Canada, British TV and radio broadcaster Gerald Nabarro and author Mordecai Richler who saw Canada gradually succumb to American sway. Green and Richler formerly lived in Montreal.

The lively reaction here has prompted observers to ask whether Canadians are hypersensitive. They note a final irony — the program was produced for a company that seeks to foster international understanding by showing what countries are really like.

The uncharacteristic burst of interest in the Canadian psyche coupled with a rash of articles in the British press. These include a five-part series in the Manchester Guardian, feature articles in The Daily Telegraph and a lengthy editorial in The Times about Canada's need, in the seventh decade of the 20th century, to review her role in the world.

West Newsmen Not Allowed To Attend Trial

HAVANA (AP) — The mass trial of 1,179 persons captured in last April's futile anti-Castro invasion has been told that faulty intelligence, not poor support by United States, led to disaster.

Supporting Castro's charges that the United States was behind the never showed up, and invading forces were told they were sailing into an uninhabited beach only to run into troops and tanks, and a total of 20 warplanes in the military trial in Principe prison.

Havana newspapers published the letter, said to have been written by Pedro Luis Diaz Lanz, a pilot, by Jose Perez San Roman.

Western newspaper men have been barred from the trial and have had to rely on reports by government - controlled press. The text of the letter purported to have the letter written by San Roman:

"The troops were given false and inexact" information that the border Castro's army was demoralized, that it had only old tanks, that the invaders would find only militia unwilling to an uninhabited beach, and it would take Castro three days to react.

FOULED UP AT START

The invasion was senighmare fouled up from the start, he first wave to hit the beach found not the militia reported, invasion equipment would not work because of "simple and fragile" construction.

Supply ships vanished beyond the horizon after one was sunk by the Cuban Air Force, which quickly established air superior. Many landing supplies and supplies must have fallen behind Castro lines.

Instead of an uninhabited beach, the invaders ran into a "town with several thousand" and a communication link with Havana, and the alarm was sounded swiftly.

The second day dawned with San Roman's force still without communications or medical supplies. The landing force suffered considerable casualties from Cuban troops and tanks, there are no air support materialized for their heavy machine - guns and never received any ammo.

With the first day's landings, diversionary invasion also began in the province in the west, and Orientale in the eastern section of the east. There were rumors of such invasions at the time, but the letter said neither ever came off.

On the third day of the invasion, a twin engined transport landed on an airstrip prepared by the invaders. It was said to have loaded some crates, but took off without picking up any of the wounded.

"He (the pilot) left, leaving us to our last hopes behind," the letter said.

FORCED INTO SWAMPS

When Castro's armored forces drove to within 500 yards of the invaders' last - ditch position, San Roman and a group of them slid to the swamps, where they roamed for six days.

"Hunger made us come out to one of the roads crossing some thickets in search of crabs," the letter said. A patrol captured San Roman.

The indictment charges the invasion was prepared by the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency.

Unarmed Police Hired to Guard Three Freighters

ST. CATHARINES (CP) — A spokesman for Island Shipping Limited said today it has hired private policemen have been hired to guard the freighters Wheat King, Northern Venture and Rhide Marianne.

The three ships are manned by crews of the Canadian Maritime Union (CLC). Last year the Wheat King and Northern Venture were involved in incidents as a result of a representation dispute between the CMU and the Seafarers' International Union (Ind.).

The CMU is attempting to replace the SIU, which has contracts with many Great Lakes operators. At present it has taken over only the three vessels to be guarded.

Island Shipping spokesman said 10 of the private police have been hired by a Montreal agency, have arrived at Port Weller for duty with the Northern Venture. He said they would patrol the ship and the dock area. Three men on duty each shift. The Northern Venture is expected to leave for Port Colborne later today.

The other men were assigned to the Hilda Marjiance, which cleared for Toronto Sunday. The Wheat King is reported to be in Halifax and is not yet will be unguarded.

Patrol reports said the private police were armed with .38 calibarnes police said today they will be equipped with two-way radios and walkie - talkies and are wearing blue Browne berets.

When the three ships are in full operation, the spokesman said, four men will be assigned to each.

Science Now Shrinks Piles Without Pain Or Discomfort

Finds Healing Substance That Relieves Pain And Itching As It Shrinks Hemorrhoids

Toronto, Ont. (Special)—For the first time science has found a new healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids and to relieve pain and itching. Thousands have been relieved with this inexpensive ointment. In the privacy of their own home without any discomfort or inconvenience.

In one hemorrhoid case after another, "very striking improvement" was reported and verified by doctors' observations.

Pain was promptly relieved. And while gently relieving pain, actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

And most amazing of all—this improvement was maintained in cases where doctors' observations were continued over a period of many months!

In fact, results were so thorough that sufferers were able to make such statements as "Piles have ceased to be a problem!" And among these sufferers were a very large number of seemingly hopeless conditions, some of even 10 to 20 years' standing.

All this, without the use of narcotics, anesthetics or astringents of any kind. The secret is a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne)—the discovery of a famous scientific institute. Bio-Dyne is now made available in this wide use for healing in rectal tissue on all parts of the body.

This new healing substance is offered in suppository or ointment form called Preparation H. Ask for Preparation H suppositories or Preparation H ointment with special applicator. Preparation H is sold at all drug stores. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded.

Dam to Hold But Flooding Is Expected

LAC MEGANTIC, Que. (CP) Residents of the Chaudiere River Valley fear the threat of large-scale flooding today from water around the Gayburst dam but the dam itself wasn't causing the immediate danger.

The Quebec Civil Protection Service issued a warning Sunday night that a channel or channel early today to allow excess water to flow from the dam probably would cause the river to overflow its banks. The Chaudiere runs some 85 miles north from Lac Megantic and the Gayburst dam to the St. Lawrence River near Levis, Que.

Water was expected to start flowing through the channel at a speed of 10 miles an hour. The Civil Protection Service warned the area's 10,000 residents to listen to their radios for flood warnings.

Wet snow fell through the area as most of the night and temperatures hovered around the freezing point.

Water level in the dam was 11.97 feet above sea level—13 feet from the danger mark for the earthen dam declared in Quebec Superior Court Friday by Rene Levesque, Quebec natural resources minister, in the legislature two weeks ago.

EVACUATION POSSIBLE

Fear was expressed at the time that Chaudiere Valley residents might have to be evacuated if the dam burst and some 4,000,000 cubic feet of water poured down the valley to the St. Lawrence River.

Water flowing through the channel is expected to create a rise in the Chaudiere's water, up to eight feet and overflow its banks.

Meanwhile, some 2,700 army personnel were on standby orders at Camp Valcartier near Quebec City, ready to move into the area to assist in any evacuation which might take place. Army engineers have been dynamiting ice in the Chaudiere River to clear the path for current ice jams when the spring thaw reaches its maximum in the north.

The Chaudiere River—a perennial problem because of its northerly flow—has its source at Lac Megantic.

ESCAPES CRASH

ROSEVILLE, Calif. (AP) — Dr. Virgil Comstock, 40, escaped unscathed injury Sunday when his light plane crashed on railroad flat cars in the Roseville switchyard. The plane skidded over five flat cars, coming to rest on the fifth. Comstock was thrown clear before the plane burst into flames.

Prime Minister Determined To Complete Present Plan Before Going to Country

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CPE — Prime Minister Diefenbaker is reviewing the record of nearly five years in office and charting a course for the next five years.

He is determined, and associates say, to complete the present program with fulfilment of all the 1957 and 1958 election promises that can be acted upon.

The program being formulated for the future—which is dependent, of course, on the result of a general election expected this year—will have Canada's centennial in 1967 as the focal point.

The government's election platform will envisage what Canada can be like a century after the Dominion was brought into being with its first Conservative government under Sir John A. Macdonald.

Mr. Diefenbaker, now 68 and as vigorous physically and politically as ever, has given every indication of impatience to get on with the election.

WANTS ELECTION ISSUE

What is holding him back, political observers say, is the desire to complete the work of the present session of Parliament, meanwhile letting the opposition parties have full rein to debate him with a controversial issue.

The government completes four years in office with the biggest majority in Canada's history on March 31. The Conservatives first came to power in June, 1957, with less than a clear majority.

The party's landslide victory March 31, 1958, gave it 208 of the 265 Commons seats, in four years the net result of deaths, resignations and byelections has been to reduce Conservative membership to 202. There are 4 filled in byelections Sept. 10.

The constitution limits Parliament's life to five years. Thus the prime minister could call an election any time up to March 31, 1963, but there is strong belief it will be this spring or next fall.

Mr. Diefenbaker has been pushing over his promises made and unfulfilled. In his speeches he has been dwelling on the record levels of national output, industrial production, employment and consumer spending.

Liberal Leader Pearson, on the other hand, says the government has no organized program to stimulate economic growth, no effective plan to combat chronic unemployment, no coherent policy to deal with Britain's probable entry into the European Common Market and no intelligible defence and nuclear arms policy.

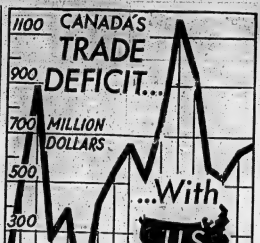
Mr. Diefenbaker put Conservative policy in a nutshell in a Quebec City speech in March, 1957, when he was going into his first campaign as party leader. "The guiding principles of the party should be those of a reforming and critical conservatism," he said.

He called for national unity and stood adherence to the constitution, mobilization of the creative capacity of Canadians, widened horizons of responsible free initiative and enterprise, improved social security for the aged and needy and denial by law of injustice and exploitation.

"I now look back over five years and say to you these things we have done," Mr. Diefenbaker said in another speech in Quebec City in March this year.

At the top of the list of accomplishments he puts scrupulous regard for the constitution, passage of the Bill of Rights and national resources development in co-operation with the provinces freed from financial domination by Ottawa.

The Liberals say the government has given the country unsteady leadership, lacking in straightforward, high employment and high unemployment, general prosperity and regional depression, expansion and nationalism.



Mr. Diefenbaker has certainly been the most travelled prime minister. His office long ago gave up trying to keep track of the mileage. Modern transportation and communications enable him to make flying visits to any part of the country on short notice and have his speeches broadcast nationally.

LAWYER PERSISTED

Through it all the former Saskatchewan criminal defence lawyer has demonstrated remarkable stamina and great recuperative powers. Long nights of travel are followed by early morning conferences.

He has not permitted much pursuit of his favorite pastimes —duck hunting and fishing—except for long weekend hours at his Gatineau district summer home 15 miles north of Ottawa.

One other feature that entered his life in the last year has brought relaxation from the tensions of the day, friends report. That is his golden Labrador, Happy, now a romping and playful half-grown dog, was a Christmas gift from Mrs. Diefenbaker.

STEADY TRADE DEFICIT — Canadian imports from the United States exceeded exports to the U.S. by $678,000,000 in 1961, continuing a trend in trade deficits in every year since the war. The 1961 total was slightly higher than the $636,000,000 deficit in 1960 and represented the tenth straight year it has stayed above $500,000,000. In 1956 it soared to a record $1,167,800,000. Graph shows deficit in commodity trade since 1945. (CP Newsmap).

Contact Lenses Have Changed Outlook of Many Canadians

By DAVID SCOTT

TORONTO (CP) — Tiny corneal contact lenses which float almost invisibly on tears in the eye have changed the outlook of thousands of Canadians.

The idea of corrective lenses used in this manner is 45½ years old but in the last 15 years scientific advances have made contact lenses big business.

Some 300,000 Canadians have been fitted and about 2,000 are shedding their spectacles each year in favor of the miniature sight aids.

In the United States there are 3,500,000 wearers and the industry is winning about 500,000 converts annually.

Leonardo da Vinci conceived the idea of contact lenses in 1508, but the first one successfully ground to a refractive prescription was made in 1889.

The modern lens is about the size of a cigarette tip. It weighs 1-900 of an ounce and is about 10-1000 of an inch thick.

NOT EASILY BROKEN

The lenses will not break unless hammered or ground underfoot. They can be scratched, but unless major damage is done there is virtually no difference in the vision they provide because tears fill in the scratches.

A Toronto optometrist estimates that only five per cent of his patients are unable to wear contact lenses. Some have allergic reactions or a tendency for the conjunctiva (mucous membrane lining of the lids) to be easily irritated.

Others have abnormally tight eyelids, eyes which do not water enough, or a chronic dandruff-type eyelid condition.

Of the per cent who can wear lenses, some have optical problems which cannot be corrected by contact lenses.

Corrective lenses for color blindness or acute astigmatism (severe uneven characteristics of the cornea) have not yet been designed, but opticians hope to overcome the latter problem soon.

Some conditions, such as scarred or uneven corneas and keratoconus (pointed cornea), can be treated best by contact lenses. The lenses give a more even curvature to the cornea in these cases than spectacles.

Contact lenses also retard the progress of myopia (short-sightedness).

Biscuits of the plastic are cut from a rod, ground first on the concave side, and then on the convex surface. During this process the refractive correction is made in the lens, each of which is tailor-made for the individual eye.

Fitting of the lens is done by opticians who use additional equipment to smooth and adjust the lens to suit the individual patient.

The price for expertly fitted lenses ranges from $120 to $300, the higher cost going for bifocals.

CLING TO EYE

Contact lenses are held to the eye by capillary attraction—an adhesive force set up by the fact that the lens fits the eye's contour and is held to it by a thin layer of tears.

When a custom-made lens is placed on the eye, it clings in place and when properly fitted can not be accidentally dislodged. When the eye turns, so does the lens. They are removed by gently stretching the eyelids, and literally blinking them off.

The only sensation felt by a wearer is that of the eyelid closing over the thin lens. A inch bump caused by the smooth edges of the lens.

Numerous hockey, football and basketball players have adopted contact lenses which cannot be broken, knocked off, and which do not have restrictive frames blocking side vision. They can be cleaned with a

Mother Loses Hard Earned Money

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS—You say when boys hit you or throw snowballs at you they are pelting you with love, but this boy (who is very shy) doesn't ever hit anybody unless he is mad, which is very seldom. What does this mean?—WORRIED.

* * *

DEAR WORRIED:— Hitting people is quite different from a playful snowball fight. If he ever hits you it's a good guess that he doesn't feel friendly; also that he acts childish.

If he likes you, he wants to be where you are. If you show him you like him too, he'll manage it, shy or not.

For a private reply you need to enclose a stamped self-addressed envelope.

* * *

DEAR DORIS—On my way home from work I lost my change purse. It contained $23, and nine bus tickets. I looked for three-quarters of an hour, but no result.

I work housecleaning and I earned it the hard way. I phoned the radio station and police stations, but no result. I always thought there were honest people in this world, but I am giving up hope.

Do you think there is still any hope.—A VERY DISAPPOINTED MOTHER.

* * *

DEAR VERY DISAPPOINTED:—If you haven't any news by now, better give up. I am sorry, because that much money is a great loss to you.

But there are still honest people in the world. My nephew lost his wallet in London, England, when he was on a trip. Every cent he had with him was in it. And some kind soul turned it in to the office of the "underground."

So keep believing!

* * *

TO B. FAIR:—I appreciate your comments, but I cannot publish them unless you identify yourself. Your name will of course, be kept in confidence.

* * *

TO WORRIED MOTHER:—If the security was for a loan, the mortgagee still has a right to the money. If the money was put up for a bond for your son-in-law, it should be returned to him when he leaves the employment of the company.

Highways Only Nova Scotia Link With Mainland

Receding Flood Waters Still Close Railroad

◆ HALIFAX (CP)—Water levels were dropping today in many Maritime areas after a 5-day weekend floods, but in other places flooding persisted and more damage was feared.

In the eastern New Brunswick town of Sackville several businesses were flooded. The residents of the university town of 3,000 got through the early day but were cautioned not to use their drinking water supply without boiling it.

Two additional highways were declared impassable in Nova Scotia and the New Brunswick-Nova Scotia border area, bearly closed Saturday by weekend rainfalls that surpassed five inches in Amherst, Moncton and Saint John, N.B.

The warm rain coupled with a heavy snowfall of a foot or more piled two feet or deeper in some areas, also knocked out the CNR's Ocean Limited between the two provinces.

The railway was still closed early today, but the Trans-Canada Highway route from Amherst, N.S., to Sackville was receding waters in Oxford. The Nappan River crested at 10 a.m. and reached six feet Monday.

Previously the north shore area had been cut off from the border area to central Nova Scotia when one way traffic was permitted on a bridge, that had been threatened by the swollen Nappan River.

On No. 2 Highway, from Truro to Amherst, the Parrsboro, N.S., area was completely blocked by washouts and fallen trees.

It will be days before northern Nova Scotia and eastern New Brunswick return to normal. A dozen bridges were ripped from their moorings. Main highways are flooded and washed out. The main CNR line is impassable and passenger trains will have to wait for the water to recede before starting the job of patching the flood - riddled Halifax-Montreal main line.

Hardest hit cities were Moncton and Sackville, N. B.

WATER, POWER BIT

"It's pretty tough huge," a police officer in Sackville, said early today. Most sections of the university town were without power and drinking water was contaminated. Streets were covered with up to six feet of water. Sanke houses had three to four feet of water in their lower storeys and 15 families were evacuated from one section. At Moncton the water was beginning to recede early today after reaching a peak of 20 feet above normal.

The flooding affected all low areas in the Maritimes from Moncton, N.B., to northern Cape Breton.

The flood's only fiction was when a train got drowned Sunday night when she was swept into Wreckhouse River in Cape Breton. The CNR reported 26 miles south of track in northern Nova Scotia and another 12 miles of track were either washed out or under water so deep that trains couldn't operate. Freight movement was stalled.

KELSO ROBERTS ON RECEIVING END OF CHARGES

Sizzling Session Of Legislature

TORONTO (CP) — Attorney-General Roberts Monday was on the receiving end of charges, denials, explosions in a sizzling session in the legislature.

Said Mr. MacDonald: "As long as this government does nothing about one of its own members, the province broken laws by the member for Russell is bringing disrespect on this House."

Mr. Roberts demanded he withdraw the statement, especially since Mr. Lavergne was, too, in the House.

ITS REPORT

Mr. MacDonald said a report on irregularities in Eastview when Mr. Lefebvre, a member was mayor had documented the case against Mr. Lavergne.

Mr. Roberts said the report had been studied by a police inquiry and he also had more than had against an Eastview official, Mr. Lavergne. Mr. MacDonald for speaking out against Mr. Lavergne in the member's absence from the House of Commons. Opposition members that Mr. Lavergne hasn't been in the House for more than 10 minutes this session.

Interjected Mr. Roberts, amid a chorus of interjections: "We've been to the wars (Mr. MacDonald) of a lot cause and spent force long enough. Let's get on with it."

Vernon Singer (L—York Centre) said he also felt more than one person should have been charged in the Eastview matter, "You ought to be ashamed of yourself, as a lawyer," Mr. Singer told Mr. Roberts. "This is a flagrant violation ..."

'I ACCUSE'

"I accuse the attorney-general here and now of not doing his duty, and if he had any sense of responsibility he would have resigned long ago," said Mr. Singer.

"I treat that with complete contempt," Mr. Roberts replied.

3-Year Marriage Between Liz And Eddie Has Gone on Rocks

NEW YORK (AP)—The three-year marriage of Elizabeth Taylor and Eddie Fisher is broken, and they'll seek a divorce.

The news came in a brief announcement Monday night by Miss Taylor's publicist. Her lawyer had summoned him to Reno.

"Elizabeth and Eddie Fisher announce that they have mutually agreed to part," the announcement said. "Divorce proceedings will be instituted soon."

The announcement ended weeks of suspense built up by Miss Taylor's departure for Rome to Cleopatra co-star, Richard Burton, and Fisher's charging that a break was imminent.

Now there remain other questions: Will Burton, 36, become the 30-year-old actress' fifth husband? What of his wife, Sybil, and their two children, now in London?

Burton, Welsh-born actor who plays Marc Antony opposite Miss Taylor in her film role as Cleopatra, has been escort-

New South Pacific Radar Can Identify Missile Load

WASHINGTON (CP) — The United States has quietly erected one of the world's most powerful radar fences on a remote South Pacific island in another massive effort to identify differences between nuclear - loaded intercontinental missiles and decoys.

This identification process, now removed from the blue-print to the field, is considered by defence authorities to be a major factor in development of an effective anti-missile system (Nike-Zeus anti-missile missile). The anti-missile detection system, the radar must be detected at heights of 76,000 feet, to catch an approaching missile just before it prepares to re-enter the atmosphere to reach its target.

3 Canadians Unable to Speak French, English Hold Court

OTTAWA (CP) — Three unemployed Canadians who can't speak English or French are virtually holding court in an oak-panelled conference room of Parliament's East Block.

The three are Eskimos, residents of Canada's vast Northwest Territories who are here as members of a special northern affairs department Eskimo delegation to Ottawa to discuss the problems of the native residents of the North.

Another Eskimo, Victor Allen of Inuvik, who says he represents the whole people, speaks English fluently.

The others, rely on interpreters—Simeonie Kopapik in a pretty Eskimo girl—to advise them of the proceedings and answer for the meeting chairman, Deputy Northern Affairs Minister Gordon Robertson, if they express views themselves, as a lawyer." Mr. Robertson said. "This is a flagrant violation ..."

Nattily dressed in sports coats and business suits, they speak hesitantly but with a certain wisdom.

The eldest is Johnnie Inukpuk, 51, elected by the people of Port Harrison to represent them at the meeting. Inukpuk is gaining international fame as a carver of soapstone figures.

At one point, Dr. J. S. Wilt, of the department's northern health services division introduced family emergency medical kits for treatment of Eskimos in isolated areas.

Mr. Inukpuk agreed it was a good idea. One of his children had died four years ago from medical aid was being sought.

PC Member's Present Right To Sit Said Not Affected

TORONTO (CP) — Conservative member John Fullerton's present right to sit in the Ontario legislature is not affected by Monday's act of the legislature which made it an offence for the attorney - general's department - to be a member, more than 10 years of age, of the attorney - general's department submitted Monday.

Elliott Pepper, legal counsel in the department, made the statement in a report to the standing committee on privileges and elections, took up acquisitions of Mr. Fullerton and Elmer Sopha (L — Sudbury) from Mr. Fullerton's law partnership, Algoma - Mantoulin since 1959.

Mr. Sopha accused Mr. Fullerton of violating the Legislative Assembly Act by being a partner in the firm of Mantone Contracting Company, which received, through Mr. Fullerton, from the government between 1960 and 1961 for salvage operations after fire whipped through some 600,000 acres of timber in the Mississagi area of northeastern Ontario.

The act forbids members from being directly interested in a contract with the government, but excepts those who hold timber-cutting licences on crown land.

Mr. Pepper said the wording of the act is "not very precise" and the contract must be held "indirectly" by the member. Since no election had been held after the alleged violations, Mr. Pepper said, the present status of Mr. Fullerton will not be affected.

His remarks were not challenged by those present.

Terrorists Machine-Gun Moslem Hospital Patients

ALGIERS (Reuters) — Right-wing terrorists machine-gunned bed-ridden patients and blew up part of a hospital here early today.

The terrorists, about 15 members of the European Secret Army Organization, arrived in four cars outside a private clinic in the Mustapha quarter of Algiers and opened fire on it with machine-guns.

Then they stormed into the clinic, shooting at Moslem patients as they broke down doors. While their victims lay moaning, they planted a massive plastic charge weighing more than 20 pounds in the clinic doctor's office.

FULTON SAYS BILL IS NOT ANTI-AMERICAN

Firms Must Tell Extent of Control

OTTAWA (CP)—Justice Minister Fulton says no nation "which calls itself sovereign" can be careless about foreign control of vital segments of its economy.

He told the Commons Monday that while Canada welcomes foreign investors, it must insist on "a clearer picture of the extent and effect of foreign control."

Mr. Fulton was speaking on a government bill—later given second reading, or approval in principle — to compel companies and trade unions to disclose certain basic financial details of their Canadian operations.

Much of the data now is unavailable. The bill would require a case of foreign-owned firms and unions.

The information will be divided into two categories: Confidential and non-confidential. The non-confidential information will be made available by the government to the Canadian public.

USE FOR CANADIANS

The justice minister said the need for such information was shown by the basic tenet of the government that Canada's economy should be developed and used primarily for Canadians.

Mr. Fulton rejected repeated opposition demands that the bill be referred to the commons committee for detailed consideration.

Maurice Caron (L — Huil) charged that MP's were being asked to "sign a blank cheque" in the reaction of outsiders, including labor and business representatives.

Mr. Fulton replied that the bill was "simple and straightforward" and "in language much more intelligible than the gutter than to the legislature."

"No doubt the attorney-general will have a very considerable strain and this evening's remarks," Mr. Brewin said.

Opposition counsel Donald F. Wilson said that recently he had received a letter from the attorney-general declaring that Mr. Hogg should be called as a witness and suggested the commissioner should consider the appropriateness of his appearing as counsel. Mr. Hogg is a former Crown Attorney for York. He left the position at the attorney-general's department in 1960 and later made a speech on crime before the county meeting.

Mr. Justice Roach said he had read in the press the report of the attorney-general's statement "with some apprehension as to the effects they might have."

"Knowing the attorney-general," he added, "I cannot conceive that he intended to interfere or embarrass me in the discharge of the duties which after some hesitation I have felt I must undertake."

He learned last week of some objections the attorney - general was raising concerning Mr. Hogg appearing as counsel.

APPROVES HOGG

"I took this under advisement and reached the conclusion that there was nothing improper in Mr. Hogg appearing as counsel."

The commission said it had been asked that the attorney-general be subpoenaed to appear as an ordinary witness but in a fellow member of the staff — gambling squad, Robert Wright, Wright is to be called as a witness.

Roach Will Not Require Roberts To Apologize

Cannot Conceive He Intended to Interfere

TORONTO (CP) — Evidence and counter-evidence, varnish accusations and denials of interference in crime today drew a tangled web of testimony before Ontario's royal commission on crime.

When the day's hearing was over, it was difficult to assess what—if any—progress had been made.

The hearing continues today and indications were that the tangled situation that has marked the session for more than a week would be no easier to fathom.

During the day, Chief Justice Dana Porter took the stand to deny a suggestion that when he was attorney-general in 1954 he had stopped proceedings against 34 men seized in a Cookville clubhouse.

He said that T. L. Kennedy, then private MPP for Peel where the Cookville club is located and later Liberal premier, had asked him about the status of the charges after they were found-ins. He had instructed Deputy Attorney - General Clifford Magone to make inquiries and Mr. Magone informed him that the charges against him were released from custody.

NOT ENOUGH EVIDENCE

Mr. Kennedy's suggestion related to the commission last week had suggested the then attorney-general had a hand in halting the proceedings. Police testified that there was just not not enough evidence to move against the found-ins.

The chief justice also told the commission under Mr. Justice W. J. Roach that he had never heard of any improprieties among senior members of Magone's staff while he was attorney-general.

Mr. Justice Porter's evidence was related to that given earlier by Chief Inspector Harold Graham of the OPP who had said he had been told that the attorney-general in 1954 ordered a postponement of the 34 men terminated.

Graham said the information came to him from Tecumseh Miller George McGill, who in turn said he was reporting a conversation with William Davis, a member of Peel, who in turn said he was reporting a conversation with former premier Leslie Frost.

Both Mr. Davis and Mr. Frost have denied such conversations occurred.

HEAR FROM DIARY

Much of the hearing Monday was devoted to hearing uncorroborated evidence read "into" and "upon," from the diary of OPP Constable George Scott.

Mr. Justice Roach acted as an undercover agent in an investigation involving a fellow member of the staff — gambling squad, Robert Wright, Wright is to be called as a witness.

Scott's diary listed—over a period of several months—charges and suggestions made by Wright and gambler Joseph McDermott. Both men have been convicted of illegally obtaining information from police files.

Weather Delays Tricky Operation Of Breaching Lac Megantic Dam

LAC MEGANTIC, Que. (CP)—Freezing overnight temperatures caused a delay in plans to start water flowing through a new control relief, pressure tunnel in the weakened Gayhurst dam.

The tunnel had been scheduled to start at 2 a.m. and was expected to be flowing through the breach by about 8 a.m.

However, at 8:30 a.m. engineers said it would be another couple of hours before the water started to move.

It wouldn't reach low - lying areas of this northeastern Quebec several hours after it started to flow, they said, but the delay did relieve pressure on the dam.

The tricky task of siphoning the watery mass from the residents of the Chaudiere Valley is nearly finished for days of the operation.

Lights burned late in villages and farms as residents of the valley south of Quebec City pondered a warning that the move to avert certain inundation might itself cause a serious flood.

The Quebec Civil Protection Service, with temporary headquarters in Beauceville, a valley town, struck heavily by the Chaudiere's almost annual flooding, warned Monday night that the new waters might cause enough today to flood parts of Beauceville.

Meanwhile, consulting engineer Marc Benoit of the town of Lac Megantic said there was a "very slight" but grim possibil. ity that the dam may burst during the operation.

If the earthen Gayhurst — an eight-year-old structure built by the provincial government as defence against floods — starts to pressure of its water, it will erode a wall of water 30 feet high down the Chaudiere River.

The Chaudiere flows from Lac Megantic on the Maine border to the St. Lawrence near Levis City. Benedict Arnold marched along its banks on Quebec in 1775 and it has a flood history dating back to 1750, when it was a settled transportation route.

A CPR rail line now runs along the banks as well as a paved highway. More than 10,000 persons live in the small valley towns. Beauceville has a population of about 3,700.

Move to Reveal Political Gifts Is Rejected

OTTAWA (CP) — A bid to compel unions and corporations to report contributions to political parties was made in the Commons Monday night.

Speaker Michener rejected the proposal, made by the Co-operative Commonwealth group in the form of an amendment to a government bill requiring unions and corporations to file certain financial information.

Murdo Martin (CCF — Timmins) said there has been much criticism of the fact that trade unions are supporting the NDP. Referendums were carried out from time to time that corporations were supporting the Progressive Conservative and Liberal parties. Why didn't this bill specify such statistics?

Justice Minister Fulton objected that the amendment had no bearing on the bill. It was to seek to ascertain the extent and effect of foreign control on trade unions by unions and corporations.

Mr. Martin also said the bill discriminates against trade unions in levying identical penalties for unions and companies in the event the law was broken. Yet companies had far more assets.

He asked why it was necessary for union members to be listed so that the male-female identity was given. It was also discriminatory to list unions members by nationality rather than citizenship.

No Settlement In Hydro Strike Now Apparent

TORONTO (CP)—A meeting between labor and management and Ontario Labor Minister W. K. Warrender Monday night produced no settlement in the threatened strike at midnight April 5 of 8,300 Ontario Hydro employees and Mr. Warrender adjourned the talks until today.

The power commission, which rejected a union offer to maintain essential services in the event of a strike, has stated it will keep up all power services to its customers through supervisory personnel and through other means.

John Lee, publicity officer of Local 1000 of the National Union of Public Service Employees (CLC), said union counsel David Lewis delivered the union's most effective mid night Thursday night, during negotiations between union and commission representatives and Labor Minister Warrender.

Mr. Lewis told the minister the union has been provoked by the commission's use of supervisors on union jobs. The supervisors, he said, are there watching over the jobs. They had been taking over in violation of their contract with the union.

Mr. Lee said Mr. Warrender was told the 9,000 union members would walk out Thursday unless Hydro moves from its offer of a four-per-cent pay increase in two steps.

The union originally sought a six-per-cent increase over two years. Its conciliation board representative, later recommended two increases of four per cent each.

New Ceremonial Dress for Mayor Is Approved

Belleville's mayor is going to have a new ceremonial dress to wear at council sessions and at other official occasions.

Council last evening approved purchase of the ceremonial garb - at a cost not to exceed $200.

Alderman Ross Bailey brought in the recommendation noting that the world famous Salvation Army band from England would be visiting the city shortly and if was felt it would be fitting to have ceremonial robes for the mayor for the official welcoming ceremony at city hall.

And Alderman Ben Corke agreed that it was high time the city dressed up its mayor and also provided new desks to replace the present archaic ones pentry which served as councillors' desks.

Alderman Les Digby said the idea was ridiculous.

If council has $150 to spend, he said, then it can use it to spend it then on ceremonial robes for the Mayor," he said.

Bill to Make Unions Legal Entities Causes Real Clash

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Labor Minister J. B. Carroll Monday said that a bill for the legal incorporation of unions, designed in fairness to labor to put it on an equal footing with management before the courts.

Opposition Leader Russ Paulley said the bill was opposed by labor and would lead to destruction of Manitoba's present harmonious labor-management relations.

Subject of the divergent opinions was a Progressive Conservative government bill to amend the province's trade unions legislation.

Mr. Carroll opened debate on the bill, which has brought criticism from labor and "anti-labor" from trade unions in the province. He denied charges the legislation will mean "shackled labor to death." Labor was thriving, he said, in most countries where unions are legal persons.

The minister said that under another section of the bill the government will "lend assistance" to unions in the conduct of strike votes.

The attorney-general, he said, would be empowered to enter prosecution procedures against unions or employers in cases of unfair labor practices, illegal strikes or lockouts and other breaches of the Labor Relations Act.

Developments Monday to other provincial houses:

Edmonton -- Premier Manning (L--Lac La Biche) told the Alberta legislature Russia's mental patients are better than the mentally ill in Alberta. He said the staff-to-patient ratio in Moscow mental hospitals is much higher than in the Alberta institutions. But Health Minister Dr. J. Donovan Ross said the liberal member hadn't considered the lack of privileges available to nurses and other staff in Alberta institutions.

Regina -- Health Minister W. G. Davies said further meetings have been held with Ottawa's CCF cabinet and the council of the Saskatchewan College of Physicians and Surgeons will not be held until there appears to be some advancement on principles between the two parties on the province's medical care plan, Mr. Davies said, however, that the plan will start July 1 as planned, "and we hope, with the cooperation of the doctors."

Halifax -- The Nova Scotia government introduced wide-ranging legislation calling for the government of Premier Robert Stanfield to control the regulatory powers held by local boards of health. The bill also calls for municipal councils and would prohibit sale of unlicensed meat.

Macmillan Risks Prestige to Aid Young Candidate

LONDON (AP) -- Prime Minister Harold Macmillan staked his prestige in a local political contest in England's industrial north Monday night and was greeted by cheering crowds.

Traffic was halted by stamping followers as Macmillan breasted through the area around Stockton after a speech in behalf of a struggling Conservative candidate, in a special parliamentary election.

It was a sea of political darkness, but the wild scenes seemed to favor Macmillan's Conservative party, right.

Macmillan was breaking with tradition by his personal intervention, but he made it clear that he was ready to turn what looks like a lost cause into victory if his party pressed Conservative party, draft a series of recent defeats in byelections. He was cheered as the audience applauded his speech, but a few hecklers kept up a running fire.

The prime minister leaded out at the Liberals for urging that Britain abandon its own H-bomb deterrent. He said Labor and Liberal defence policies would involve building larger conventional forces -- and that, he warned, would mean reintroducing the draft.

The Opposition Labor party won the Stockton seat in 1959 with a majority of 2,777, over the Conservatives in a two-way fight.

The Liberals have a candidate, John Mulholland, 26-year-old office administrator. William Rees-Davies, 39, carries the flag of the Labor party and claims he will have a runaway victory. Macmillan is campaigning in behalf of Gerald Coles, 32-year-old lawyer.

Requests Leave To Re-Open Service Station

City council yesterday declared action in response from Gordon Chalmers, Dorset Street West, who has asked council that he be allowed to reopen a gasoline service station which he closed out in 1959. Alderman Digby's township area in which he was located was taken into the city. The result has been a by-law limiting the number of gasoline stations to the present number of 55 and this by-law as well as the city zoning by-law would have to be amended to allow the request.

Alderman Jack Ireland said the by-law freezing the number of service stations at 56 was brought in because council felt there were too many such outlets in the city with the result that many were in bad shape financially.

Alderman Les Digby, however, disagreed that the purpose of the by-law was to limit the number of stations but he just said this was the only way to control gasoline.

The matter was referred back for two weeks to allow further investigation by the planning committee.

this commission was appointed touching on some of the matters that would come before the commission, that they were not disqualify a lawyer from appearing before counsel on a hearing.

"I do not propose to ask the attorney-general to appear and make any address. He could receive just how difficult my task would be and have to leave it to him to judge whether or not what he said resulted in any embarrassment. I do not therefore conceive he intended any embarrassment.

"He has been under a very great strain. But among those who know him I am sure great strain is myself.

"I am beginning to feel as though I were in the vortex of a whirlwind with the storm raging all around me. My position is not quite close enough to touch me."

LET'S KEEP IT FULL

Mr. Justice Roach said he intends to be absolutely fair and unbiased and when the time comes to make his decision he will "let the chips fall where they may."

The commissioner said there are bound to be "unpolitical overtones" in the hearing.

"I have tried to minimize them because this is a fact-finding tribunal," he said.

R. D. McKinnon, counsel for the Ontario Liberal party quoted from a diary kept by OPP Staff Sergeant John Ackerson, and read an entry from May of 1960 which described McDermott as an alleged kingpin of organized gambling in the province.

Following a lengthy testimony and cross - examination, Commissioner Clark said repeatedly that at this time he was more interested in getting the goods on the ramblers—McDermott, Mr. Flemming had acted in the defence of a gambling prosecution against Vincent Feeley, another gambler who was subsequently charged with McDermott and Wright.

The diary kept by Staff Sgt. Anderson made reference to lawyer Stuart Fleming of St. Catharines having suggested that Anderson was a stooge for the ramblers—McDermott, Mr. Flemming had acted in the defence of a gambling prosecution against Vincent Feeley, another gambler who was subsequently charged with McDermott and Wright.

The diary kept by Staff Sgt. Anderson made reference to lawyer Stuart Fleming of St. Catharines having suggested that Anderson was a stooge for the ramblers—McDermott, Mr. Flemming had acted in the defence of a gambling prosecution against Vincent Feeley, another gambler who was subsequently charged with McDermott and Wright.

MENTIONS GAMBLER

The name of Frank (Curly) Gardiner of Windsor entered into it September, 1959, when Mr. Anderson diary. Gardiner had spoken to Anderson about McDermott while Anderson had a tape recorder strapped to his leg. The police had been informed that Gardiner, serving a jail term, had been "sprung from jail by the thieves and politicians."

McDermott, gambler Vincent Feeley and "a man named Ryan" were called "the thieves" by police.

Commissioner Clark said he understands Gardiner had been let out before his time was up.

Assistant OPP Commissioner Ward testified said Toronto lawyer David Humphrey had tried in 1958 to get the OPP to help trap Gardiner, who at that time was alleged to be threatening to expose "the thieves" unless he were paid off. The police did not accept it.

ASK RE SUGGESTIONS

Commissioner Clark was asked why he had not drawn to the attention of the attorney-general's department the various recommendations Perry contained in the Scott diaries.

He replied that they were unincorporated and that in any event they were under investigation by his criminal investigation department right up to now.

Norman Dohaney, Police Chief Strubb of Peterborough came in another book of diary entry which stated Scott had been told by Strubb that Strubb's position in Peterborough had been "brought about by "the thieves" to remove him from the anti - gambling branch, in which he was a corporal.

Commissioner Clark said this report had been investigated and denied by all concerned with Strubb's Peterborough appointment.

Hospital Giving Good Care Under Trying Circumstances Says Council Representative

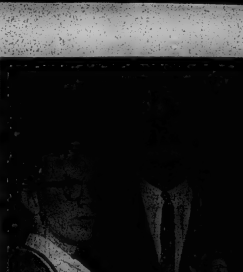
This was the picture presented by Alderman George Wisehart, council representative on the hospital board of governors, as he reported to council yesterday on the hospital shortage at the hospital.

Alderman Wishart said the hospital was currently operating at 23 per cent over its rated capacity of 205 beds with as many as 285 patients registered one day last week.



During this peak there were 21 patients in the corridors by and and 30 had advocated the creation of a partnership between the province and the city in the ownership and operation of the hospital.

LAKE SHORE COMING

Now was the time to decide on the partnership aspect of the hospital ownership, but before any decision was actually reached it would have to be made certain that any steps taken would not prejudice the request which the hospital had hopes of eventually acquiring from an estate, in the state of Massachusetts.

Mayor Haig said the bequest was from the estate of Charlotte Bills but gave no further details.

EASTER SEAL SALE — The first packet of Easter Seals for crippled children's work was sold in Belleville yesterday by Mrs. McCoy Haig (right) to Richard Harrigan (left) of the club's Easter Seal committee, looking on. This week local Rotarians will be mailing out Easter Seals to citizens in this area to help carry on this work, which is the club's major project.

Farmers Guests Of Rotarians At Luncheon

Despite the inclement weekend weather 108 local Rotarians and their guests were undoubtedly convinced it paid off as it was definitely in the air after yesterday's program held in the Hotel Quinte, which included both the regular annual rural-urban meeting and the send-off of the club's yearly Easter Seal campaign.

The latter, which raises funds for the work of the Ontario Society for Crippled Children, got underway with Richard Harrigan, a local lad receiving cars from the society, selling the first group of seals to Mayor Haig and Mrs. Haig.

The former part of the program featured Gordon Bennett, of the marketing services for the Ontario Department of Agriculture, who gave an address on the tremendous changes taking place in agriculture and the manner in which the modern farmer could meet these changes.

He noted that in the past 20 years the farm population had declined from 30 per cent to 12 per cent of the country's population and more than 600,000 acres had been lost to farm production. Part of this latter loss he pointed to the urban expansion but most of it, he added, was due to economic considerations.

He pointed out that the average capitalization required for a farm today is $40,000 of which 28 per cent is used for mechanical equipment. Despite the decrease in personnel and farming, he said there has been an increase, in physical terms, production of almost 35 per cent.

Part of this increase Mr. Bennett attributed to the almost total disappearance of horses and the conversion of the land formerly used for oats to the production of food. Although there are still certain some problems of overproduction in some commodities these problems are minor when the population increases and no new land is available for farming.

He speaker suggested that the farmer could realize the best possible return for his produce through collective marketing. He noted that in 1960 there were 27 commodities handled through some marketing board or plan and that this method accounted for $334,000,000 of the farm income for that year.

Mr. Bennett emphasized that the farmers had to consider providing a continuous supply of quality products to the consumer in the future. He spoke how this could be achieved through marketing boards which could be varied considerably in their context and scope to include everything from conditions of sale through to price stabilization and contract arrangements.

The cheese producers' industry was used by the speaker as an example of how farmers could successfully merchandise a high quality product at premium prices both on the domestic and on foreign markets.

He advised that there existed a great need for research of consumer taste and of enlarged and new uses of farm produce as well as an advertising policy for the agricultural industry to ensure the success of the farmer in the future.

The speaker was introduced by Jack McArthur and thanked by Lee Grills.

Warden Ward Vardy of Hastings County, from Tweed and Hungerford, expressed the thanks of the farmers for being guests of the Rotarians for this special evening.

Student Wayne Sobie, president of the BCIVS Glee Club, was special guest of the club for the meeting. He was introduced by Bill Riley.

lawyer, Mr. Pepper is acting as counsel for the committee itself.

Mr. Pepper agreed with Liberal Leader John Wintermeyer, also a lawyer, that the whole case may hinge around the legal definition of the difference between a timber licence and a timber contract.

Mr. Campbell in Monday's four hour hearing was evidence by Mr. Fullerton, Mr. Sopha, a former partner of the provincial forests department, and Mr. Fullerton's former partner in Mantane contracting. The hearing continues.

In a series of questions James Trotter, (L — Toronto Parkdale) asked why Mr. Fullerton's name was left on contracts between Mantane Contracting Company and the government, and why his interest in the company was not disclosed in land department official's in his frequent dealings with the firm.

Mr. Fullerton replied that he had given permission to E. Gerard Jones, his partner in the company, to handle negotiations and sign documents for the firm.

Mr. Fullerton said he had no reason to hide anything, but negotiations on the contract between Mantane and the provincial government were handled entirely by Mr. Jones, and he was not aware of the exact terms.

Mr. Fullerton said he "may have told" other departments officials of his partnership, but didn't believe he had told Mr. McMillen, then chief accountant of the lands department and now financial controller of the public works department who had handled many of the negotiations on the Mississagi salvage operation.

Campbell St. Wall Collapses

A thirty-foot retaining wall bordering the property of Geo. H. Carver on Campbell Street between Pinnacle and Church Streets, collapsed early last evening.

Fortunately, no one was injured. The collapse occurred about seven p.m.

The wall, varying in height from four to seven feet according to gradient, collapsed from its top downward. Debris was scattered over the road.

The wall was threatened with collapse a few years ago but was repaired by the city through private contract before accepting of an untoward nature occurred.

Parking Ban on Everett St. Laid Over for Six Months

City council is still not to consider any proposal to ban parking on Everett St.

Twice ortove, the matter has been under discussion in council and yesterday city fathers decided for six months the by-law which could have brought the restriction into effect.

Alderman Willis said he couldn't see the point of taking parking off Everett Street despite the fact the fire department intend using the street for access when other than Sterret is closed off this summer for construction of a sanitary sewer. He said fire trucks were just as easily go down Coleman Ave.

Alderman Ross Bailey came to the support of Cedar Street residents too, he said, would have no place to park when their street was torn up this summer.

And Mayor A. M. Haig said he was opposed in principle to the no parking edict.

"When no parking is in effect what are people going to do when they have guests?" he asked.

He suggested that there must be some answer other than no parking to solve all traffic problems.

Council passed another regulatory traffic by-law having to do with the allowing of loading zones on Front St.; also passed a by-law officially naming as Dundonald Street No. 2 the road formerly known as Trent Road.

Council also passed a by-law authorizing the city to enter into an agreement with Demas and Smith Ltd., consulting engineers in new Liskeard, Ont., for the construction of the proposed overhead bridge on North Front Street.

Construction of the bridge has been approved jointly by Ontario Municipal Board as a capital work project, but it was pointed out the city solicitor would be necessary before the project could proceed with when approval was granted.

Development of this radar might have been a secret but for the need to warn ships and aircraft to stay at least 15 miles clear of tiny Kei Namur Island where the radar is located. Kei Namur, is about 2,000 miles southeast of Honolulu and close to Bikiwski and Bikini where U.S. nuclear tests were conducted in the atmosphere before the 1958 moratorium.

An initial and rather obscure notice in a Hawaii paper said it would be dangerous to fly at heights below 50,000 feet over the island after March 14 caught the eye of Japanese authorities, who feared the island would be used for some form of nuclear detonation.

The defence department tried no elaboration of the announcement last Friday to make clear the danger would come not from the detonation but from electromagnetic radiation shot from the radar fence. Men caught in the beam could be "cooked" by radiation heat.

The area will be out of bounds for aircraft for several years. The radar now is undergoing tests before being put into operation against intercontinental ballistic and Polaris-Zeus missiles during the next few months.

NO 'DEATH RAY'

While authorities emphasized that the new radar—which they said could not be described as one of the world's most powerful — is not a "death ray" or a weapon to disintegrate missiles through radio beams, they hinted expectations might possible open new developments in that direction.

Using radar beams to intersect with the trajectory of a mission of an enemy missile might throw it off course. Possibly in the end—though authorities regret it is farfetched at the moment — the missile might be turned around to head back home.

Will Advertise For New City Engineer

The resignation of City Engineer Malcolm Turnbull was officially accepted by city council yesterday, but at the same time council turned down a recommendation naming R. Kratt as acting engineer at an increase of $100 a month salary.

Instead council named Mr. Kratt, the present assistant engineer, as acting engineer without mention of salary, and voted to advertise for a new city engineer.

Mr. Turnbull is resigning his position effective May 4th and will go to St. Catharines to become city engineer there.

Mr. Turnbull's resignation was accepted with regret.

Hydro Rate Increase Is Approved

The Ontario Municipal Board has approved the application of the Ontario Hydro Electric Power Commission for increased rates.

The increase will be effective on May 1 and will affect all customers of the commission.

The increase will be 2.5 per cent on the first $100 of the monthly bill and 1.5 per cent on the balance.

The commission had applied for a 3 per cent increase.

A Lesson for a Continent

Argentina is a distant land, at the other extremity of two long continents. But what has been happening in Argentina recently is typical of what may happen in other South American countries, and the natural resources of that vast and largely undeveloped continent may within a few decades become vital to the economy of a world with multiplying millions to feed and clothe and house. It follows that we might do worse than pause to ascertain whether the ousting of President Frondizi, and the assumption of real power by the leaders of the armed forces, has anything to teach us about the future.

Firstly, though opinions of the wisdom of the policies which Frondizi followed may differ, there ought to be general agreement, in countries such as Canada, that he was "our man" in Buenos Aires and the party he led represented the principles which we, as believers in democracy and rule by law, hold dear.

Secondly, of all the main contending parties, Frondizi appears to be alone in this devotion to the principles of democracy. On one may sympathise with the chiefs of the armed forces in their concern that the Peronistas should not return to power, but the democrat cannot sympathise with the way in which these military chiefs have demonstrated this concern. Frondizi was the legally elected president; he, as much as the armed forces, was the foe of the Peronistas; he deserved the active support of the armed forces in his predicament, when he discovered that his insistence on free elections had diverted power in many provinces into the hands of the foes of such elections.

There is no good reason to believe that Argentines will enjoy a much greater share of the essential civil liberties under a military dictatorship, even if disguised with a figure-head civilian president, than they would have if the foes of the military, the Peronistas, the Castroists and the communists, had seized control.

There is, though, this saving feature. Some of the military chiefs in Argentina have demonstrated at least theoretical interest in democracy and may, if the situation eases, restore this form of government.

Actually, though, there would appear few reasons to anticipate that conditions which have given rise to the popularity of the Peronistas and their, for the time being, allies, will change. These conditions are rooted in poverty. Argentina is one of the wealthiest of South American countries. If poverty breed revolt there, the danger of similar revolutionary movements in other South American lands must be even greater.

Perhaps we might briefly consider the three elements in the leftist opposition to Frondizi. The communist position we know and need do no more than mention. The Castroists, though, perhaps need some extra consideration because he has now declared he is a communist. Is there, then, any difference between a Castroist and a communist? In many South American lands, almost certainly there is a difference, and in some cases a great difference, for Castroists will include many who supported the non-communist revolutionary before he announced he was a communist and will share with him a fervent desire to improve the lot of the paupers.

The Peronistas need special consideration. In democracies anything was general when Dictator Juan Peron was ousted. His suppression of civil liberties, the charges of police cruelty and torture, his heavy-handed suppression of critics—all made his removal a cause for thanksgiving. But we should not overlook the fact that Peron's power rested largely on support by the working classes, supported, he guaranteed by economic bribes, and that the lot of the "shirtless ones" had improved under his regime. The difficulty was that the concessions which he forced employers to make to unions bore no relationship to the ability of the economy to support such measures—bringing inflation and bankruptcies in their wake.

If there is a lesson to be learned from Argentina's troubles it is that the military are untrusty allies for democrats to embrace and that every government which improves the lot of the poor is not necessarily a good government, since it may be advancing this present assistance at the price of future chaos. The solution of South America's economic woes will not be easy and until this solution is well advanced the chances for the establishment of stable democratic governments will be slim.

Like everybody who is not in love, he imagined that one chose the person whom one loved after endless deliberations and on the strength of various qualities and advantages.—Marcel Proust.

MPs Cry Financial Blues But Only Fisher Speaks Up

BY RICHARD JACKSON
(From The Ontario Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau)

OTTAWA — Members of this Parliament have had — and almost certainly passed — their last chance to exercise the rare privilege of raising their own pay.

It was a chance that won't come again until after the general election, and the return to Ottawa of a new Parliament, composed, perhaps, of some bolder spirits.

Except for Douglas Fisher some of his colleagues call him "Daring Doug" — there has been a conspiracy of silence in Parliament about pay.

Almost all the MPs, a lot of them crying the financial blues, will say nothing publicly, for fear of voter reprisals at the polls.

But privately?

Well, the situation has gone from tears to laughter.

Seems that the Parliamentarians, tired of weeping, have taken to talking about their financial fate.

Like the other day when C. A. "Tiny" Cathers, Conservative MP for York North and one of Parliament's richer three millionaires, strolled into another Member's Commons office.

He was shaken to find his colleague hard at work over a wash-basin, scrubbing and rubbing the laundry, a rubber mender, a tube, a maker-of-the-article's laws.

NOT TRUE!

"Good heavens," gasped the wealthy Mr. Cathers to whom the annual $10,000 of the ordinary MP is probably little more than cigar-money, "you know how to do things for most of you—but don't tell me it has come to this!"

"Not yet," grinned the other MP up to his elbows in soda, "I was just trying to corner a shirt—don't like sending it out to the laundry."

Feeling the way they do about their pay, it was an hilarious moment for the pair to sit and suffer in silence the other day when Fisher moved his motion to have Parliament give immediate consideration to the pay and retirement income of members of Parliament."

The Parliamentary pay scale has been unchanged for nine years—and some of the MPs answer they can't see the shortfall breathing down their neck.

For not by the widest stretch of imagination could a member's annual $10,000 be counted as being "taxable."

Of the top comes the cost of living in Ottawa eight months of the year, while still maintaining a home for his family back in the constituency—of travel, to and from the Capital and around the riding — and entertaining the various political firemen who flock to Parliament Hill every day to the chartered bus-load—of heading the subscription list of everyone's charity worthy or pet cause—to list but a few of the expenses.

But even so, feeling the financial pinch as they most assuredly do, they remain concealed awe, even admiration in the contemplation by other MPs of Fisher's courageous political nerve in stating publicly, unrefuted, that he was underpaid.

HANG TOGETHER

Fisher, who has made 15 public utles, deliberately making a brief so that others — he likely was hoping — would be encouraged both a Liberal and a Conservative MP, and Fisher, even a word from a member of the Cabinet — could be heard in the dark corridors of the hour that remained.

But when he sat down, there was only the silence of an almost embarrassing silence, broken uncertainly by Fisher's fellow Conservative Whip and Parliamentary Secretary to Prime Minister Pearson, who moved quick adjournment of the "debate" so that, as is its part, some assent members who were anxious to take part would be able to do so . . . in the next Parliament, the one after the election, of course.

The explanation of this strange if not silly situation is that MPs pay came out for higher Parliamentary pay, other parties most certainly would use it as campaign ammunition.

And the effect on low and even medium-income voters would be definitely devastating.

Only solution would seem to be that when the chance comes again — as it most certainly will in the new Parliament — an all-party Commons committee be handed the political hot potato to prepare a pay recommendation that could be put to a free vote of the House.

In this way, if any MP were to be hanged, they would all hang together.

But it will have to wait, for if the Commons were to have taken action now, the House would see the greatest turnover in Canadian political history . . . 265 new faces in the new Forty-Fifth Parliament which will troop to the Capital after the election.

Letter To The Editor

Transit Commission Member Protests

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer.
Re Bridge Street Blockade

As a private citizen and as a member of the Belleville Transit Commission I wish to publicly protest against the flagrant disregard for the rights of the public which has been in process of demonstration for many weeks, culminating in the blockade to eastbound traffic on Bridge Street.

It was my opinion at that the private interests involved did not get together and solve their difficulties, without involving the rest of us. Until the public works department, in its zeal to protect the public from possible injury (a danger which has not existed until it removed the barricades out beyond the centre of the street and effectively blocked the northbound traffic side of the street, only a few parking meters were put out of service and the public felt that the inconvenience was something we could put up with.

Now, however, the situation has changed. By its precipitate action in barricading the street the public works dept. without so much as by your leave, has deprived the Transit Commission of its main bus terminal at Pip Top Tailors. To aggravate the situation further, the police moved the buses on instead of taking consistent action to remedy the situation by preventing parking adjacent to the only other bus terminal on the other side of Front Street, which had to be pressed into service in the emergency thus created.

Here we have an appalling situation! Two private individuals and their insurance companies get into a head-on collision of rubbish left by a fire; first, part of a street is blocked and a few parking meters are lost revenue; then the whole street is blocked off for over a week but the parking meters are left in service on the other side in preference to relocating the normal two-way traffic, and the public bus system, without notice, is deprived of its terminal and exposed to loss of revenue, while the police say "move along" and the traffic commission and city fathers stand by helplessly.

Now, it seems to me that streets in the first place are for traffic, not pedestrians, so that if the street had to be blocked (which I doubt) the first thing that should have been provided have been the parking on the opposite side of Bridge Street. Secondly there must be a city ordinance somewhere requiring property owners to remove any public nuisance and hazard with which we are dealing. The first thing that should be done is high board fence to protect the public while the building is under construction and the public accepts a reasonable amount of inconvenience as a necessity and because of this demonstration of co-operation. But the owners of the horrible mess across the street, show no good faith or consideration for others and get away with inconvenienceing the public and doing nothing, while we all pay for it. They should have the book thrown at them and they should be forced forthwith to erect a lightstanard here around their pile of bricks. Within these walls the public could not care less what goes on.

Most of us hope to see them buried in their own rubbish heaps, hurling brickbats and waving their fists at passing police overhead as they sink into oblivion.

To Herold Seldon, proprietor of Seldon's Drug Store on Front Street, goes the honor of opening the 1942 fishing season in the Bay of Quinte. With his boathouse on the Belleville harbor still ice-bound, Mr. Seldon transported his sailing canoe on a trailer to open water and enjoyed a sail on the bay.

Some 2,000 lbs. of record was established by the Belleville Fire Department when they were called to the corner of West Moira Street and Yeomans Street on a minor grass fire alarm. Insofar as the members of the local department can remember, it is the first time that the brigade has been called to a grass fire so early in the year.

An egg within an egg was the unusual find of Mrs. Office of the Ontario Intelligencer staff, on the 4 W. Bailcanquet of Corbyville. This egg at first appeared to be a large double yolk egg and was about to be used in cooking by Mrs. Bleecker, but on cracking the outer shell which contained a white, she discovered a perfect hen's egg inside.

Key to Space Conquest Is Co-operation

BY SYDNEY J. HARRIS

In our flush of national pride and justifiable pride — over Colonel Glenn's orbital flight, we ought to keep in mind what he thought was the most significant passage in his talk to Congress.

"There were with me then — and with me now," Colonel Glenn said, "Americans and many hundreds of citizens of other countries around the world who contributed to the truly international undertaking, taking voluntarily in a spirit of cooperation and understanding."

To this orbital flight was a dramatic and heroic achievement — as, indeed, it was. But it was, and to most others in the space project, it was part of the great international groping for knowledge — not for power, not for pride, not for thumbing one's nose at anybody, but simply for increasing our scientific and intellectual grasp of the universe.

Nor should we forget — as Colonel Glenn did not forget — never do for a moment — that the space project is the result of unhappy people in the world are the ones who have the least responsibility. It is also true that there are thousands of people today who wear themselves out from rushing about not doing very much of anything. Anxiety is also a fearful source of exhaustion. A problem stalks down through our brains, and no matter what we do, no matter who we go or with whom we associate, that problem and its grim overtones is continually with us. The result is exhaustion.

And then we must always face the fact that many people are tired because of gross or unwise eating habits.

Lift up the face in hope. Lift up the mind in aspiration. Lift up the heart in prayer. Then shall we know fully as God intended us to live it.

A Strong Hereditary Tendency in Diabetes

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: Our 8-year-old son has diabetes, but we can't find a trace of it in my husband's family or mine. I understand that diabetes is hereditary. Can you explain this? — Mrs. G.D.

The hereditary tendency in diabetes is generally so strong as to be unmistakable. However, it isn't unusual to find cases that you have to waste to trace hereditary.

One explanation is that there may be carriers of this trait in the family, and they pass it along without actually having diabetes themselves, or without it being apparent.

In some instances, a child may have diabetes before a case develops in one of the parents or some other adult relative. The trait is there — but the time when diabetes becomes detectable may vary considerably.

Dear Dr. Molner: My teen-age daughter is overweight. She also is bothered with heavy legs. Could the tonsils cause this? She had her tonsils taken out? I feel they were put there for a reason and I hate to have them removed. — Mrs. H.J.

Ear trouble is one of the prime reasons for removing seriously infected tonsils. But paired hearing is a serious handicap — and if it is being caused by them, of course it should be avoided by removing them.

Yes, tonsils were put there for a reason. Sometimes they should be for a reason, too. But there are many instances in which I see the need for removal outweighs the original purpose of an organ. Take for example, an inflamed appendix, a diseased gallbladder, an abscessed tooth, and a low with gangrene.

Dear Dr. Molner: If a woman has had two children with diabetes and they did not live, is it possible that a third child will be born with the same defect? Does spina bifida be detected early in pregnancy? — Mrs. J.H.

Spina bifida is one of the "birth defects" for which the cause has not been found. Physiologically, one of the bones of the spine does not completely close, especially in the lower back.

It is unusual for a mother to have two such children, but since little is known about the problem, I can only say that a third child might be no affected. It would be very strange for this to happen, but I have no statistics on which to say I couldn't.

There is no way to foretell spina bifida, in pregnancy either, early or late. Indeed, after the child is born there is often no visible sign except sometimes a small dimple in the skin on the lumbar lower back, and X-rays may be necessary before a diagnosis can be made with certainty.

Spina bifida is not very common, and despite the very sad experience in today's letter above, it is by no means always fatal.

Dear Dr. Molner: Some years ago I had an operation for hemorrhoids. I feel the urge to go but appear to do not have enough muscle tone to be completely successful. Are there exercises I could do? — Mrs. F.

I'd suspect that a narrowing, or stricture, of the area has resulted from scar formation. After this type of surgery, it is important to have follow-up care, involving dilation of the area to prevent adhesions, until healing is complete. Don't think that paired hearing is a serious handicap — and if it is being caused by them, of course it should be avoided by removing them.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

There probably are statistics that show how many automobiles each year are sold to first-time car owners, as distinct from with the number sold to those with a car to turn in on the deal. If so, I haven't heard of them.

But the first-time car buyers must be considerably fewer in number. This leaves a steady stream of old cars, and new cars, that are being shoved off the end of the used-car lot into the graveyards of the nation. The supply of cars to be seen all over the continent is positively embarrassing, disorder and ruin. Driving the old Packsack I feel resentment. It is next to impossible to spot cooperation rather than competition and hostility. At the upper levels of industry, as well as in all intellectual pursuits — in the sciences, universities and the arts — there is a spirit of cooperation that goes beyond the national rivalries of here and now.

It is the human problem summed up by transmuting this commonwealth of interest and activity from the scientific and intellectual realm down into the social, political, economic, personal and international realms.

The Einsteins, the Fermis, the Oppenheimers, scientists of a dozen different countries and disciplines have no difficulty in working as a team bound by their work. All science is supranational. It may be used for ugly and destructive purposes, but its motivation and goal are always the same — to understand and subdue the natural universe around us.

For mankind. Not for the Americans or the Russians or the Germans. Not for the white or the brown or the yellow. Not for the rich, and not for the rich, the smart, the aggressive, the healthy.

The three distinctive human activities are religion, art and science. And all three have this same thing in common — they are universal, no matter how much they may seem to be distorted by parochial interests, political or economic, or by these shocking graveyards.

But they must be a source of reassurance to those administrators who worry about the diminishing supply of petroleum and metals in our furiously consuming world. Here are millions, probably billions, of tons of scrap metal for the future use of industry.

Morality Play Presented at Christ Church

Last Sunday the service at Christ Church was not the regular Evensong service. As a special Lenten activity, Chr Rho Fellowship, under the direction of the curate, Rev. Michael Carroll, produced a medieval morality play of German origin, and this play, The Tragedy of the Dance of Death, was performed in the church, replacing the service.

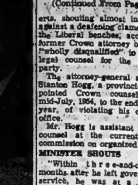
The play itself is a very religious play of this type, the stage for enacted in used as a symbol of life's existence, the characters, in this case stereotypes rather than typical specimens rather than fully rounded individuals, enter through the Doorway of Life, to their final scene with Death, then exit through the Doorway of Eternity; a sequence of events all mortal beings must ultimately experience.

The general consensus of a good capacity congregation was that it was an excellently produced example of a "sermon in action". Yesterday's play will be produced in St. George's Church, Trenton, next Sunday evening.



This evening the third course of the special militia training program or "survival course", as it is popularly known, will have its graduation inspection at the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment's Belleville armouries.

Brigadier A. J. B. Bailey, D.S.O., O.B.E., E.D., C.D., commander of Eastern Ontario Area, will be the inspecting officer.

The feature of the evening inspection, which commences at 8.00 p.m., will be a series of interesting demonstrations which will be highlighted by the usual novel planning for which the local regiment's militia training groups have become noted throughout the area.

Major Alex Cunningham, course commander, has advised that ample seating arrangements have been made to accommodate the general public and to provide spectators with a first rate view of the proceedings.

One of the evening's highlights is to be a motorized demonstration of traffic control conducted on the main floor of the armouries.

W. J. MACDONALD, manager of the Bank of Nova Scotia here, has just returned from a two day conference in Ottawa where he met with 60 other Scotiabank managers, mostly from Eastern Ontario, to discuss staff, credit, customer relations, international operations, protection and other phases of banking. U.C.W. Hears Talk on Tokyo, Japan

WELLINGTON — The United Church women held their March meeting on the evening of the 20th in the centennial parlor with an attendance of 64. Mrs. H. Pierson presided with Mrs. C. H. Burr at the piano. Quiet music called the meeting to order. The welcome was extended to all members and visitors.

Mrs. Gordon Perks gave the treasurer's report which showed a substantial sum. Corresponding secretary reported sending 31 cards for birthdays sickness and sympathy, having received eleven replies.

Units 1 or 2-4 will convene as usual for their respective meetings in April. Unit 3 has cancelled its meeting to attend prayer service being conducted.

The Thanksgiving meeting will be held on the evening of April 17th, in the centennial parlor. All the ladies of the congregation are welcome. A pot luck supper will be served and is called for Friday evening at 6 o'clock, April 5th, in the centennial parlor.

Mrs. Percy Elliott, reporting on Presbyterial, gave the welcoming new Canadians and said "we must never underestimate the power of one cheerful word for good".

As this time the meeting was turned over to the convener of program committee, Mrs. C. Clowes.

Mrs. Leonard Pelmer conducted the devotional period and took as her theme "True Maturity" reading from Romans 12. "He who follows me can never walk in darkness" said the Lord. Maturity then we must make it our chief business to train our thoughts upon the life of Jesus Christ", closing with hymn "Come Let L. Sing of a Wonderful Love", followed by prayer. Offering was then received.

Mrs. J. H. Burr accompanied Mrs. Hilda Taylor as she sang "Keep Thou My Soul".

Mrs. J. Clowes introduced the guest speaker, Mrs Nesbitt McGregor of Picton, a woman known for her work in Woman's Missionary Society and Sunday School and once having received a citation from the Governor General for her interest in the St. John Ambulance Corps.

She started with U.C.W. some of the highlights, when with her husband, she visited Tokyo, Japan, and attended the 32nd annual convention of Rotary.

Mrs. Nesbitt Picton, a woman and singing recently the Japanese National Anthem, she explained the difference by showing colored slides of the country. Cherry Blossom Time goes quite Western and wear native costumes for special fuctions only.

Tokyo, with a population of 8,000,000 is the largest city of one percent Christian. She said the experience has taught her to be more prayerful and to understand all peoples of every race remembering their need for prayer.

Mrs. Sherman Foster expressed the thanks of the audience and hoped she would return soon.

Mrs. H. Pierson after expressing her personal thanks to Mrs. McKibbon, closed the meeting.

Mrs. J. Dick and members of her social committee served refreshments.

Weddings

HARVEY — WIGHT

Lovely pastel chrysanthemums and ferns adorned Rose Hall, United Church, in Wellington, Ont., on Saturday, March 31st at 2.00 p.m. for the marriage of Cheryl Darlene Wight, of Wellington, R. R. No. 1, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Wight to Ryan Stewart Harvey of Trenton, Ontario, son of Mr. and Mrs. Neville Harvey. The Reverend R. Smith officiated.

The wedding music included "Bridal Song" and "The Wedding March" and other wedding hymns.

Given in marriage by her father, Mr. Ralph Wight, the bride was lovely in her bridal gown of white satin net and lace fashioned in floor-length with neck, pearl and sequin trim. Her silk illusion tulle veil was caught by a headdress of seed pearls, and she carried a cascade bouquet of red roses mingled with white carnations.

Her attendant was Miss Mary French, who was attired in pink organza over taffeta, with matching headpiece designed in sheath style with matching jacket, with blue and white accessories, and corsage of pink roses. The bridegroom's attendant was Mr. Edward Harvey, brother of the groom.

The bride's mother received the guests, garbed in blue and bronzed brocade designed in sheath style with matching jacket, with blue and white accessories, and corsage of pink roses. The bridegroom's mother wore a gown of embossed brocade in beige tone, with matching accessories with matching corsage.

The wedding luncheon was held in the church hall, with the U.C.W. catering the turkey dinner.

The bridal table, beneath streamers of pink and white streamers and white bells was centred by the traditional wedding cake, with the bridal bouquets adding a lovely nuptial accent.

The toast to the bride was proposed by the officiating minister, Rev. Truss, to which the bridegroom responded. Other toasts were also proposed, ending to the high esteem in which the couple are held.

For the wedding trip to the United States, the bride chose a green linen costume with matching accessories.

Supermarket Shoppers Show In Survey They Are Critical of Way Bacon, Meats Packaged

By EONA BLAKELY

OTTAWA (CP) — A survey among supermarket shoppers has turned up some criticism of packaging methods.

Based on the first 11 months of 1962, the consumer relations section of the federal food and drug directorate put questions to 3,600 shoppers in six cities.

Results show that about 40 per cent had one objection or another to the packaging and that most of the criticism was aimed at the way bacon and other meats are put up for sale.

Nearly half the critics said modern packages are deceptive in some way. For example, some were not filled as completely as possible.

Other main objections:

1. Packages are the cause of the "thrill" in the food they contain.

2. Some packages contain too few or too many portions.

3. Some have gimmicks or "hidden" features, like false bottoms, in waist-length, with matching veil. She carried a bouquet of pastel tinted tulips.

The bridegroom was attended by Mr. Bill Harvey, of Trenton, and the ushers were Mr. Lorne Wight and Mr. Terry Thompson, also of Trenton.

The wedding luncheon was held in the church hall, with the U.C.W. catering the turkey dinner.

Founder's Life Outlined at Rebekah Meet

STIRLING — On March 27 at the close of the regular meeting of Laurel Rebekah Lodge, No. 311, at Stirling, a short program and social evening was enjoyed.

P.N.G., Sister Olive Whitehead gave an outline of the life of Schuyler Colfax, the father of Rebekah Odd Fellowship. This man was responsible for the founding of the ladies' degree of the Odd Fellows lodge and he also was the author of the Rebekah ritual. Schuyler used a book of sermons when preparing his ritual and these are still in possession of a grandniece.

In 1850 Mr. Colfax was in attendance at Grand Lodge in the United States and was appointed chairman of a committee of three to deal with a ladies' degree. Despite opposition from the other two members the vote carried in 1851 and a ritual was prepared.

The founder had three major interest—politics, lecturing and lodge work. He was a strong leader in Odd Fellowship and he himself conferred the Rebekah degree on thousands of candidates in lodges stretching from the Atlantic to the Pacific coasts.

Throughout the years the Rebekah lodge has grown steadily and it is now international in scope. Memorial birthday parties are held in many European countries as well as on the American continent, in the month of March to honor the founder of Rebekah lodges.

Sister Irene Pollock read a poem by Mr. W. J. Ostrevi, which had appeared in "The Tidsskrift." She also read a most interesting article giving a synopsis of the Rebekah Order in Denmark. The Fellowship in that country is wonderful and they have good social citizens who donated over $20,000 to health and welfare organizations last year. In Denmark they have the Rebekah initiations and three other degrees of the order.

A contest entitled "A penny for your thoughts" was won by two groups and they shared the award.

Refreshments were served in the dining hall and a social half hour was enjoyed.

Chicken For Choosey Cooks

by Mary Moore

When I briefly described my Bermuda holiday two weeks ago I mentioned Chef Rego's fado the recipe which Chef Rego of Elbow Beach Surf Club gave me. I made this for Sunday dinner. It was definitely different and good.

To add to this session of chicken I have a recipe for a Chicken Pie that is the best yet.

TUESDAY

Dinner Menu

Grapefruit Halves; Broiled Lamb Chops; Corn Relish; Fluffy Mashed Turnip; Frenched Green Beans; Apple Slices poached in Syrup; Soft Custard; Banana Loaf. (see Monday); Tea.

CHICKEN ESTOFADO A LA CHEF REGO

This is roast chicken with a spicy meat and bread stuffing that Chef Rego learned in Mexico. The stuffing fills a 3 1-2 to 4-pound roaster.

1 3-1-2 - 4 lbs. roasting chicken, 1-2 lb. ground fresh pork or sausage meat; 1 1-2 tablespoons butter or chicken fat or margarine; 2 tablespoons chopped onion; 2 tablespoons chopped parsley (3 tablespoons dried parsley flakes); 1-2 teaspoon chili powder; 1 medium tomato chopped (or 1 cup thick pulp from canned tomatoes); 1-16 teaspoon cinnamon; 1 1-4 cups dried white or whole wheat breadcrumbs; 1-4 cup soaked light raisins, 1-3 cup chopped blanched almonds, 1-2 teaspoon salt.

In large frying pan melt butter or fat and in it saute gently the ground pork or sausage meat (breaking it up with a fork as it sizzles). With the onion parsley, chili powder, tomatoes and cinnamon, until meat loses its color and is grey. Remove from heat and add bread crumbs, raisins, almonds and salt. Spoon into oven-ready roasting chicken, skewer to close opening, tie legs and wings close to chicken body, brush skin sparingly with butter and roast at 300 deg. Fahr. uncovered for 2 to 2 1-2 hours, basting every 1-2 hour. Note: If you do not want to bother basting, cover chicken for first hour with foil.

PRADYE BEST-YET CHICKEN PIE

1 2 1-2-lb. frying or roasting chicken, water, 1 large carrot, 1 small onion, 1-2 lb. mushrooms, 2 tablespoons butter, Sauce: 6 tablespoons butter, 6 tablespoons flour, 1 cup milk, 1 cup chicken broth, 1 teaspoon salt, 1-8 teaspoon pepper, Biscuit Topping: 1 1-2 cups sifted all-purpose flour, 3 teaspoons baking powder, 2-4 teaspoon salt, 1-3 cup good quality shortening, 1-2 cup plus 2 1-3 tablespoons milk.

Add 2 cups water to chicken in large saucepan and cook covered until meat will fall from bones. Slip meat from bones. Cook broth down until it measures 1 cup. Put large chicken pieces in a casserole. (Pressed cooked meat measuring 6 1-2 x 10 x 2".) Parboil carrot cut into 1-4" rings and onion quartered, in boiling water to make barely tender. Drain. Arrange over chicken, pieces in casserole. Make Sauce: Melt the 6 tablespoons butter, stir in 4 tablespoons flour until blended, then stir in the 1 cup milk and 1 cup chicken broth until thick. Add salt and pepper and pour hot over chicken and vegetables in casserole. Gently saute sliced mushrooms in the 2 tablespoons butter just until limp. Arrange evenly over sauce so that they will be directly under crust. Make Biscuit Topping: Sift together sifted flour, baking powder and salt. Cut in shortening until size of peas. Quickly stir in milk. Turn out on floured board. Roll or pat out to fit casserole and place over filling. Bake at 450 deg. Fahr. (very hot oven) for 20 minutes.

Question: I always soothe the when a guest sits with one foot tucked under her on the sofa. A friend has a habit of doing this, and I usually have to get busy with spot remover the minute she leaves. Would it be impolite to ask her to take her foot off the upholstery the next time she does it?—Mrs. D.A.T., Trenton, N.J.

Answer: Unfortunately, this is one of those little crises that a proper hostess has to overlook. However, you might try an ounce of prevention. Either steer her to a chair which doesn't lend itself to tucking, or, if she sits on the sofa, sit right next to her so she won't have room to spread out and tuck her foot under her.

Question: My class at school is giving a Spring dance. I am a high school freshman, and this will be the first time I've had to invite a boy to escort me. I already have my date picked out. He's a neighbor. My parents know him and his family well. I want to invite him, myself, but my mother thinks she should ask his mother first. The other girls at school are handling their own invitations, and I'd prefer to do the same thing. How should the invitation be issued correctly? —M.J.S., Chicago, Ill.

Answer: Since you're no longer a sub-teen, you may correctly issue the invitation yourself, without your mother acting as go-between. The invitation may be issued face-to-face, over the telephone. Be sure to give all the details, including how to dress. It's not necessary to send a note of invitation in this instance.

Council Approves of Change In Zoning for Maisonettes Despite Residents' Protest

TRENTON — In spite of a lengthy and vehement objection from Coulter Crescent residents, Trenton council last night passed a by-law which will permit the erection of multiple-housing units in the area lying south of Coulter Crescent and west of Dufferin Ave.

Mr. Wilson claimed that council had misinterpreted the recent planning board recommendation that the representative of the would-be developer of the area contact area residents and sound out their feelings towards the erection of the proposed multiple-housing units, termed "maisonettes."

Mr. Wilson said that it was the opinion of Coulter Crescent residents that the Trenton and Suburban Planning Board had meant that the residents must approve of the project before the board would recommend that council change the zoning of the area.

"As a matter of fact," said Mr. Wilson, "two members of the planning board phoned me this week and told me that they would not be too unhappy if council took no action on the re-zoning."

Mr. Wilson said that the Coulter Crescent residents felt that the development was "unnecessary," and that the land would be better employed if it were used for single-family dwellings. He said that the later would bring about "normal" development of the area, whereas the maisonettes would be "abnormal."

SCHOOL PROBLEM

Mr. Wilson said that if the maisonettes became a reality, the resulting influx of children into the area would mean that six to eight rooms must be added to Prince Charles School.

Mr. Wilson also questioned the ability of the average tenant to pay the rents the developer would ask and he expressed concern about what would happen if the developer completed one stage of the development and then discovered the venture was unprofitable and discontinued operations.

"I think your remarks should be confined to why the land should not be re-zoned," Mayor MacDonald interjected at this point of Mr. Wilson's discourse.

Mr. Wilson went on to say that in the Coulter Crescent residents' opinion the existing storm and sanitary sewers in the area would not be able to handle the extra load if the maisonettes were built.

He also expressed concern about the traffic situation on Dufferin Ave.

"If we had 120 more housing units, we'll get 120 more cars," he said. "The inevitable result will be that somebody's child gets killed, or injured. If that's the price we have to pay to get extra taxes, I suggest, gentlemen, that you search your consciences on the matter."

REPLIES TO CRITICS

Hugh Law, representing the development company, countered Mr. Wilson's remarks by pointing out that annexation and the development of Westmount Park would necessitate the extension of Prince Charles School. He said that his company would work closely with the town engineer on matters pertaining to sewers, drainage, etc., and that the development would not create a speeding problem along Dufferin Ave., as such a situation already exists.

Mr. Law said that each unit of the development would return the same tax to the town as single dwellings.

Mayor MacDonald generally concurred with Mr. Law's arguments.

"We're trying to make Trenton a better place to live in," he said. "A lot of our potential tenants go to Belleville to live. I'm sure what Mr. Law proposes won't hurt your state of living."

"I would have preferred a little more subdued opinion from the mayor," said Mr. Wilson.

Mr. Wilson suggested that members of council visit maisonette developments in the Toronto area. He claimed that the Victoria Park development, eight years old, was "depreciated".

"Why didn't this company produce pictures of the maisonettes as they look after a few years' occupancy?" asked Mr. Wilson. "All we've seen are 'arty' sketches of the buildings."

WILL VISIT TORONTO

Councillor Dorman MacDonald said that he would go to Toronto and look at some of the developments and then make up his mind on the matter.

"Why wasn't the Downs-Coulter long-term development completed?" asked Councillor Ross Burtt, "the land has lain vacant for 7 years. The Downs-Coulter company didn't carry through with its obligation to develop the area."

"I think my company has fulfilled its obligations to the town", insisted Mr. Wilson, "I don't think it should be criticized. We employ 700 people at the plant and if the money were available now for could be available in the foreseeable future, development would be continued."

On a polled vote, the by-law, permitting the re-zoning was given third reading. It will be necessary to gain approval of the Ontario Municipal Board on the re-zoning and the Coulter Crescent residents may voice their objections at the official hearing.

Town Will State Intention Of Proceeding With Sewers

A Mr. Stone, appearing on behalf of North Murray Street residents, demanded to know why the town hadn't gone ahead with sewer installations on the street when it was the wish of the majority of the residents.

Clerk-comptroller O. W. Larry explained that, in order to install the sewers under the local improvement scheme, two-thirds of the street's residents and the person or persons holding property representing 50 per cent of the total assessment on the street, must agree to the program. He explained that the two-thirds of the residents clause had been fulfilled but that the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, which owns the greatest amount of land on the street, had indicated that it was not interested in sharing in the installation program in a financial sense.

"Why do we have to wait for the CPR?" asked Mrs. Stone, "The CPR trucks go up our road. Do they pay to have it repaired?"

"It hardly fair to say that the CPR has 'refused' the sewer in any manner," the mayor said Mr. Larry. "They've said they didn't wish to participate in the cost under local improvements".

"Couldn't we publish a notice of intent, advising that we meant to proceed with the work?" asked the mayor, "The CPR might object and in that case, we might pay for it from general revenue".

"We've got open ditches on both sides of the road", offered Mrs. Stone, "it shouldn't be too hard to install a sewer. Just throw the pipe in the ditch and cover it up".

Mrs. Stone also complained about the lighting on North Murray. Councillor Scott will look into the question of lighting, as the mayor said he didn't wish to get into another hassle with the public utilities commission by asking its advice.

The town will advertise its intensions of installing sewers on the street under the local improvement act and wait for the next move from the CPR.

Peter Dedube will be permitted to turn an empty Front Street lot into a parking lot under an annual lease arrangement with the town. Mr. Dedube will grade the area and do all work in connection with the lot making. For a number of years Mr. Dedube has kept the lot clear from weeds and cut the grass on the lot. All work will be done under the direction of town engineer, Eric Aldersey.

Mr. Aldersey told council that the public works department was investigating a complaint by 10 Elmwood Avenue residents that water had entered their basements, creating an unhealthy condition and ruining goods stored in the basements.

Other matters referred to the public works committee are a complaint from a McGill Street resident that her yard was "dropping away" as the result of street widening, which had exposed the roots of trees in the yard and had given the yard the appearance of a slum area; and

New Commander Takes Control Of Syria Rebels

By WEBB McKINLEY

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A new commander took over the army rebellion in northern Syria today and appealed to the Damascus government to negotiate a truce.

Col. Lunay Atassi broadcast from the rebel centre of Aleppo that he had taken command of forces in Syria's northern region, who rebelled Monday against the military junta and called for reunion of Syria with the United Arab Republic.

Atassi appealed to the junta in Damascus to halt troop movements toward Aleppo "to prevent bloodshed and preserve unity of the ranks."

Calling itself "the northern and eastern army command," the rebel garrison said that to protect unarmed civilians it would not "fire a shot and we shall not raise our arms against our beloved army."

The rebel truce appeal came shortly after Damascus radio broadcast an ultimatum to the Aleppo garrison to surrender in 30 minutes—before noon. Otherwise, said Damascus, the garrison would be considered mutineers and punished according.y.

An hour before Atassi's assumption of command was announced, an excited voice on the rebel radio said that "planes of parachutists" were trying to bomb the Aleppo transmitter 40 miles south of the city. The speaker appealed to the U.A.R. to send aid and paratroops to help the pro-Nasser rebels.

(Reuters News agency quoted Atassi as saying he regretted "that our beloved air force should begin firing innocent, unarmed people.")

Atassi's statement that he had taken command cancelled the appeal to the U.A.R. it said:

"We ask our Egyptian brethren to be patient and pardon now sending any reinforcements because our military position is strong and we can resist until victory."

Council also considered a complaint from a Dominion St. resident that town trucks parked on Seneca's his driveway. The town engineer said that this was done when town workmen were working in a manhole in front of the driveway.

TO INSTALL CURBS

Council was told that the Ontario Municipal Board had approved the sale of debentures to carry out a $36,000 curb program in the town and Mr. Aldersey said, that the work should commence this week. Councillors will be given lists of the streets to receive curbs.

On the recommendation of Councillor Ross Burtt, the town will ask the public utilities commission to install a street light on the first pole on Henry Street, off Victoria Ave.

After considering a recommendation from the Trenton Board of Health that the town immediately acquire a Front Street property deemed "unfit for human habitation" and reprimand the persons responsible for delaying the purchase, until such time as the asking price had been increased," council decided that the board was not aware of all the facts in the case, and shouldn't be quite so critical. No action was taken.

POLICE PROBLEM

Mr. Larry read a letter from the Trenton police commission, outlining the reason the commission thought it necessary that two additional men be added to the Trenton police force and why commission members thought the chief of police and the inspector attached to the department should receive an increase in pay and a car allowance.

Mayor MacDonald said that he had sent for a report on the per capita cost of police administration from other municipalities and that he would present this to the commission at an early date, although the general feeling was that the commission would win out on the issue in the long run.

Welfare administrator Gordon Davis has asked council to appoint service club representatives and representatives from Protestant and Roman Catholic groups to an advisory committee to assist in selecting tenants for the Senior Citizens apartments which will open in May. This request will be given strict consideration by council.

Tax collector G. Alan Weaver reported to council that a list of all unpaid business taxes had been handed to the clerk of the court for collection and that properties with three years taxes owing were in the process of being registered.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

The natural ice was melting that warm night in the arena sixteen years ago. Belleville and Kingston junior hockey teams were paddling their way through a playoff battle.

During the third period patches of sand and last year's dead grass showed through the north end of the ice surface. A few dew worms poked snouts topside to get a free look.

But the game continued. Halfway through the third period, they moved the goalposts up to the blueline and finished the game on the shortest ice surface in history.

The Belleville Bees swam ashore with the victory. "They should," snorted Kingston, "they've been playing in mud all winter!"

But Coach "Toots" Holway grinned. His "Bees" later the "Beers," had come through. During their five years of operations this club never won a championship. Bridesmaids? yes—but never the bride.

They played to win, but defeat never rankled them. "As far cry from Memorial Cup caliber, they—won their group (Trenton, Quinte, Tweed, Picton, Stirling), their share of times.

They played in the days when the prodding tentacles of professionalism were not reaching out to spear holes in their rosters. They did not travel in plush buses, nor eat in swank hotels.

They were bound together by bonds far stronger than the pages of hockey rules book. They had a wholesome respect that approached admiration for their coach. They recognized and enjoyed the government of a fine executive.

They had an esprit-de-corps that perhaps has never been equalled in a sports aggregation of this city. They were perhaps the "Three Musketeers" team of their day. Nor did the "commanderie they enjoyed and the respect and feelings they had for one another die with the passing years.

As a member of their executive put it, "They had good spirit and fellowship—they enjoyed playing hockey, of course, but most of all they enjoyed it because of the man who were leading them and the boys they were playing with . . ."

Evidence of the strong bonds that bind this club is seen in the fact that on Sunday, April 8th, the remaining members are holding their yearly reunion.

That day they will play their tenth intra-squad game since they moth-balled their hockey gear. True there may be a squeak or creak in the aging limbs, a touch of paunchiness evident in some waistlines, a slowing down of the former goal-attacking speed. After all, 16 years . . .

The big thing will be the post-game reminiscences. They will talk of many things. They will pay memorial tribute to two members who have answered the Last Whistle.

They will recall the days when they travelled in cars owned by fathers and executive. Sometimes only one car or two arrived by game time. They started with six men, hoping the rest of the gang would show up. Usually it did, either in the second or third periods.

They used boxes when they were available. But the charbance in these days had no bakgage accomodation. It was piled high in the aisle. Movement was confined and problems arose when midway stops had to be made. . .

But like victory and defeat, they took inconvenience in stride. It was part of the pattern of their hockey lives. Any and all of these ex-juniors will tell you their five years of play with the club was the finest experience of their sports lives.

A lot of them continued in the sport. They went on to play hockey with intermediate and senior "B" clubs. You will recognize their names.

The roll-call of the Belleville Juniors of the Mid-Forties included: Jack and Harry Wardhaugh, Maurice Rollins; Dick Fitzpatrick, Beguin and Al Meagher, Don Barrett, Doug Green, Perky Yorke, Hook Reeves, Jerry Moher, Doug Day, Bill Holway, Johnny Semark, Bruce Bishop, Art Pinmley, Buck Lyall and Jim Maracle. Rancor Bush and Bill Grantrir have passed away.

"Toots" was the coaching biof of the gang. The boys have never forgotten what the big ex-Montreal Maroon did for them. He still rates tops in their memory banks.

Nor forgotten is the popular trainer who looked after many hockey teams of the city. "Butch" Britten's memory will never die. Executive members were Bill Dennis, Jack Doran, Fred Reid, Don Lee, Wally Berry and Tom Fleury. Wilfred Fitzpatrick has since passed away.

PLEADS GUILTY

NEW YORK (AP)—Philip la Cort, 36, described by District Attorney Frank S. Hogan as a New England gambling figure, pleaded guilty Monday to bribing a college basketball player to "shave points." La Cort, of Boston, was continued in $25,000 bail pending sentence set for May 7.

BREAKS WORLD MARK

MOSCOW (AP)—Yuri Vlasov, Russia's 1960 Olympic champion and current world heavyweight weightlifting titleholder, broke the world record for the press, Tass reported Monday. He pressed 408.10 pounds (185.5 kilograms) to rub out American Paul Anderson's record of 407 pounds (185 kilograms).

Injuries Hit Habs Front-Line Unit

Fired-Up Hawks Ready

By LAURENT CHIASSON

CHICAGO (CP) — Montreal Canadiens face the prospect of tackling the fired-up Chicago Black Hawks in the fourth game of their Stanley Cup semi-final series tonight with two-thirds of a regular forward unit out of action.

Backstrom suffered a slight separation in his left shoulder and Geoffrion twisted his chronically gimpy left knee in the series' third game here Sunday night which the Hawks won 4-1.

Club physiotherapist Bill Head said Monday Backstrom "definitely" will miss tonight's game and may be finished for the rest of the series. The 26-year-old speedster was unable to raise his left arm, even after an injection of cortisone in the shoulder.

GEOFFRION DOUBTFUL

Backstrom and Geoffrion, playing on a line with Billy Hicke, were the only visible casualties of each other in the third period. But the extent of the injuries was not known fully until Monday.

To fill the gap, the Canadiens called up Keith McCreary, Gerry Goyer and Brown Jim Roberts from the Hull-Ottawa farm club of the Eastern Professional Hockey League. Goyer was to play both wings, but has no previous National League experience.

Coach Toe Blake of the Canadiens was disappointed about the injuries.

"It's one of those things," said Toe. "We just can't seem to avoid them."

Backstrom's loss is particularly costly. The Canadiens already are weakened down the middle as a result of Henri Richard's broken right wrist. Richard suffered the injury three weeks before the end of the regular season.

HAWKS HURT

The Black Hawks figure to be at full strength. They came out of Sunday night's game with only a few minor aches and pains and coach Rudy Pilous said he will start the same lineup as in the first three games.

He was especially happy about the performances of Reg Fleming, Murray Balfour, Ken Wharram and Ab McDonald in the third game.

"Fleming played an exceptional game," said Pilous. "He was Horatius at the bridge for us. When we were two men short in the second period, he took charge. His anticipation was great."

McDONALD ROBBED

McDonald, an ex-Hab, was robbed several times by Montreal goalie Jacques Plante and Balfour did a creditable job on the million-dollar line with Bill (Red) Hay and Bobby Hull.

Pilous earlier had expressed displeasure with Balfour's work. The right winger still is hampered by his right arm, fractured in last year's cup finals.

The Chicago coach said he doesn't plan any line changes.

"We checked them pretty well in Sunday's game. When you check this Montreal team it looks just like an ordinary club," said Pilous.

"But we can't let them inside our blue line. They're the classiest team in the league when they get in there."

HABS HAVE EDGE

The Canadiens didn't praise Pilous.

"I'm just as glad we didn't," said Toe. "Anyway most of the players don't need it."

Because of the injuries, rookie Gordon (Red) Berenson, just fresh off the University of Michigan campus, and veteran Don Marshall are expected to see more duty for the Canadiens.

Berenson has appeared in only seven professional games—four at the end of the NHL season and three cup games. He scored Montreal's lone goal Sunday night.

FIVE PINNED

NEW YORK (AP) — Maurice Podoloff, president of the National Basketball Association, Monday fined five players $50 each for "unsportsmanlike conduct." Sam Jones, Jim Loscutoff and Tom Heinsohn of Boston Celtics, and Guy Rodgers and Ted Luckenbill of Philadelphia Warriors were fined for punch-boxing incidents in Sunday's playoff at Boston. The Celtics won 112-104 to take a 2-1 lead in the best-of-seven semi-final.

American League Playoffs

NEW YORK (CP) — Dates were announced today for the preliminary playoff series in the American Hockey League.

The A series pits the two top teams of the league's divisions against each other in a best-of-seven meeting. Cleveland Barons won the Western Division and will go against Springfield Indians, defending Calder Cup champions and Eastern Division winners, in a series starting April 4 at Springfield, Mass.

Second game of the series will be at Springfield April 7 and the third and fourth at Cleveland April 8 and 11. If more games are needed they'll be at Springfield April 14, Cleveland April 15 and Springfield 18.

The B and C series pit the second- and third-place clubs in each division against each other in best-of-three battles. The winners of these playoffs will then battle each other in a series who will go against the A series winner in the clash for the Calder Cup.

The Series B Eastern Division playoff has Providence Reds against Hershey Bears going against third-place Providence Reds in a series opening tonight at Hershey, Pa. The second game will be at Providence, R.I., April 5 and the third, if needed, back at Hershey.

The Series C Western Division struggle pits Buffalo Bisons—the second-place finishers—against Rochester Americans, third in the division. The clash between the two New York state clubs open April 4 in Buffalo, continues April 6 at Rochester and returns to Buffalo April 8 if the third game is needed.

Plays Tennis 500 Feet Underground

WARSAW, Poland (AP)—Henri Cochet, former French tennis champion and one of the famous tennis "musketeers" of the 20s, played tennis 500 feet underground in the former salt mine of Wieliczka in southern Poland Monday.

"It was a unique experience," said Cochet after playing a few games with a group of Poland's top junior players, Marek Kudra.

"The court's setting is astounding. I have seen everything worth seeing where tennis is concerned, but I have never seen anything like this underground court, which provides almost perfect climatic conditions. It is better than any covered court can." Cochet added.

Cochet came to Poland to conduct training methods and to lecture.

The Wieliczka salt mine tennis court was opened four years ago. It is the world's "deepest-down" tennis court.

Western Hockey

EDMONTON (CP) — Billy McNeill scored in sudden-death overtime to give Edmonton Flyers a 5-4 win over Calgary Stampeders Monday night before 4,300 fans in the opener of the Northern Division finals of the Western Hockey League.

It was McNeill's second goal of the game. Other Edmonton goals were scored by Len Lunde, Roger DeJordy and Ed Royal. Calgary scorers were Ron Ingoldd, Wayne Hirsch, Sid Finlay and Doug Barkley.

WIN OPENER

WINNIPEG (CP)—Lethbridge Broders punished Winnipeg Ipsa Buffaloes on the defensive backboards Monday night to score a 76-68 opening-game victory in their best-of-seven Western Canada senior men's basketball finals. The defending Canadian champions dominated the first loss of the season after 26 straight league victories.

Stanley Cup Locked Up

CHICAGO (AP)—The Stanley Cup since 1926 the symbol of hockey supremacy, was locked up in the Chicago Black Hawks dressing room at Chicago Stadium Monday.

Meanwhile, Kenneth Kilander, 25, a Montreal Canadiens booster, was locked up in jail for trying to steal it Sunday night.

The Hawks did not press charges, but the police booked Kilander for disorderly conduct.

The cup is valued at $8,000 because of its long tradition.

Kilander, according to police, offered a police sergeant and an usher who stopped him $250 to let him take the trophy to a loop hotel to present to Montreal sports writers covering the Canadiens - Black Hawks Stanley Cup semi-final.

PROMISED $400

Police also said Kilander told them an unidentified man had promised him $400 if he delivered the cup to the loop hotel.

Kilander told police he lives in Montreal, follows the Canadiens on all their road games and finances his trips by paying the piano Police said he removed the cup while the game was going on before 17,000 spectators. The showcase housing the cup, which the Hawks won last year, is in the stadium corridor.

After the trophy was recovered, the Hawks placed it in its shipping crate, locked it and put it in their dressing room in the stadium.

The Hawks are considering putting it in the showcase with a guard posted, for tonight's game. But they may decide to keep it in the dressing room where players can gaze at it while pondering their fourth game of the best-of-seven series which the Canadiens lead 3-1.

Indians Get Ramos For Pair

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP)—Cleveland Indians got a sorely needed starting pitcher Monday by trading first baseman Vic Power and pitcher Dick Stigman to Minnesota Twins for Pedro Ramos.

The Indians, who have been having trouble in spring exhibition games, gave up one of baseball's finest fielding first basemen in Power. Stigman, a 26-year-old southpaw who was selected for the American League's 1960 all-star game, suffered a sore elbow in spring training last year and didn't pitch until May. He compiled a 2-5 record in 22 appearances.

Ramos, a 26-year-old right-hander, was workhorse for the Twins last year. He appeared in 42 games, winning 15 and losing 20, and had an earned run average of 4.64.

CHESTNUT EARNS DRAW

BUFFALO (AP) — Unbeaten Tony Labarbera of Buffalo and veteran Ike Chestnut, 31, fought to a 10-round draw in a lightweight boxing bout Monday night. Labarbera, who weighed 131 Referee Lou Scozza scored five rounds for each fighter and gave each five points after the judges split in their view of the fight.

NEW YORK (CP) — Toronto Maple Leafs can't write off New York Rangers yet.

The Leafs lead the best-of-seven Stanley Cup semi-final 3-1. That alone, plus the Rangers' lengthening injury list, makes Toronto the favorite in tonight's fourth contest.

But they must consider that: Andy Bathgate has yet to have a good game in the series;

Doug Harvey has yet to have a good game in the series;

And Gump Worsley is healthy, heady, and hot.

Should Bathgate - Harvey-Worsley and company find support from the same tough little men who produced in Sunday night's 3-4 Rangers' win, the Leafs could be in trouble.

MAY USE SULLIVAN

Those little men were Johnny Wilson, Guy Gendron and Dave Balon. And their ranks may be swelled by wiry Red Sullivan, player-coach at Kitchener-Waterloo, who may fill in for the injured Dean Prentice as the second or Al Dean's first-line left-wing spot.

The next two games after tonight—if two are needed—are scheduled for Toronto on Thursday and Saturday. The Rangers haven't won at Toronto this year. No one supposes they're going to start now—unless they've got the incentive of a 3-2 series.

Prentice injured his left knee in Sunday's game and will almost surely miss tonight's contest. Other Rangers who probably won't start are Camille Henry and Ken Schinkel.

Bert Olmstead and Carl Brewer are still out of action for the Leafs, but coach Punch Imlach isn't moaning about their absence.

WORRIED ABOUT BOWER

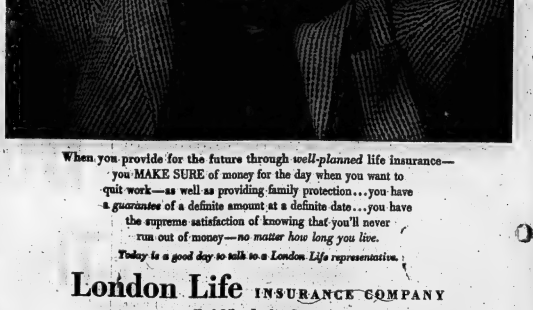
What he'd like to see is a better performance by big Frank Mahovlich and steadier goaltending by Johnny Bower.

Imlach indicated Monday that Bower will be playing to save his job tonight. Don Simmons is ready to step in should Punch again figure Bower is letting a few easy ones past him.

Rangers will have rookie Vic Hadfield substituting for Prentice on the first line with Bathgate and Earl Ingarfield tonight. And Rod Gilbert, up from Kitchener - Waterloo for Sunday's game, will be back with Balon and Wilson on the line that caused the Leafs the most trouble Sunday.

Sweeney Wins AHL Score Title

NEW YORK (AP) — Bill Sweeney of Springfield Indians has become the second player in the 26-year-old history of the American Hockey League to defend his scoring championship successfully.



The 27-year-old centre wound up the regular season with 40 goals and 61 assists for 101 points, official statistics showed today. He will receive the John B. Sollenberger Trophy, with a $300 bonus.

Last season, Sweeney was both with 108 points. The only other AHL player to win successive titles was Jack Markle of Syracuse in 1937 and 1938.

With five points during the last week's play, Sweeney finished six points ahead of Willis Marshall of Hershey, who was second with 95. Barry Cullen of Buffalo was third with 94 and Brian Kilrea of Springfield fourth with 93.

The top goalie—also for the second straight year — was Springfield's Marcel Paille, who allowed 115 goals in 45 games for a 2.56 average. Denis Dejordy of Buffalo led in shutouts with eight. Paille also will receive a league bonus of $300, plus the Harry Holmes Memorial Trophy.

Tessier EPL Scoring Champion

OTTAWA (CP) — Playing coach Orv Tessier of Kingston Frontenacs has won the Eastern Professional Hockey League's individual scoring title for the second time in three seasons.

The 29-year-old centre was officially crowned 1961-62 champion Monday when the league announced final totals. They showed Tessier, with 54 goals and 64 assists for 114 points.

Tessier, a native of Cornwall, has had brief flings in the NHL with Boston Bruins and Montreal Canadiens. He set a professional hockey scoring record in the 1959-60 EPHL season when he amassed 126 points on goals and 67 assists.

Two of Tessier's teammates took second and third places this season. Tom McCarthy had 53 goals and 43 assists, Bob Attersley had 96 points on 22 goals and 62 assists.

Cesare Maniago of Hull-Ottawa had the best goaltending record. In 68 of his team's 70 games he allowed 168 goals for an average of 2.47 per game.

In penalties, Sudbury was the top team with 1,078 minutes. The league badman is Dino Robazza of Sault Ste. Marie with 207 minutes.

Metals Win Rough Hoop Game

Belleville Crawford Metals thumped the Trenton RCAF Flyers 84-43 to even their Bay of Quinte semi-final playoff series at one game apiece last night.

The third and deciding game will be played at the air station Thursday night at 7.30.

Last night's game was rough and rugged and ended with hard feelings between the two clubs. RCAF blamed the loss on "poor officiating." despite the fact they had the game by more than 40 points.

Tripping and charging into the gym walls, as well as body checking and elbowing, featured the game. RCAF officials, looking after the scoresheet, refused to go over the scoring with Crawford officials after the game and individual point records are not available.

Crawford manager - coach Bert Hockings said the final score of 84-43 was approximately correct. Faulkner was the Crawford scoring ace, hooping about 30 points. While Fred Batchelor and Bill Green were in the 16-19 range.

Green and Faulkner were two of the Belleville players on the rough end of the action. Green was charged into the gym wall and suffered a badly bruised head while Faulkner was vicariously tripped while driving for a basket.

Frank Walker was the flyers' high point man, but no records were available.

RETAINS TITLES

Cooper, after being outboxed in the early rounds, opened up a cut over Erskine's left eye. Blood flowed from the wound, and the referee stopped the fight at the end of the ninth round of a scheduled 15-rounder.

The victory gave Cooper, of London, a 3-2 lead over Erskine after five meetings as professionals. They also meet in a series of fights as amateurs.

Never Emerged From Coma

Kid Paret Dies From Ring Injuries

Reel Off Six Straight Wins

Hot Chisox Nudge Yanks

NEW YORK (CP) — Benny (Kid) Paret, who fought his way to ring eminence with double-fisted, a strong chin and a buzzsaw attack, died in hospital today, the victim of a savage beating he received in a 12-round welterweight crown, March 24.

The Kid died at 1:26 a.m. He had never emerged from the coma into which he lapsed after being battered about by Emile Griffith of New York in the 13th round of their controversial bout.

His death was not unexpected. Doctors removed blood clots from the brain soon after the fight but held little hope for Paret's recovery. -

Last Rites

Paret's brother, Antonio, and his manager, Manuel Alfaro, were with the fighter when he died at Roosevelt Hospital. His 23-year-old wife, Lucy, and his mother had maintained a long vigil at the hospital but had left earlier.

Mrs. Paret has, a two-year-old son, Benny Jr., and expects another child in seven months.

Paret, a native of Cuba who built a heavily-muscled, bull-shouldered physique while working as a sugar-cane cutter for seven a day, was the third prize-fighter in the world to die from ring injuries this year. Sung Jae Hwang, South Korean featherweight king, and Sa-ngiam of Thailand were the others.

Paret absorbed brutal punishment in the Griffith match staged before a crowd of 7,500 at Madison Square Garden here and watched by others on television. Three months earlier he had been knocked out by Gene Fullmer of West Jordan, Utah when he moved from the 147-pound welterweight division to challenge Fullmer's 160-pound middleweight crown.

REGAINING STRENGTH

Boxing experts said the tough bout against Fullmer likely weakened Paret. He was still in meat for the 24-year-old Griffith. Griffith won the title with a knockout in their first fight April 1, 1961. Paret regained the championship on a split decision in a rematch last Sept. 30.

Griffith's record is impressive and most of his battles were slugfests against such rugged men as Don Jordan, Sugar Hart, Denny Moyer and Gaspar Ortega. Fullmer's manager, Marv Jenson, said of the Kid's death: "It is a great loss to boxing . . . Gene and I both feel Benny was one of the gamest fighters in the ring."

The tragic outcome of the third Griffith-Paret fight triggered widespread criticism.

Governor Nelson Rockefeller of New York ordered an investigation of the fight. The New York State Athletic Commission exonerated all officials—including referee Ruby Goldstein who handled the bout.

There was also an outcry for the abolition of boxing.

Much criticism was centred on Goldstein. Alfaro blasted him for allowing the action to continue as Griffith pounded away at the defenceless Paret in the 13th round.

CARRIED FROM RING

Griffith slammed Paret into the ropes in a neutral corner, then unleashed a series of more than 20 punches to the champion's head. Paret was rocked by many of the blows with his head nodded back and forth supported by the middle strand. He was carried from the ring on a stretcher.

Griffith said after the fight: "I didn't want to keep punching and punching. I just meant to keep hitting him when I had him hurt and that's what I did. I didn't realize I had such a lethal weight-in and during the fight. I'm very sorry now."

Later, as Paret clung to life, Griffith expressed deep sorrow. "I'm sorry now that I ever became a fighter. I guess I'll go on fighting some place somewhere, but I don't want to think about it. Everything has been a nightmare since Saturday night." Paret first won the title with a knockout decision over Jordan May 27, 1960. He made a successful defence against Federico Thompson, of Argentina in New York Dec. 10, 1960, but lost to Griffith last time out.

Fullmer said of his knockout win over the Cuban in the 10th round: "It was a guy so many times before he went out. It was not a fight to be followed by another tough fight."

During his seven-year career Paret was 31 bouts, lost 13 and had three draws. He was knocked out four times, was stopped on them coming in his last four bouts.

'To Beat Boston Decision'

Downes Must KO Pender

BOSTON (AP) — Terry Downes's manager says the only way the disputed middleweight champion can — and will—beat Paul Pender and the "Boston decision" is by knockout.

Sam Burns, the astute pilot of London's boxing bookmaker, made the remarks as both fighters were scheduled to complete sparring today for Saturday night's 15-round title match at Boston Garden.

This will be the third and rubber match between Downes — 5-year - old Englishman who learned boxing while serving in the U.S. Marines, and Pender, 31-year-old ex-fireman from suburban Revere. The difference is that Pender entered the first two bouts owning the 160-pound crown after defeating Massacesetts, New York and Europe.

Burns told reporters Monday: "You know blamed well that the officials next Saturday night aren't going to take it from my champion unless he flattens Pender. . . . Except you, you go your hear the same thing—the Boston decision."

"The Boston decision" was given as the reason the Floyd Patterson-Tom McNeeley heavyweight title fight went to Toronto last December instead of McNeeley's home area. Patterson's manager, Cus D'Amato, wanted no part of Massachusetts officials.

The thing is I know my fighter is going to knock Pender out," Burns said.

Woodbridge blanked Dixie Beehives 3-0 last night winning their series four games to two.

The Macs, who dropped a 5-3 decision in Waterloo Friday, will play in Woodbridge tomorrow (Wednesday) night at 8.30. The box leaves here at five o'clock.

Waterloo Siskins will play the Macs here Friday night at nine o'clock and Woodbridge will be here next Wednesday for an 8.30 tilt.

Coach Gordie Bell has called a practice for 5.30 tonight. Don Goodfellow a local junior-A player, will provide with the team and may see action tomorrow night.

The Macs' weakness to date has been the lack of bench strength, such was the case Sunday when the Siskins defeated Macs four-three goals to win in the third period after the Macs had led 3-2 at the end of the second.

King of the Hill

Ellis' triple included hard luck and bowled 4 pocket hits in each average, while Elliott beat his average (215) by 25 pickin per game. Ellis had 933 for four games, while Elliott had 980 for the four games.

South African Olympics

Compromise May Stop Ban

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP)—South African sports leaders said Monday they hoped for a compromise might be worked out to spare this country from being banned from the Olympic Games and other international competitions despite the government's re-emphasized edict against permitting mixed white and non-white competition.

Gen. H. B. Loppert, chairman of the South African Olympic Games Association, told newspaper men that when his committee meets Wednesday he plans to propose a compromise which would force the South African teams for the Olympics to be white and another composed of "worthy non-whites" under a separate manager.

The question remained, however, of how non-whites were going to prove themselves "worthy" with their lesser train. ing and coaching facilities.

OTTAWA (CP)—The government's second big step within five months in its policy of buying up and retiring some of its outstanding bond debt was announced Monday by Finance Minister Fleming.

He said $142,058,000 in bonds purchased by two government funds have been cancelled, effective March 31.

Of the total, $104,858,000 in government bonds had been acquired by the purchase fund which was established at the time of the last budget, June 30. The other $37,200,000 had been acquired by the securities investment account.

The amount of bonds retired is almost exactly the same as the $142,853,550 cancelled early last November.

Monday's announcement showed that the operations of the purchase fund have been larger than Mr. Fleming indicated in his June 30 budget, when he said the fund would have $100,000,000 to buy up bonds during the following 12 months. A total $164,967,000 in bonds now has been bought by the purchase fund and cancelled.

The cancellations announced Monday put only a small dent in the government's debt. The latest figure, at March 29, showed a total $18,732,000,000 in government direct and guaranteed bonds, treasury bills and Canada Savings Bonds.

Pearson Expects Announcement Of Election Soon

TORONTO (CP)—Lester Pearson indicated Monday night he expects a general election to be announced within days.

"The general election is close," he said, "I don't see more than that but I suspect first by the end of the week I will be able to say more."

Mr. Pearson spoke at a meeting of the Toronto Trinity Liberal Association that nominated Paul Hellyer as federal candidate by acclamation.

Mr. Pearson told the rally the prime task of a Liberal government would be to re-invigorate Canada after more than four years of Conservative "fumbling."

He drew the loudest burst of applause from an audience of about 750 when he said a Liberal government will introduce portable contributory pensions and a medical care plan "that will not be socialized medicine but will remove from people the fear of crushing medical bills they cannot pay."

Mr. Hellyer said Canada could supply power for the world from its uranium resources.

"We have supplied much of the uranium for the world's arsenal," he said, "now we could supply enough uranium for nuclear power to emancipate the people of the world" from economic want.

U.S. Places New Contracts In Canada

OTTAWA (CP) — The United States Air Force has placed a contract in Canada for a study on how to escape from a manned satellite, a Canadian government document revealed Monday. No details were given.

The 1961 annual report of the defence production also disclosed:

1. A feasibility study into the launching of test rockets from aircraft to altitudes of 20 miles at velocities up to 10 times the speed of sound. The speed of sound is about 760 miles an hour at sea level. The program may be connected with counter-missile research.

2. A Canada-U.S. development program for moored scoobuoys These devices detect submarines but so far have been employed by dropping them from the planes, helicopters and warships.

3. "Bomb toss" computers for the CF-104 low-level jet strike plane are being manufactured in Canada This means' the main armament of the CF-104 will be a bomb, not a missile.

TO MAKE PROPELLERS

4. Production facilities will be established in Canada for manufacture of noise-reducing five-bladed propellers for naval ships.

5. Devices to prevent electronic jamming of the Pinetree radar system are in production.

The defence production department said it placed $338,800,000 worth of defence contracts in 1961, 34.3 per cent below the $804,286,000 value in 1960.

The aircraft program accounted for the major part of the decrease — to $113,200,000 from $363,200,000 in 1960. Shipbuilding and ship repairing contracts declined to 7925,000 from $84,700,000 the previous year.

The report says all U.S. defence contracts placed in Canada, including subcontracts, were worth $142,600,000. It gives no comparable figure for all Canadian contracts placed in the U.S.

Heavily Guarded Ship Starts Welland Trip

ST. CATHARINES (CP)—The freighter Northern Venture started through the Welland Canal Monday as one of the most heavily guarded ships since wartime.

The vessel, operated by Upper Lakes Shipping Limited, was escorted by police from St. Catharines, Thorold, Thorold Township and private security police.

A car with two plainclothesmen from the same agency hired out the security police followed the ship along the route.

The Northern Venture 's manned by members of the Canadian Maritime Union (CLC). Last year it was the target of dispute and picketing by members of the Seafarers' International Union (Ind).

Upper Lakes officials denied that the Northern Venture or its sister ships, the Wheat King and the Hilda Marjanne, were being manned by armed guards. None of the guards is or will be armed, they said.

The company said the duty of the guards will be to warn police of any trouble. Some officials believe there may be trouble this year when the CMU attempts to place crews on more Great Lakes ships.

Meanwhile, police Monday arrested Robert McDonald, a member of the SIU who was wanted on a charge of carrying a dangerous weapon after a fight in a Thorold restaurant last year.

He was recognized by police as he stood with a group of seamen at a lock in Welland.

Persistent George Stevens Will Shoot 'Greatest Story'

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood had just about written off Stevens' version of the Christ story after: MGM financed and released King of Kings; 2. 20th Century-Fox production of the Biblical epic The Greatest Story Ever Told, the studio being unable to afford that and other epics.

United Artists saw it his way and agreed to back him.

"We'll start shooting in July," Stevens said when I dropped in for a progress report. "It's already got a location scouting crew looking around the country for places to shoot. They're in Utah now at a place called Bear Lake, which could double for the Sea of Galilee.

Wouldn't he save money by running away to Spain or Yugoslavia or Italy, where wages are cheap?

"Unquestionably," Stevens replied. "But the economic factor may not be as important in our picture as it is with other big productions. While we won't overlook the values of large backdrops, we are more interested in the human aspects of this story than in the spectacle."

He added:

"We also are talking to the extras' guild about changing the rules. The guild allows members in mob scenes only if they have modern dress. The minute they put on a toga or a helmet they must belong to the guild.

"We are making tests of the guilds and unions to make concessions without losing the things they have made."

Stevens expects to shoot 26 weeks for an undetermined cost. "It won't be as high as a Mutiny on the Bounty or a Cleopatra, he said. "It's not for whatever is needed to tell the story."

Only one casting is set so far: Max von Sydow, the long faced Swede who will play Christ.

Liberal Party Wants Control Of Expenses

OTTAWA (CP)—Liberal party promises of a ceiling on party election campaign expenses and payment into the party of expenses by the federal treasury were circulated Monday in a new Liberal party campaign pamphlet.

The pamphlet said the cost of elections "is reaching altogether excessive heights," and the party's purpose is to make it possible for every candidate to have a fair opportunity to put his case to the voters.

The pamphlet also promises to reduce the voting age to 18 from 21 in federal elections and to have the party affiliations shown on the ballots.

The policy declarations were approved at January's national advisory council meeting.

Trade-Expansion Bill Studied In Committee

WASHINGTON (CP) — A spokesman for the United States Aluminum Industry urged Monday that President Kennedy's trade-expansion bill be devised as a weapon to crack the British preferential system which gives Canadian aluminum a tariff advantage over the U.S. product in the United Kingdom market.

A House of Representatives committee, entering the third week of public hearings on the presidential bill, also heard appeals for higher tariffs against imports of cattle and beef along with imports of all goods from Communist countries.

Among the complaints was one by an American typewriter firm that a New York department store is importing typewriters made in Canada of parts produced and partially assembled in Czechoslovakia.

Edwin J. Graf, vice-president of Smith-Corona Marchant Incorporated of New York, said the Czech parts in the Canadian machines typewriters are produced "at prices substantially below those of Western European countries and the United States."

"We need and we feel that we are entitled to protection against competition from these Communist-made parts," Graf said.

Britain, for example, "imports duty-free Canadian ingot but duty-free from Canada and other Commonwealth countries but imposes a 10-per-cent ad valorem duty on aluminum semi-fabricated products such as sheet from Commonwealth sources, but other suppliers face a tariff of 17½ per cent, double the U.S. rate."

Hickman said new U.S. legislation should seek an end to restrictions that limit countries importing U.S. aluminum place an equal footing for U.S. exports as than the United States does on imports from those countries.

The American Original Cattlemen's Association said the U.S. imports a lot of beef and cattle, particularly from Australia and Canada, and suggested the president be enabled to restrict imports for sale for any U.S. cattle industry injured loss in a year of heavy imports.

'Window Shopping' Is Latest Parlor Game on Day TV

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—What television needs now, obviously, are some new quiz or parlor games from which to "adapt" ideas for daytime programs.

Ever since broadcasting decided that the time is certain womankind was to load the early schedules with soap opera, reruns of elderly nighttime programs and game shows, it has drawn constant inspiration from children's games.

I have feared network game shows of recent season directly Dialyanna, Ghost, Scrabble, charades, and sometimes to a combination of them. Most of them were puny, malcredit of forts and died quietly. The good game shows, the ones that entertained, survived, but usually they are not highly imitative.

"Window Shopping," a new midday game show that started Monday, bdrrows liberally from what must be the last unplayed parlor game—and after seeing the first show, it's obvious why the game was left severely alone.

The original game is the one in which a tray is covered with various objects and the participants are allowed to look for a minute or so before it is whisked away. The winner is the one who can write down the longest list of objects recalled.

TV's game substitutes photographs—fuzzy and so small the viewer must squint to see the effects—and the panelists recall what they can see. It's all extremely dull: If you want to watch a memory game, Concentration is much more interesting and better produced.

Perry Mason is still tapping the program's 1958 files for reruns, apparently believing that three years is long enough to forget who done it. And do you know, they are absolutely right — the viewer remembered the show but couldn't pinpoint the culprit.

Bright Future Is Painted for Northern Area

By JACK VAN DUBEN

OTTAWA (CP)—A bright picture of northern development—but one still shaded with lack of education and poor health—was painted Monday by Gordon Robertson, deputy minister of northern affairs.

Mr. Robertson, also commissioner of the Northwest Territories, sketched a bright horizon for the 500,000 people of the north colored by prospects of great mineral wealth and rapid connect over the 1,200,000 square mile.

But in his opening address to the two-day meeting of the Eskimo affairs committee he stressed the need for greater education and health facilities for the Eskimos.

Chief concern of the committee is the welfare of the some 7,000 Eskimos of the north, most of them living in the as yet unnamed territory that will be left with the formation of the new Mackenzie territory, approved at the January meeting of the Northwest Territories Council.

Search has been launched for an appropriate Eskimo name for the new territory, a comparatively bleak and barren area covering 730,000 square miles.

Larry Mackenzie UBC Head For 18 Years Retiring; Beloved by All Students

By NAT COLE

It was Nov. 28, 1961, the day after Dr. Norman Archibald MacKenzie, CMG, MM and Bar, QC, BA, LLB, LLM and holder of 17 honorary degrees, announced that he will retire July 1 after 18 years as president of the University of British Columbia. His successor is Dr. John Bartlet Macdonald, Keyes-ald Toronto-born director of post - doctoral dental studies at Harvard.

It wasn't so much the distinguished scholar the students were cheering as the down-to-earth, sympathetic leader whose benevolent rule has allowed thousands to get the education they want without the compelling yoke of discipline.

Larry MacKenzie is a self-made man and a waiter his charges to be that way. So he has given them plenty of rein.

REINS PAY OFF

"You run certain risks in doing this," he said in an interview. "But I've found that, in the long run, it pays off.

"Responsibility and personal experience are the quickest and most permanent and effective ways of educating young people that I know of. I do believe in self-discipline and the development of an ability to discipline oneself."

"Larry MacKenzie," says one of his colleagues, "is the absolute opposite of a stuffed shirt. There just isn't a phoney or flashy streak in his nature. His main trait is sincerity; but it's not a solemn, self - conscious sincerity. You merely sense that the guy is on the level with you, and that he means what he says. Yet he never really takes himself seriously."

'DANDY' PICTURE

A few days later, he got a letter containing a clipping of the picture and the unsigned note: "You can hardly be proud of this. It had been hoped that your arrival from the east would be a contribution toward the dignity of the institution . . . but it is quite obvious that you have done nothing more than pluralize buffoleness."

Dr. MacKenzie doesn't recall the meaning of the obviously uncomplimentary phrase, but still chuckles about it.

"I've always felt that when you should be on parade, you should be dignified," he says. "But when you're not, and you're taking part in activities of this kind, you should enter into the spirit of the occasion. After all, what is dignity? I think the students appreciated this thing."

It wasn't long after this incident that Dr. MacKenzie showed he can be dignified—and shrewd and businesslike—when the occasion demands it.

GOLF WITH PREMIER

Legend tells of a golf game he played with Premier John Hart in which Mr. Hart beat him but lost $5,000,000 to the university. But it didn't happen quite that way.

In fact, Dr. MacKenzie never mentioned money during the game and the premier was so impressed that he asked the president to drop over to Victoria to discuss university financing. The result was a $5,000,000 university grant at the next session of the legislature.

Dr. MacKenzie's ability to win by gentle persuasion was apparent long before he came to UBC.

S. N. F. Chant, dean of UBC's arts and science faculty, tells of attending a Toronto public meeting in the 1930's, when Larry MacKenzie was professor of law at the University of Toronto and was gaining prestige as a labor conciliator.

Prof. MacKenzie was billed as a speaker at the meeting and Dean Chant could hear two men in front of him wise-cracking about "long hair college sissies."

Then Prof. MacKenzie's six-foot, 190 - pound, broad - shouldered frame mounted the platform.

FARMED ON PRAIRIES

"Holy mackerel!" said one "He's a bloody big brutiser, ain't he?"

"They listened attentively and clapped like hell when the professor had finished," says Dean Chant.

Born Jan. 5, 1896 at Pugwash, N.S., Norman MacKenzie was descended on both sides from Scottish farmers, teachers and preachers who settled in Pictou County in the latter part of the 18th century.

He joined two of his three brothers and became chief cook and bottle washer on a pioneer farming venture in Saskatchewan. Four years later he came back with "experience, a good physique, about $50 and the clothes I stood in."

He entered Dalhousie - University at Halifax. At his initiation as a freshman, young MacKenzie was given the choice of singing, dancing or being tossed in a blanket.

"I knew they usually let you down when they toss you in a blanket. I wasn't much at dancing. I was worse at singing, but I sang a song which was rather popular at the time—it was The Wedding of Lauchie McGraw."

EARNED NICKNAME

He bellowed his way through seven verses before he could be induced to stop.

"It was such a success in the ridiculous sense that the word that my friends began to call me Lauchie, and within the week it became Larry."

The First World War interrupted his education after a year at Dalhousie and he spent four years in Europe with the Canadian Mounted Rifles and the 85th Nova Scotia Highlanders, winning the Military Medal and Bar for courageous action in a field outside Avignon.

Dean Geoffrey Andrew, for 15 years Dr. MacKenzie's deputy at UBC, says the retiring president still tends to look at the world from a private academic point of view.

"If you take a Scots Presbyterian Nova Scotian and roll him in the Flanders mud for four years, you've got the making s of Larry MacKenzie's permanent character," he says.

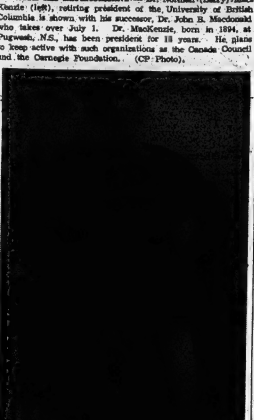
Returning to Dalhousie, MacKenzie earned a Bachelor of Laws degree and did post-graduate work at Harvard, Cambridge and Gray's Inn, London. He spent two years as a legal adviser at the International Labor Office in Geneva and then came back to Canada as associate and later full professor at the University of Toronto.

In 1928 he married Margaret Thomas of Toronto, financing his honeymoon with $60 he won at a stag - party poker game. They have three grown - up children.

After seven years as professor of international law at Toronto, he was appointed president of the University of New Brunswick, Fredericton, where he stayed for four years except for a stint as chairman of the Wartime Information Board, which earned him the CMG.

Dr. MacKenzie's expert knowledge of international law made him widely sought at international conferences, where he was many times Canada's official representative. He also served on numerous boards and commissions in Canada, including Massey royal commission of arts, letters and sciences.

When he took up his appointment at UBC in 1944, it had three faculties, 27 departments and 3,000 students. He will leave it with 11 faculties, 46 departments, seven schools, five institutes and an enrolment of more than 13,000.



But he doesn't plan to sit and vegetate in retirement.

"I've got on my desk pad plenty for the next two or three years," he says.

He hopes to do active work through such organizations as the Canada Council and the Carnegie Foundation, of which he is a member, and "it might even be that I could continue to be of some use to UBC in a retired advisory capacity—that would make me very happy."

WITH HIS REPLACEMENT — Dr. Norman (Larry) MacKenzie (left), retiring president of the University of British Columbia is shown with his successor, Dr. John B. Macdonald who takes over July 1. Dr. MacKenzie, born in 1896, at Pugwash, N.S., has been president for 18 years. He plans to keep active with such organizations as the Canada Council and the Carnegie Foundation. (CP Photo).

"NO STUFFED SHIRT — Dr. Norman MacKenzie proved he was no stuffed shirt shortly after his appointment as president of the University of British Columbia when he appeared at a school soccer game wearing a mortar board and open-necked sports shirt. Dr. MacKenzie retires July 1 after 18 years as president. (CP Photo).

Income Tax Explained

Written and designed for the taxpayer who is not in a position to employ the services of a professional accountant or visit an Income Tax Office.

By C. A. MILLER
Former Supervising Assessor
Income Tax Dept.

Each year there are a number of taxpayers who pay more tax than necessary, due to their having omitted to claim certain personal exemptions.

If the taxpayer is single, divorced, legally separated or a widow (er) and supports a wholly dependent person, the claim for such person is $1000, not the $350 or $500 which ever applies according to the dependants.

Of course certain conditions have to be met, in order to be allowed, the equivalent to married exemption. If the taxpayer is single and supports a father or mother in a dwelling maintained by the taxpayer, the additional exemption of $1,000 is in order. It is not necessary that the taxpayer reside there himself. If he fully maintains the dwelling, such as paying the rent, heat, light or taxes if he owns it, is all that is required.

If such a dependant is supported in a boarding house or other than a dwelling, the claim is only for $500. These conditions apply only when the dependant is a father, mother, brother or sister, including (in-laws).

If the taxpayer is a parent supporting a child, it is not necessary that a dwelling be maintained. The child may be single, either in or out of the country. All that is required is that the child be supported by the taxpayer. In all cases where the dependant child does not reside with the parent some form of proof of support should be attached to the return.

Separated persons claiming the equivalent to marital status on a dependent other than the spouse will be covered in a future article.

QUERIONES

Question No. 1 — I am single and I now have my widowed mother with me. She has no income. Do I claim $000 or $1,000 for her?

* * *

Answer: You are entitled to the equivalent to married status, that is $1,000 for her.

Reserves Fish When Leasing Land to Army

Clarence B. Lent, in charge of getting leases on 500,000 acres for military manoeuvres, said this restriction was attached to a lease agreement received by his office.

"There is in Kisatchie Bayou, which runs through the northwest corner of my land, a catfish estimated to weigh 20 pounds. Hole in which he stays has got to be placed off-limits by military personnel. When that catfish is caught I expect to be on the lease end of the line."

Another landowner stipulated the military must steer clear of a certain spring, which he said has "clear cold water that is especially good for the operation of a still."

Bus Service in Havana Has Nearly Ground to Halt

By GEORGE ARZELD

HAVANA (AP)—Board a bus in Havana these days and you stand a fair chance of getting nowhere.

The stalled bus with impatient passengers waiting at its side has become a common sight. So has the green and white, radio - dispatched emergency truck that busily scurries around to aid stranded buses.

The government - controlled press says almost 500 buses are permanently out of order. One report adds that on the average day 200 city transit units suffer breakdowns. Some still have only four times each day.

Most of the city buses are of American or British make. They are starving for parts.

For more than a year no automotive parts have come here from the United States. Britain now demands cash before shipping anything to Cuba.

To alleviate the grumbling of the city's passenger's lot, several schemes, designed to keep the number of circulating buses down, involved the

LABOR MINISTER HAS EASY TIME WITH ESTIMATES

Royal York Hotel Dispute Debated

TORONTO (CP)—Labor Minister Warrender presented his estimates to the legislature in a conciliatory mood Tuesday and found the opposition equally benign as his estimates of operations of his department.

The gloss was set when Mr. Warrender, after some gentle prodding, agreed with both opposition parties that management was being unreasonable in the Royal York Hotel dispute.

He said his intensive efforts to mediate the dispute bogged down when Canadian Pacific Railways, owner of the Toronto hotel, not only refused to reinstate 10 per cent of the strikers but would not give its reasons, even in confidence.

Mr. Warrender would not agree with a suggestion by Liberal Leader Wintermeyer that the government appoint a one-man commission armed with judicial powers to investigate the strike.

Mr. Warrender rejected the principle of judicial intervention when a strike is still in force.

ATTACKS 'COMPLACENCY'

Norman Dyson (NDP—Hamilton East) took his opportunity to slip in an attack on what he called the government's "incorrigible complacency and indifference" towards labor.

He urged the Progressive Conservative government to alter the Ontario Labor Relations Act, which he said helps employers evade and ignore contracts.

Mr. Davison said an ever-increasing number of firms are forcing unions to organize and seek new certification by simply changing their names.

He said companies such as Stauffer-Dobbie Limited of Galt, Heild Brothers Limited of Kingston, and the Toronto Feather and Down Company have had their names three times, yet their operations remain the same.

Mr. Davison said Ontario is an industrial province, yet only agriculture estimates at $17,000,000, are four times as much as the labor department's estimates.

PLANS LEGISLATION

Mr. Warrender rewarded the persistance of the opposition by revealing that the government plans to introduce legislation this session which will reflect recommendations of a royal commission on the construction industry.

In addition, he said, there will be a new Construction Safety Act incorporating suggestions from a second royal commission on industrial safety and from the newly-appointed Labor Safety Council of Ontario.

He said minimum wages will be included in the bill concerning the building industry but defined, to give details.

Crime Probe Is Hearing Underworld Witnesses In Secret Session Today

Gambling Kingpin Told Constable Deputy Attorney-General in Pay

TORONTO (CP) — Secret hearings are being held in Ontario's royal commission on crime today for the first time since the hearings began in late March.

Mr. Justice W. D. Roach, the commissioner, explained after Tuesday's adjournment that testimony of certain witnesses requiring anonymity will be heard privately, not to protect any individual who might be named, but "in the best interests of the commission."

Presumably, witnesses could be any one of a string of underworld or half-world characters whose names have been bobbed up through the eight days of hearings to date amid rumors of tip-offs and pacts by gamblers.

The commissioner said public hearings would be resumed Thursday but will be adjourned that evening until April 16.

Provincial Police Constable George Scott yesterday testified he had been told Deputy Attorney-General W. B. Common was getting "a lot of money from the gamblers" in Hamilton.

GAMBLERS ALLEGE

This was one of a series of charges made in evidence given by Const. Scott, of reports of payoffs to officials — most of them originating with gamblers or policemen in the pay of gamblers — and involving high names of. Assistant OPP Commissioner Eric Dodds, OPP Inspector Allan Stringer and former Sgt. John Cronin of the force.

Const. Scott spent several months, in 1960 concurring with gamblers in running down the sources of police tip-offs on raids by suspected gambling clubs.

The undercover agent's work led to two gaming and a policeman to jail, and two more, which the OPP anti-gambling squad raided.

Const. Scott's testimony dealt derived from gambler Joseph McDermott, a former agent — gambling squad officer in Hamilton — who in turn were convicted with gambler Sydney Allison, gambler-ex Vincent Feeley of illegally obtaining information from a police officer.

The deputy attorney-general was taking notes in the commission room when the name of Hamilton came as Const. Scott told of a conversation in Feeley's car with McDermott in May, 1960. At that time Mr. Common was taking gambling pay-offs with the consent of his superiors.

EXPRESSES DOUBT

Const. Scott said he expressed doubt to the gambler that Mr. Common would take pay. Mr. Dermott told him that, if he wanted to question of the deputy attorney-general's integrity, he must would be able to tell him what it was worth.

(OPP Commissioner, W. H. Kelly, said Friday he told this immediately to Mr. Common and the deputy attorney-general denied the allegations.)

The constable said McDermott said:

"Who is it that stopped you from using hammers on the dog (a Hamilton gambling Club) at Cookville? And why was it that the attorney-general's department stopped you from using that section of the Criminal Code that allowed you to examine fund-in cash under

Parliament At a Glance

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

TUESDAY, April 3, 1962

A government bill forcing corporations and unions to disclose certain financial details of Canadian operations was debated with little progress.

William M. Benidickson (Liberal—Kenora-Rainy River) said it "a pretty half-baked kind of statute, really just political window-dressing."

Erhart Regier (CCF—Burnaby - Coquitlam) said the measure "does nothing to restore the control of the economy to Canadians."

A bill giving Ontario nine more judges in Toronto and Hamilton after Justice Minister Fulton said the Ontario legislature had just passed a companion bill.

Senator David Croll's bill to compel consumer credit firms to fully disclose their interest charges was given second reading in the Senate.

WEDNESDAY, April 4

The Commons met at 2:30 p.m. EST to continue debate on government bills, starting at 8 p.m.

Govt. Can Call Election With Short Notice

OTTAWA (CP)—A new bill outlined to the Commons by administration Act may make it possible for the government to call a general election this year with less notice to the Commons than has been the general rule in the past.

The amendment widened the circumstances under which the government can pay its bills under Governor-General's warrants and guaranteed that the money spent will be reviewed by Parliament later.

Under the old law, Governor-General's warrants were to be used to authorize expenditures not previously voted by Parliament only in emergencies circumstances or emergencies, such as a threat to public health or safety needing immediate repair when Parliament is not in session.

Previously, there was no statutory guarantee that Parliament would be asked to approve the expenditure after it was made.

COVERS INTERIM NEEDS

When Parliament is dissolved by a general election before completing its business, the previous appropriations for the public service have been taken in the past for the government to ask the Commons for an interim supply bill. This covers spending authority for four to five months, usually April to August.

Mr. Pickersgill said the parliamentary status attending the election.

Little if any advance notice was given when Prime Minister Diefenbaker, elected in 1957 with a minority government,

Cramming Canadian Content in TV Into Afternoon Annoys Governors

WINNIPEG (CP)—The Board of Broadcast Governors was asked Tuesday whether it may be trying to provide too much too soon by forcing a specific amount of Canadian programming into afternoon television.

The BBG offered no direct reply to the rhetorical question, posed—and in effect answered with a shrug—by Canadian Association of Broadcasters, representing private radio and television stations across the country.

But board vice - chairman Carlyle Allison made it plain he and his 14 fellow governors don't like the idea of their 35-per-cent Canadian - content requirement being met on many stations by cramming afternoon hours with local-shows, leaving the evening free for imported United States programs.

Mr. Allison, former, editor of the Winnipeg Tribune, said the BBG is disturbed by the fact that some TV stations that don't have to compete with American stations are meeting only 25 per cent of their Canadian-content requirements in the evening.

That may be true, replied Don Jamieson of St. John's, Nfld., C.A.B. president, but the regulations were making a commendable effort to provide the amount of Canadian programs in the prime viewing periods but it in any business there would always be "mavericks."

"Perhaps the board can devise a means of dealing with these individuals without lowering the boom on the whole industry," Mr. Jamieson said. He said the BBG's proposed regulation would take much-needed flexibility out of TV programming.

PREMIER SPARKS HOT DEBATE AS PC MLA CLEARED

Leads Attack On Opposition

TORONTO (CP) — Premier Roberts sparked an hour-long debate in the legislature Tuesday in one of his most spirited attacks on the opposition this session.

His attack came during debate at the afternoon session when John Patterson (PC — Algoma-Manitoulin) was cleared of any impropriety in timber deals with the Ontario government some years ago.

The issue apparently decided by the committee's clearance, came to the surface when Premier Roberts released the two opposition party leaders of confidential" the committee.

Mr. Fullerton's right was questioned Dec. 16 when Elmer Sopha (Sudbury, NP) said in the House the Progressive Conservative member was involved through a company in which he was a partner—in dealings with the government.

CLEARS OF WRONG DOING

Mr. Fullerton was cleared of any wrongdoing by an 8-to-4 vote, with the Conservative majority voting in his favor and the three Liberals and one NDP dissenting.

Mr. Sopha's resolution rejected amendments from NDP member Donald MacDonald and Liberal Leader Lorne Wintermeyer.

Mr. MacDonald's amendment would have had the committee report state that Mr. Fullerton was "indiscreet" in getting involved in such a deal, and Mr. Wintermeyer's would have sent it back to the select committee brought out in the hearings to the Ontario Supreme Court for a judicial ruling.

Before the committee retired to consider its decision, both Mr. Fullerton and Mr. Sopha said they believed Mr. Fullerton's right to be legislature was not in question.

Mr. Roberts said Mr. Sopha had walked until Mr. Fullerton left the chamber last Dec. 14 before raising the question—without notice to the house—the eve of the Christmas adjournment of the legislature.

"That constituted a breach of privilege," Mr. Roberts said angrily, "and of decency."

Damage Estimates Mount Into Millions As Flood Waters Receding in Maritimes

HALIFAX (CP) — The most destructive floods to inundate the central Maritimes in living memory continued to recede slowly today as road and rail traffic began to approach near-normal conditions.

Estimates of damage—already in the millions of dollars—crept upward as mopping-up operations pointed to the full extent of destruction to highways, homes, farmland and community services.

In Sackville, N.B., the eastern New Brunswick university town of 3,000 which appears hardest hit by the flood waters, Mayor Ian Campbell said "one engineer told me it might be $1,000,000."

Highways Minister P. Hilly Matheson tentatively estimated road and bridge destruction in Prince Edward Island at $200,000 to $300,000. At least six bridges were washed out and others damaged.

In Moncton, where most of the flood water from a weekend rainstorm was all but gone, damage was expected to be as scarlly as Sackville's.

"The worst might be over," said the CNR which has been rerouting passengers, baggage and mail from Moncton to Amherst because of washouts near Sackville on its main line between Nova Scotia and New Brunswick.

However, the CNR's Spring hill subdivision in northern Nova Scotia is expected to be impassable until Thursday at least. Food waters have been hampering repair crews.

Receding waters opened the Trans-Canada Highway route at Oxford, N.S. A cross - country highway to northern Nova Scotia was still flooded and impassable at Pinehurst.

Highways were reopening to traffic in southern New Brunswick as flood waters subsided. Moncton police reported "general, silly good" traffic conditions, although a five - mile stretch of highway, outside the city was "still treacherous—and ignorable."

West Main Street in Moncton at one point submerged under 12-15 feet of water, was clear today but wide rakes of ice dotting the street had damaged several parked cars and crashed through fences and guardrails.

High Bay of Fundy tides, at first intended to swell flood waters along the N.S.-N.B. border area, have had little effect.

FINE PRINT IN GOVT. BILL GETS CRITICISM

'DesperateApology' Claim of CCFer

OTTAWA (CP) — The fine print in a government bill demanding financial statistics and income data from corporations and trade unions was peppered with opposition criticisms Tuesday in the Commons.

A "desperate apology" for poorly filling election campaign pledges, said Erhart Regier (CCF—Burnaby-Coquitlam).

"Empty" compared with last year's proposal which was not carried forward, said William M. Benidickson (L — Kenora-Rainy River).

It was suspicious in the first place that this was rather, half-baked legislation and I am more satisfied as we proceed that it is nothing really but political window dressing" — a action that might cost corporations $3,000,000 annually and yield information of little use to anyone, the Liberal added.

Justice Minister Fulton, defending the exemption of certain corporations on grounds they already must file much the same data, repeated that the bill is a first step in an effort to gain a picture of the extent and affect of foreign control in the Canadian economy.

The Commons was on clause-by-clause study of the bill and had reached the third of 18 clauses at Tuesday night's adjournment. It was to continue today.

Third and final reading was given a bill to add two Supreme Court judges and seven new county and district judges to the Mysterious Ailment Killing Dogs, Mamstay of Transport in North

OTTAWA (CP) — A mysterious ailment is killing off northern sled dogs—mainstay of the snow - swept Northwest Territories—by the hundreds.

Supt. W. J. Fraser, a veteran of the North and in charge of the RCMP's dog breeding program, said in an interview today that the dogs have died in the Territories, or will die.

"And we can't find out what's killing them," he said.

Bodies of the dogs have been sent to biological laboratories at nearby Hull, Que., for examination, "but the greatest in medical science apparently determine the cause of death."

Supt. Fraser, lanky native of Loggieville, N.B., who followed the force in 1931, said his own theory was that a bacteria had made the dogs too weak and they were dying under the heavy burden of their work.

Even today with the introduction of automobiles, aircraft and snowmobiles, the dog is an important transporter of goods and people in the territories.

RCMP patrols covered 44,287 miles by dog team last year alone. This compared with nine more disease-resistant than

Aleppo Rebels Make Peace, Promised Ties With Egypt

DAMASCUS (AP) — Syria's high command claimed a bloodless victory Tuesday night in the two-day Aleppo revolt. But it asked rebel regular army officers in their demands for close ties with the United Arab Republic would be realized.

The central army command announced it was ready to accept edicts that troops and officers in the northern city of Aleppo had proclaimed their loyalty had returned to barracks "without any clash or fighting."

Despite the claim that there had been no fighting, truck drivers who managed to cross over into Lebanon said they heard heavy gunfire from the vicinity of Aleppo around noon Tuesday. A number of planes arrived in Beirut from Aleppo reported that earlier in the morning rebel troops had fought with heavy fire against Syrian Air Force fighters that flew over the Aleppo airport.)

(Reuters news agency said reports reaching Istanbul, Turkey said 150 persons had been killed in Aleppo. There was no immediate confirmation.)

The military command's state, ment said there was no movement into the army ranks and tried to link its troubled waters and shed innocent blood have fled." They were not identified.

Things returned to normal in Aleppo and peace and order prevailed over the city," it added.

However, a curfew was imposed manned around all movement of people and vehicles in and except with special permission and continued the nine - hour nightly curfew. Syria's frontiers also remained closed.

Govt. May Ban Threatened Walkout of Hydro Workers

TORONTO (CP)—Premier Roberts said Tuesday night the government is considering legislation to ban the threatened strike of Ontario Hydro workers at midnight Thursday.

Mr. Roberts was asked if the government was drafting a stopthe-strike bill as he left a two-hour meeting with William Davis (PC—Peel), the Ontario Hydro Electric Power Commission's labor-relations chairman.

He replied "these things are always considered," but he refused to elaborate.

The Toronto Telegram says the government is arming itself with legislation, first of its kind in Ontario, to put the dispute over wages and working conditions into the hands of an arbitrator.

The story adds that the only question left to be decided is whether the arbitration will apply just to this Hydro dispute, to all Hydro bargaining, or to all bargaining involving public utility workers in the province.

The government will take no action today pending the results of a last attempt by Labor Minister Warrender to settle the dispute by negotiation.

Mr. Warrender has tried three times, since Monday to make headway in his mediation talks, but with no success.

The key issue of wages remains, described by The Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission is offering a four-per-cent increase over two years with the first two per cent retroactive to April, 1961.

Local 1,000 of the National Union of Public Service Employees, (CLC) has demanded an eight-per-cent increase over two years with the first four per cent retroactive to April, 1961.

The Telegram says the government is reluctant to introduce the arbitration legislation

Appreciation for outstanding efforts in the promotion of co-operative insurance and security expressed by the Co-Operators Insurance Association with the presentation of a plaque to the Hastings County Federation of Agriculture.

The plaque was presented to Mr. Ross Ketcheson of Madoc township, chairman of the insurance committee of the county federation, at the spring conference in Toronto.

The Co-Operators Insurance Association was formed in 1946 by the Federation of Agriculture, The United Co-Operatives and The United Grain Growers.

City Firemen Get Increase In New Contract

Belleville city firemen will receive a 5% increase payable retroactive to January 1, 1962 under an agreement with the city, Controller Al Council was told Monday by Alderman William Jervis, chairman of the personnel committee.

Council voted to approve of the new agreement between the city and the Belleville Professional Fire Fighters Association, Local 497.

Alderman Jervis said the agreement, to run for two years, "is somewhere in the area" as the previous agreement. The pay increase is effective as of June 30th, when the present contract will expire.

Council was told that "extravagant" fringe benefits originally made by the firemen had been cut back to less than two per cent from 10 per cent.

Another personnel committee recommendation that all persons presently employed by the city must retire on reaching their 70th birthday be referred as of June 30th, was tabled at the request of the Public Works Guild.

An executive representative of the Guild appeared at the personnel meeting and said the recommendation was tabled to give the executive the opportunity of discussing the matter.

The request was granted by council.

Royal Flush Given Toilet, Tonsils Dry

The man felt the toilet needed a spring cleaning — and decided to do something about it.

So he, a city resident, hied himself to the nearest cleaning emporium and purchased a bottle of disinfectant.

In the same store Mr. Fix-it also found what he needed: a spring flushing so he purchased one of those vials called "mickeys" at the city liquor outlet.

Returning to the scene of operations he was about to give the toilet a dose of cleanser, when he was called away.

It was dark when he returned, but remembering what he had to do he dumped the bottle of cleanser into the toilet.

Some time later he decided to flush his tonsils and, wait about to gargle some of the liquid which he stowed suddenly.

The bottle he held was the toilet cleanser. He had dumped the tonsil "oil" into the toilet.

He stopped just in time.

Does swallow should have made him "spring."

Will Re-Surface Dundas Street This Summer

Estimated cost of re-surfacing Dundas Street, East, from Pinnacle Street to Bleecker Avenue, scheduled to be completed this summer, is estimated at $36,045.

Council Monday authorized signing an agreement with the Ontario Department of Highways for a highway connection, which will be used for the project. On such a highway link the city receives a 50 per cent subsidy.

Alderman Walter Elliott questioned the advisability of re-surfacing the street until the new sanitary trunk sewer to the east end of the city was completed.

Mr. Fulton, chairman of the special sewage project committee, said the new sewer would be built along an old railway right-of-way and would not follow Dundas St.

He said there would be no necessity for digging up Dundas Street, either for construction of the sewer or for connecting of laterals.

Then Mr. Fulton did not wait "any great public scrutiny" as he had the justice minister also should have told the House about certain representations he had received from the Canadian Labor Congress and others in connection with the measure.

Mr. Howard replied that the minister's accusation was "the New Democratic party is under some dictation by a group of people is "entirely untrue and unfounded."

"It is true that we have a relationship, like many political unions which may so desire to become related to us, but we do not like to be told what to do which goes around by the back door and against the wishes of from this government.

"We will not like the hon. gentleman who makes special representations for tax evasion situations for individual friends of his on the west coast.

Mr. Fulton, during the direct reply to Mr. Howard's charges, said he recognized the CCF member "is hard put to it to restrain his venom, and therefore I make no apology in kind."

The government had placed its proposals before the house and did not intend to be sidetracked "by the venting of the spleen of the hon. member for Skeena, who which we say, unfortunately, becoming accustomed."

Earlier, in answer to a question by Mr. Howard, Mr. Fulton told the Commons he had recently received a representation from certain professors of the Queen's University faculty of science department. They supported the bill's principle but were concerned that public and academic researchers would be denied access to part of the information submitted to the government by corporations.

He had also received a number of representations from companies, the Chamber of Commerce, and the CLC. These had not been as critical as the views presented in connection with a similar government measure which died on the order paper at the last session. The public committee said the bill, in its present form, may not meet all the changes sought by the CLC. However, the brief had been carefully considered.

IN MEMORIAM

CRONKRIGHT. — In loving memory of a dear father, Carleton C. Cronkright, who passed away April 4th, 1961.

What would I give if I could say,
Hello Dad in the same old way;
To hear your voice, see your face,
To sit with you and chat awhile,
To tell you who have a father,
To you with care;
For you'll never know the heartache
We've known.

Will you see his vacant chair,
Hear his voice singing by his son
Douglas and family, daughters
Marion and Mrs. Ronald Bird.

CRONKRIGHT. — In loving memory of our dear father, Carleton C. Cronkright, who passed away April 4th, 1961.

What we would give if we could say,
Hello, dad in the same old way;
To hear your voice, see your face,
To sit with you and chat awhile,
To tell you who have a father,
Cherish him with care;
For you'll never know the heartache
We've known.

Will you see his vacant chair,
Hear his voice singing by his son
Harry and family.

SPENCER. — In loving memory of a very dear husband, Garnet, who was killed while operating an army vehicle April 4th, 1960.

Yet God knew best.

CRONKRIGHT. — In loving memory of our dear father, Carleton C. Cronkright, who passed away April 4, 1961.

We often think of you dear father,
When we were all together.
The family circle seems now,
But memories will live forever.
We miss you more than words can say,
And feel the heartache every day.
Just sacred memories of a loving father,
—Sadly missed by wife Stella, children Dale, Ray and Evelyn.

Ameliasburg

Hay Barn Burns

Fire completely gutted a barn on the 2nd concession of Ameliasburg Tuesday afternoon.

The Belleville Fire Department was called to the scene but was unable to save the barn. It is believed the fire had been burning for some time before the alarm was given.

Mr. Cairns was said to have had $2,000 insurance on the barn but nothing on the contents. No other buildings were endangered by the blaze.

Around The Tee

The trading season at the Quinte Curling Club was officially closed over the week-end with the awarding and distribution of prizes, won in the Northern District bonspiel that continued for a week prior to the closing. Mr. D. A. J. MacDonald (president) manager of the plant, was on hand to present the Macdonald trophy and the accompanying prizes to Mrs. Jean and Mac Murray and Mrs. Patsy and Hal Bonnell, who were the winners of spiel. The winning rink won all their games but looked impressive during it and were congratulated by the large crowd for their fine showing against stiff competition.

A hot show with the president Robert and Mrs. Lanning as judges brought down the house. When the spiel started Mr. Lanning brought a number of hot balls from the factory of all hues and shapes and all were invited to decorate their own hats to their own taste and the winner would be suitably rewarded. Some real originals showed their decorated hats and Mrs. Jim Cowan was the winner. The whole evening was closed with a dance and a buffet luncheon served by the local caterers in their usual fine style.

There were four three-game winners and the runners-up to the winning group were Mrs. Selby Ajeye, Everett Black and Mr. and Mrs. Mac White. The next rink was Mrs. Ken Hall, Anne Stein, Hazen Stairs, Mrs. Lorraine Allen, Stan Cook and Kirkwood as skip, while the fourth rink was Mr. and Mrs. Gil Washington, Mrs. Cecil Mitts, Ken LaPain. The two-game winners were rink of Mrs. Seiber, Pat Houston, Mrs. Jessie Barber and Charles Cox, while the next rink were Mr. and Mrs. Freeman Burrows and Mr. and Mrs. Stan Bonnell.

The one-game winner was Mr. and Mrs. William Cook and Mr. and Mrs. James Walker with the runners-up Mrs. Pat Moss, Fred Deacon and Mr. and Mrs. Jack Cook. Curling will be over

False Signal

The suspicion that man may be too smart for his own good, which must have been haunting many a military man since the first engineer was hoist by his own petard, is strengthened by a Washington Star story, confirmed by U.S. Strategic Air Command headquarters.

It is said, at the height of the Berlin crisis the men whose fingers hover over the buttons which could make our earth as barren as the moon actually believed Russian missiles were speeding towards this continent.

They had the best of reasons for this belief. The Ballistic Early Warning System had reported all missiles in flight. Somewhere, carrying hydrogen bombs, rushed to the runways of U.S. bases all over the world. True "we contacted the Ballistic Early Warning system at Thule, Greenland, and learned it was still there and had not been attacked. Then we knew it was a communications problem. But what if another communications problem had arisen, and contact with Thule had not been established? True, SAC bombers could be recalled. But retaliatory missiles, had they been fired, could not.

SAC and the Pentagon kept this story quiet, we are told, for two reasons, because SAC wanted to find the cause of the communications break responsible for the false alarm and correct it before a potential enemy could find any possible advantage in the malfunction, and because the Pentagon feared that the public would think mistakenly that the U.S. had gone to the brink of war due to an error.

One can hardly blame SAC and the Pentagon for their silence at the time of the incident. Nevertheless, we think the Washington Star has performed a public service by its enterprise in discovering the occurrence and reporting it. Publicity now serves two useful purposes. On the one hand, it provides comforting reassurance that the men who hold our fate in their hands observe appropriate caution in accepting the evidence provided them by the marvelous scientific devices at their service. On the other hand, the report reminds us again, if we needed such additional warning, that nothing man makes is perfect, that things go wrong even when the most carefully serviced machinery. If we add to this the fact that co-incidences have long been accepted to be the very devil, the law of chance suggests that the world cannot regain indefinitely "under the gun" without some horrible, perhaps fatal, mischance.

Emergency Measures

It was recently announced in Parliament that in the event of a nuclear attack the government would be split into several sections with the ruling authority for the country to belong to those who survived.

The principle of not putting all of one's eggs in one basket, or one fallout shelter) is a sound one but we would question the advisability of allowing the surviving members of the government to assume the control of the country.

It would seem that a concerted effort of all members of the Commons would be necessary and that the best manner in which to achieve this, especially taking into consideration that the best of what is left should be utilized, is through a provisional coalition government.

This would be the only reasonable manner in which the views of the people could be recognized until such time as the missing representatives can be replaced.

New Cure

In London, a British doctor has reported that a 45-year-old husband developed asthma because he was allergic to his wife. He was not until the death of the wife, "a formidable and overpowering lady," that the doctors made this discovery. "The day the wife died, her huband's attacks of asthma stopped and he has never had an attack since."

There once was a poor man with asthma
Had a wife gave as many orders as ma
But when she went to her coffin
It ended his coughing
A cure which may be cheaper than plasma.

The Tibetans call it Chomolungma, and to the Nepalese it's known as Sagarmatha; but to the outside world will always be known as Everest.

Ironically, the man who gave his name to the mountain, Sir George Everest, never set foot upon it, probably never saw it even from a distance, but he happened to be the Surveyor-General in India when the peak was first triangulated in 1865, and so the name stuck.—John Morris, who was a member of the 1922 and 1936 Everest expeditions.

Why Are There Many Different Churches?

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer.

Being a faithful reader of your columns and appreciating your publications, I have been prompted to speak out on a seemingly controversial subject. Why so many churches? Upon giving an invitation to my acquaintances to enjoy a church service with us, I have heard, "there are too many churches," "which church is right?" "Everybody worships the same God, but no one seems to agree." I am inclined to agree with these statements.

But—it was not always so. What seems to be the problem then? Why all this religious division? Could it be a deviation from Bible teachings? Could it be a let-down on religious conviction? Could it be a decline in the standard of holiness? Could it be that program has been over emphasized and that God used to do? Let us answer the question Why?

When the original church was started as recorded in the 2nd chapter of Acts, it was started with the Supernatural Power of God stimulating the holy truth, taught by the Apostles, preached by those who desired His blessing. They were with "one accord"—they were unified in that God had for them. Persecution came soon after Pentecost and these Christians were scattered abroad but as they went they preached what they had seen and heard. Then in 325 A.D., Constantine the Great, attempted to liberate the church, but in so doing, plunged it into the dark ages. The Reformation was to save it, here it remained, then in 1517 A.D. Luther protested and fought against the folly of error and proved to the world that "justification by faith" was the truth. Many other reformers appeared on the scene, churches were erected on their teachings even beliefs. Man's ideas were formulated into creeds. Sometimes each group felt they "had it." Many times they became sincere in error until today very few churches hold to the entire beliefs of the Bible. This is much to be compassionating. Many people are without common sense tells them that everything must be right with their ideas, creeds and doctrines.

The answer is found only in the Bible. Not in your preacher's opinion, not in books of fairy tales; not in an organizational form; not in your grandfather; not in your preconceived ideas, but in the Bible.

Prefers Clean Streets

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer:

After listening to our council meeting this week I am beginning to wonder if we couldn't be a good idea to put a few high school students down there at City Hall for a few days, look less ridiculous. Alderman Digby seems to be the only one with any sense and thank goodness he has the courage of his convictions to stick up in spite of all opposition.

I am grateful of course about the ceremonial robe that was bought for the Mayor. Don't you think that he has been made enough foolish mistakes in the past few years? I lived the hockey scandal (Mayor Hall) without making a laughing stock of himself, while we, the citizens, continue to pay higher and higher taxes.

I would like to suggest that instead of a robe for the Mayor we employ a few more street cleaners this summer to clean up the litter in this city. At least these the main arteries, Dundas Bridge Street is one of the prettiest in the east and one of the dirtiest. I think the few digitalaries that visit this city would be far more impressed with the cleanness than with the type of clothing our Mayor is wearing.

A disgusted taxpayer.

STRENGTH for the DAY

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

LIFE'S DEEPEST SECRET

The word "compassion" is a common word in the Christian gospel. It was said of Jesus frequently that "he was moved with compassion," or that he had compassion on the multitude in his ministry.

This word comes from two Latin words which mean "to suffer with." The compassionate person is the person who has the capacity to suffer with his fellow men. His heart is stabbed as he looks upon their misery. He experiences in his own life the pain they are experiences in his own life the pain they are experiencing in theirs. He has compassion — on the sorrowful, on the suffering, on the fearful and broken.

If we want to go through life as stark individuals we can do so. We can make it a policy always to look out for number one — and let no one else. We can toss our heads aside and say insomuch as we did not cause the trouble which carried people experience it is not up to us to take any steps to alleviate that suffering. "It's none of my business. They got themselves into it — let them get themselves out of it. I refuse to get mixed up."

This is understandable, but it is understandable only because we all have a selfish streak in us a mile wide. Of course we don't want to be bothered with other people's troubles and for the simple reason that the inner workings of our souls are clogged up with a lot of selfishness and self-love.

But the secret of life is compassion. Learn it.

Explanation Given Of Drum Corps' Visit

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer.

Since trying to form a Drum Corps for the city of Belleville, we have received many letters asking what is the meaning of Drum Corps. To enlighten the public, the following is a brief description:

Drum Corps — To many spectators seeing a Drum Corps for the first time, we wish to point out a few important facts.

The music they hear is played on a simple one-value bugle. To master the intricate arrangements of the musical score requires hours of rehearsal all year round. Throughout the winter months each corps practises twice a week. When May and the good weather roll around, they go to a field for five-hour rehearsal on the weekends. Individual or group practices are again added to this, as well as weekend contests, shows and parades. Therefore, you can see that each member spends most of his time endeavoring to perfect the intricate routines and music that you see on the field.

This is strictly a hobby with these men, much like fishing or golf and they receive no remuneration for their time or services. The only reward is the honor of winning and most of all your appreciation and support.

In the United States most of the Corps are sponsored by the American Legion or Veterans of Foreign Wars. In Canada Corps are supported by various groups, such as service clubs, the armed services, civic organizations and educational bodies.

A drum corps competition brings together corps from other cities and towns. This enables each corps to show their ability, as well as showing the public the tremendous advancement of drum corps.

As many other cities and towns in Eastern Ontario already have a top-rate corps, we ask the people of Belleville to get behind and support our Corps for this city.

What Exactly, Determines Ones Success?

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

I had a luncheon date with a friend of mine who is a doctor. As I approached the table, he was sitting there looking glum and dejected.

"What's the matter?" I asked.

"This," he said, pointing to a magazine advertisement in front of him. It was an ad for Imperial cars, headed: "To America's 5,344 Leading Doctors." The ad said: "In the next few days you will receive a letter or a phone call offering you the personal use of a new 1962 Imperial."

I looked up at my friend, "So what?"

"That ad came out a month ago," he said, "and I still haven't received a letter or phone call from Imperial. I'm a medical failure."

"How many doctors are there in the country?" I asked.

"Oh, about 280,000," he said. "So the ad is apparently aimed at the best 5,344 of them. I did they arrive at the exact figure of 5,344?"

"Don't worry," I said comfortingly, "you may be among the 5,345. It's no disgrace to miss by only one. I don't think the A.M.A. or your specialty board will look down on you for your omission. You still have a chance with Cadillac. Or maybe the Continental people will get in touch."

He didn't seem reassured. "I am a leading doctor," he protested. "I'm springing voluntarily to his own 'Last Word,' I grossed nearly $100,000. My own home-town, Who's Who listings, a diversified stock portfolio, two cars, a boat, and am in Who's Who in the World, Business Journal, Business Week, Dun and Bradstreet Reports and Fortune. What more do they want?"

"I don't know," I said soothingly, "We have to find out on a case-by-case basis. Most lucky doctors were chosen for a first trial in the Imperial. Maybe it's not the gross amount you make, but the number of patients you are assuming that really counts with them."

"I'm a dermatologist," he said. "I treat a great many of the 200 a week, not counting clinic patients, that I have seen over the years. I have seven cubicles in my office, and they're all filled all the time. You can't be busier than that."

"No, you can't," I agreed. "Oh, perhaps you're not on Imperial's black list somehow. They can't sell a car to every doctor, you know. Somebody's got to have people pointing out the unsuccessful physician who rides around in a Rolls Royce. The public image of the car is all-important."

"I realize that," he said ruefully, "there is something in my past — but I don't know what. I've always paid my A.M.A. dues on time. I've regularly written to my congressman about medical welfare measures, and kick in annually to my hospital's building fund."

Prescription Abbreviations Understood by Pharmacist

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: What does "t.i.d." mean on a prescription? And some of the other abbreviations? Why not change to plain English? — E.J.P.

"T.i.d." means "ter in die," which translated into three times a day. Sometimes just "t.d." and "ter die" are used.

Several hundred Greek or Latin terms or abbreviations are used in prescriptions. The custom started when these were the "learned languages" of scholars. After all, while the art of drugs and prescriptions has been for several decades in a fantastic state of growth, pharmacy is thousands of years old.

So (I suppose) we just kept on using terms which had come to be generally accepted among people in that phase of activity.

There are some good reasons for continuing to do so. One is brevity. "T.i.d." is a lot quicker to write than "three times a day." Or "b.i.d." for twice a day.

A pharmacist understands these abbreviations. The terms have become the "language of his profession." In turn, he puts a little label on the bottle with such directions as you and I will need: "One capsule three times a day," or "Two teaspoons b.i.d." the classic abbreviation for aqua, or water, Why change, so long as everyone understands?

"P.C." is "post cibos," or after meals. "A.C." is "ante cibos," come to mean right eye or "oculus dexter," and "O.L." is left eye. "O.U." means each, or both. "Aa" means "of each."

No doubt we could devise a new set of abbreviations — but this would take time, and I suspect that the confusion in particular advantages over the present system.

It is the same in a good many other things, too, you yourself. What does "a.m." or "p.m." mean? We could Anglicize it to "b.n." and "a.n." — before noon, but why should we? And such nicknames as "B.C." or "A.D." We could change "per cent" to "per hundred."

We use such an expression as "contra-indicated," meaning "against the evidence we have," because it's short and clear.

But believe me, as intricate as the art of medicine and drugs has become, no pharmacist need do anything at all to make it more esoteric. It might be worth mentioning, at that here, is a need for young people to take up the study or training for all the technical, scientific and professions related to medicine. We need people who have what it takes to learn these demanding professions.

Dear Dr. Molner: My husband has a bloy in his eye. Sometimes, while driving he will pull over to the side of the road and will until he can see better. He is 72 but in good health except for overweight. What should be done about this? — Mrs. E.T.

This is a potentially serious symptom and should be investigated. Causes may range from eye disease to a heart or circulatory trouble. So have him see his doctor.

Dear Dr. Molner: I find that I can go to sleep easily if I imagine I am gazing at a lot of green leaves, and trying to count them, or counting sheep as they jump over a fence. Also if I count backward, 99, 98, 97, etc. W.J.

Such simple measures often work. Too many people have them aside because they "sound too easy."

Buffalo Coat Indispensable

Montreal Star

The dwindling breed of diehards who believe that the real thing is better than any synthetic will receive comfort from the experience of the Canadian Arctic force, which is buying 20 new buffalo coats (at about $120 each) because they can't find any satisfactory alternative.

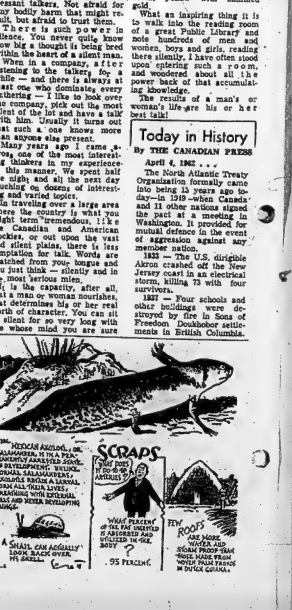
This is the more interesting because the buffalo coat falls somewhat short of perfection. Aesthetically it is plain horrible: the Canadian Army officer muffled in it against the constants gale at Portage and Main looks like a stray from the muskox herd; his constabulary dignity is destroyed further, the thing is as attractive to Clear as was the buffalo which originally wore it. It is hard to clean, and cleaning is all the more necessary because it collects up five or more pounds of extra weight from the salt and sand clogs flung up by passing traffic.

Technology has sent men into cold places all over the world, penetrated the innermost secrets of the atom, and even produced a synthetic better mousetrap. But when it comes to clothing for men behind the prairie winter the job is still best left to nature.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

THE INCESSANT TALKER



Ever since I was a small boy, I have been afraid of incessant talkers. Perhaps it is because nobody harm that might result, but because I am afraid of them.

There is such power in silence. You never quite know how big a thought it might be within the heart of a silent man. You, in a meeting, or a car listening to the talkers, for a while — and there is always at least one who dominates every gathering — I like to look over the company and see the most silent of the lot and have a talk with him. Usually it turns out that such a man is more clever than anyone else present.

Many years ago I came across one of the most interesting thinkers in my experience. His manner, we passed half the night and all the next day touching on dozens of interesting and varied topics.

In travelling over a large area where I could see what you might term "tremendous, it's a big country" I was constantly snatched from your tongue and your thinking and support from your serious men.

It is the quality, after all, that a man or woman nourishes, that determines his or her real worth of character. You can't be silent for so very long with one whose mind you are sure

The PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

Part of the fun of taking a motor trip through some of the remoter and less familiar regions of the United States is in observing the differences between them and the more known and the Canadian way of life. Some of the smaller differences are the most interesting. For example, throughout the southern states you never find clothes hooks in the closets of hotels and motels. Nothing but a bar generously supplied with wire or wooden hangers for your clothes. And nary a book even in the farthest corner of the closet, on which to hang your pyjamas or your hat. When I asked various hotel employes about this, they assured me nobody wants to hang their clothes on a hook. Not even last year, Mr. Hats should be laid on shelves.

And oranges? You can travel a thousand miles through states that are less than three hours' drive from centres of all the oranges of the new world, and you will get no orange for breakfast. Tinned orange juice, yes. Frozen orange juice, yes. Fresh orange, no.

At one otherwise excessively up-to-date motel I asked the proprietor about this orange business.

"Fresh fruit," he assured me, "is so much more nuisance, compared to the canned."

What's on Your List Of Favorite Dislikes?

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP)—Who are you?

You can tell a person not only by what he is for but also by what he is against.

If you want to play an interesting game with yourself, sit down someone with a pad of paper and write down a list of things you dislike.

It is a form of poor man's psychiatry. It will help tell you what kind of a person you really are. If the list is too long, maybe you're finicky. If it is too short, Maybe you're wishywashy.

Here is an off-hand catalogue of things that rile me, annoy me or make me wish I were somewhere else:

Bus drivers who, when you give them a dollar bill, hand you back 30 nickels in change.

Lamb, mutton, brussels sprouts, venison and caviar.

Hostesses who introduce you to another guest with the remark, "you two should get along famously — you have so much in common."

People who try to top your last funny story—and do.

Mongrel dogs. Any German shepherd dogs that aren't. Great Dane dogs that won't sit on your lap, and hot dogs that aren't all beef.

UNDERSTOOD EGGS

Husbands named Smith or Brown who always speak of their wives as "Mrs. Smith" or "Mrs. Brown" instead of "my wife."

Millionaires who tell you disarmingly that "I'm just a poor little country boy trying to get along."

Kindergarten children who can recite every ZIP laden-filled commercials blindfolded — but can't remember the last two lines of Little Bo Peep.

Skinny secretive, skinny slacks, and skinny executives in ivy league - type suits so tight they look like skin divers.

People whose idea of how to be a winning conversationalist is to ask you modestly: "How do me about yourself."

People who insist on to your lapels and start every sentence with either, "d'ya know?" or "d'ya get me?"

Women, who talk about baseball and football as if they knew more about them than I do—and it turns out they do.

Me, who—

But enough about me. "How do you like me so far, myself." What's on your list of favorite dislikes?

Kingston Firm Gets Contract For $1,126,500

KELOWNA, B.C. (CP)—Premier W. A. C. Bennett of British Columbia announced Tuesday that Canadian Vickers Limited, Morse Ltd., Kingston, Ont., has been awarded a $1,126,500 contract which will assist the new B.C. government ferries.

The Canadian firm won the contract after the federal government agreed to pay the public 50-percent subsidy on the cost.

A telegram from Transport Minister Balcer informed the premier that the federal subsidy would not be paid on British engines offered by the low bidder, Paxton, Hingley and Hornsby, at a price of $1,066,000.

The subsidy payments will amount to $533,000 and $450,000 on engines for both ships, now being built at Victoria machinery depot.

Likelihood of the award of the engine contract to the Canadian firm despite the low bid from Britain became a perfect storm from the United Kingdom trade commissioner in Vancouver when orders were given.

Trade Commissioner William Ward said from Vancouver Tuesday night: "Good luck to them. I hope they've made the right decision."

'This Your Life' Ideal Mother Ruled Cruel

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP)—Mrs. Abraham Hahn, 51, will appeal a divorce here Tuesday. His wife was portrayed on a television show as a self-sacrificing mother.

Judge Elmer Ryan said he found Hahn had suffered intolerable cruelty from Mrs. Betty Hahn, 46.

Mrs. Hahn was the subject of a special "This Is Your Life" program on the TV show, This Is Your Life, in 1955. She was presented as a mother who had made considerable sacrifices for her family, including that of her children, Herbert and Pauline.

Mrs. Hahn was absent from the program. An announcement was made that he had injured his foot.

A short time later, Hahn filed his divorce suit, charging that his wife had "treated me like a stranger."

CAN'T AFFORD IT

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — The city cannot afford to pay the complete cost of a water pipeline to Lake Huron, Mayor Gordon Stronach said Tuesday. Foxboro H-S Assoc. to Hold Spring Fair

A particularly interesting meeting was the March meeting of the Foxboro Home and School Association, Mrs. Brad Shaw presided and opened the meeting by welcoming all present, especially Mrs. Stinson, president of the Belleville Council for Home and School Associations. Mrs. Jones, the past president of the Belleville Council and Mrs. Forte the vice-president of the council.

At the business meeting, it was decided to get some records for Mrs. Sisk to use on the record player for her pupils. Since the teachers were unable on the spur of the moment, to think of anything they might need. The Home and School Association could on a suggestion from Mrs. Jones, make a list of things they wanted by the teachers out by them and handed to the Home and School Association.

It was decided to hold the annual "spring fair" early in May, with Mrs. Skinner, Mrs. D. McKeown, Mrs. A. Stoughton and Mrs. Dumbrough as the committee in charge of arrangements.

At the close of the business Mrs. Bradshaw turned the meeting over to Mrs. Stinson. Mrs. Jones and Mrs. Forte, Mrs. Stinson gave the objectives of the Home and School Association. Mrs. Forte distributed some questionnaires, to be answered by true or false. The members present were then divided into three groups with the visitors as leaders and each point was discussed on the questionnaire and why each person had given the answer they had. Some interesting points regarding Home and Associations were brought out.

It was decided to send a delegate to the Home and School convention which is to be held during Easter holidays in the Royal York Hotel in Toronto.

Following the closing of the meeting lunch was served by Mrs. Churchill and a social hour enjoyed.

The annual Communion Breakfast of St. Joseph's Parish Council of the C.W.L. was held on Sunday. The members received Communion at St. Joseph's Church and later adjourned to the Knights of Columbus Hall.

The guest speaker for the occasion was Dr. J. R. McSherry of Belleville, who chose as his topic, "The Problem of Youth and Catholic Action".

Dr. McSherry pointed out that the common outlook of parents on children today is almost materialistic, with worldly things definitely put first. Abilities are developed with the idea that they will result in more money, not from the point of developing a human being with a mission in life; with a duty to make other people better.

"We all know," Dr. McSherry continued, "that all confirmed Catholics are obliged to Apostleship. Being confirmed at an early age, only one wait until 21 to be a soldier of Christ!! Children should be shown by word and deed the full circle of Christian duty and thus apprenticed to the service of the Church.

MORAL BETRAYAL

"The moral betrayal of youth has been caused by adults who have exposed them to the unleashed them by every means of communication to a pagan interpretation of life.

"How then," asked Dr. McSherry "can we reach and hold youth?"

"Father Sherrin in 'Catholic World' says, "Teenage Society is a thoroughly artificial society and teenagers find it extraordinarily difficult to adjust to the adult society they must ultimately join. Therefore, what youth needs is help to enlarge their understanding of this new world and act as a bridge into it."

Dr. McSherry feels that the answer to this problem is a Junior Presidium of the Legion of Mary which society authentically enables people to discharge their duty in the Apostolate and therefore rounds out the Christian life. A Legionary must in everyone see the Blessed Lord and must in every duty serve Him and everything must be done in closest union with our Lady.

Adults who have been carefully chosen for their ability to start with the young would be in the Junior Presidium and would give youth the adult contact they need other than the good training and example given by parents.

"The Legion aim is to fashion youngsters into a legion of valiant soldiers of Jesus and Mary to combat the world, the flesh and corrupted nature."

Dr. McSherry was introduced by Mrs. E. Hilbig. Mrs. J. Hanley voiced the enthusiastic "thank you" of all those present. The head tables included: Mrs. C. Murphy; Mrs. V. Muldoon, president of the Parish Council; Dr. McSherry and Mrs. Hilbig.

The Communion Breakfast was under the direction of Mrs. K. Clarke, spiritual convener, and was supplied by McEvoy's caterers.

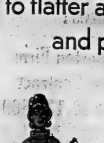
Hobby Night, Box Social Held by Club

A combined "Hobby Night" and "Box Social" was the focal point of the recent meeting of Bannister United Church Couples' Club held at the church.



In the hobby display there were numerous exhibits, including painting, ceramics, photography, finger painting and an excellent collection of fishing tackle, as well as fine art. Perhaps the most unlikely exhibit was the table tennis equipment exhibited by Doug Graham. All appeared to enjoy the table tennis although few could match the skill of the Grahams.

An interesting auction sale followed the hobby portion of the evening with the men bidding for the attractively wrapped box lunches. When opened the boxes contained excellent examples of the ladies' cooking abilities, from fried chicken to delicious cold ham salads.

The men all agreed that they could not possibly have invested their money more wisely.

Prior to adjournment, the members were informed that they would be treated to a lecture on "The Importance of a Will", at the April meeting.

A Bermudan Salad And A Brazilian Dessert

by Mary Moore

In the Forty Thieves' Club we were luncheon guests of Mr. Ford Baxter who is general manager and publisher of The Royal Gazette of Hamilton, Bermuda. I had an avocado salad stuffed with crabmeat and could barely wait to get home to try it on some of my guests. Of course they had to be avocado addicts, so it was a smash hit.

At another meal I served a rich custard which comes from Brazil so naturally it calls for coffee.

WEDNESDAY

Dinner Menu

Peady's Best-Yet Chicken Pie (see Tuesday); Tomato Aspic on Lettuce; Rosy Baked Rhubarb; Hermits; Coffee.

AVOCADO STUFFED WITH CRABMEAT BERMUDA STYLE

Be sure to select ripe, quite soft large avocados — allowing half per person. Cut in halves, remove stone but do not peel. Place on curly or French endive or inner lettuce leaves on tea plates. Make Crabmeat Filling: To serve four (to fill 4 avocado halves) mix together in a bowl 4 oz. cooked crabmeat (or one 3 1-2 or 4-oz. can crabmeat, drained), 1-4 cup chopped fresh pineapple (or drained canned crushed pineapple) and 1-4 cup chopped walnuts or blanched almonds. Add enough genuine mayonnaise to moisten — about 2 or 3 tablespoons. Spoon into cavities of avocados. Serve as a main course salad or as a very filling appetizer for dinner.

3 cups milk, 1 cup 18 per cent cream, 5 tablespoons instant coffee powder, 2 teaspoons grated orange rind, 4 eggs plus 1 egg yolk, 1-3 cup sugar, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 1-2 teaspoon salt, nutmeg, 1 cup chopped Brazil nuts or almonds, Royal Chocolate Sauce (see below).

Combine milk and cream and scald them until top shimmers. Be sure to remove from heat before boiling. Stir in instant coffee and grated orange rind. Cool 10 minutes. Beat slightly the 4 whole eggs and 1 egg yolk with the sugar. Slowly pour in coffee mixture, stirring. Add vanilla and salt. Pour into 6 or 8 buttered custard cups (depending on size), being sure to apportion the orange rind evenly in each. Sprinkle tops with nutmeg. Stand custard cups in shallow pan. Pour cold water around to come to within 3-4" of top of cups. Carefully transfer to oven and bake at 300 deg. Fahr. for - hour. Chill. Serve in custard cups with Chocolate Sauce (see below) or invert and turn out on dessert plates. Pour over Royal Chocolate Sauce: Two squares unsweetened chocolate, 1-3 cup water, 1-2 cup sugar, shake of salt, 3 tablespoons butter or margarine, 1-2 teaspoon vanilla. Combine chocolate and water in saucepan. Stir over low heat until smooth and blended. Add sugar and salt. Stir constantly until sugar is dissolved and mixture slightly thickened. Remove from heat. Stir in butter and vanilla. Stir until blended. Cool. After pouring sauce over custard sprinkle with nuts. A popular and easy dessert which may be made in advance for a guest dinner.

'Farm Safety' Topic at Melrose W.I.

Mrs. E. McEachren opened her home to a goodly number of members and visitors of the Melrose W.I. on Thursday evening, with Mrs. Harold McMeehan acting as co-hostess.

The president chaired the meeting and was presented with a gift in appreciation of her hospitality during the recent "Millinery Course".

Mrs. Roy McLaren dealt with the correspondence and thankyou cards.

During the business period, it was decided to cater to a "Bowling Banquet" and a committee of Mrs. C. Weese, Mrs. E. Badgley, Mrs. R. Graham and Mrs. A. Long were appointed to arrange for same.

Mrs. Mac Lanier will represent the Branch at the Presidents' Conference at Guelph early in May. A donation of cooking utensils will be bought for two families who lost their homes by fire. A nominating committee was appointed as follows — Mesdames E. Badgley, V. Pascoe, and McLaren, to report at our annual meeting on April 25 in the hall.

"FARM SAFETY" TOPIC

At this meeting, Mrs. C. McLaren leader for this month, took charge with "Farm Safety" as the general topic. A reading by Mrs. J Blatherick dealt with, "Fires Hazards", and how to avoid them. Mrs. E. Ensbury followed with a paper, "Safety on The Farm", which described various accidents with the tractor in unskilled hands which could have been avoided. She stated that English laws were much more strict forbidding anyone under 13 years of age from manipulating a tractor.

The "Farm Survey of Accidents" of March 1959-60 read by Mrs. Dan McFarlane revealed a large number of accidents both in farm buildings and fields as well as in the house where falls and stumbles are expensive with 25 per cent due to carelessness.

Mrs. Kinmett of Bobiin told of their "survey" in Sidney Township and Addington taken through efforts of their agricultural representatives and in order to make people more accidentconscious their institute had printed and distributed handbooks on placements with the statistics of accidents on same.

An interesting reading, "Indestructible Mile", by Mrs. R. MacFarlane was followed by "A Safety Report" by Mrs. C. McLaren which summarized many ideas that would prevent accidents and which impressed the members with the safety measures since the work is published.

A contest on "Safety Rules" was won by Mrs. Brooks.

Mrs. R. Badgley remarked briefly on "Resolution" under the heading "For or Against".

Women Talk With Soviet Negotiators

GENEVA (Reuters) — The chief Soviet negotiators at the 17-nation disarmament conference, Valerian Zorin and Semyon Tsarapkin, talked Tuesday night with British and American mothers at a reception given by the wife of Canadian-born Cleveland industrialist Cyrus Eaton.

But their American and British counterparts, Arthur Dean and Joseph Godber, did not attend.

The mothers, the American Strike for Peace group and the British Mothers Against War, arrived here Monday to bring some feminine anti-arms pressure to bear on conference delegates.

Since then they have been joined by a number of mothers from Norway, Sweden, East and West Germany, Czechoslovakia, Bulgaria and Russia.

St. Columba W.A. Plans Future Events

Monday evening saw the bimonthly meeting of the Women's Association of St. Columba Church with June Dunsmore in the chair

In an effort to assist with the building fund of the new church, Mrs. Dunsmore advised that the Association had been approached with regard to catering for a forthcoming dinner to be held at the Yacht Club, sponsored by the Bay of Quinte Power Squadron.

It was announced that plans are underway for a bat show to be held early in April and each member was asked to invite several guests.

Although Christmas is a long way off, the St. Columba Women are already thinking of the less fortunates and their Christian Education Society is undertaking the sending of Christmas gifts to Indian children of Northern Ontario's mission schools. With their eye to the future, a fund-raising bazaar is planned for late October.

After the business session was over, the highlight of the evening was a talk on "First Aid" by Mrs. Edith Anderson of the Bell Telephone Company of Canada.

Mrs. Anderson was introduced by Mrs. Marna Devolin.

Successful Living

(A Canadian Social Worker Helps with Human Problems)

Should Diabetic Go Steady?

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS:—I am 16 years old. I found out two weeks ago that I have sugar diabetes and am going to move into a boarding house where the landlady will cook my meals, because it's too much of a job for my foster mother.

The question is: should I keep on going steady with my boy friend, with whom I've been going steady for a year? He is the most thoughtful boy I've ever known. I have known total . He has never done anything to make me feel I cannot trust him.

His parents want us to break up because they are afraid something may go wrong.—JUST WONDERING.

DEAR JUST:—A doctor once told me: "The way to live long is to get an incurable disease and pamper it.

His parents want the best for their boy, but they may be unduly worried about your health. Have a frank talk with your doctor and rigidly stay with the routines he advises.

Then tell the boy friend and his parents what the doctor says about your future and your chances when it comes to raising a healthy family.

* * *

DEAR DORIS:—I have been living common law with a man for a little more than two years. He tells me he loves me and wants to marry me, but I find he has been writing love letters to a girl in his own country. He tells me he hasn't been, but I've seen them with my own eyes.

Everything I have is bought with my own money, but I would like to find out if he is supposed to support me in any way. I can hardly believe myself that this is really love.

Could you please tell me what you think is right: for me to stay with this man who doesn't give me a cent for anything, or should I look for a better prospect, because I am not getting younger.—COMMON LAW.

DEAR COMMON LAW:—You have no claim on him. But love would suggest a desire to take care of you—and to marry you! Obviously you are just a convenience.

Pack up and leave before he marries the other girl.

* * *

DEAR DORIS:—I am flying to Rome in July and hope to spend a month on the continent, mostly in England and Scotland. What clothing should I take?

I do not expect to be staying at luxury hotels and do not have a fortune to spend.—OFFICER'S WIFE.

DEAR OFFICER'S WIFE—Indulge in a smart woollen suit and shoot three drip-dry blouses. Get sporty walking shoes with rubber soles. Most of the time you will live in those things on the British Isles.

Most people pack too many things and go back with several garments unworn (including me.)

* * *

TO TERRIBLY WORRIED—Now look, just as long as you enjoy gossip enough to break a confidence, you are going to get into hot water. Why should any other teenager trust you?

If you are really sorry—not just sorry you were caught—mend your ways. Best of all, don't deal in small talk. It could hurt somebody, and sooner or later that somebody will turn out to be you.

* * *

(Is yours a problem about the proper thing to do? Ask Doris, enclosing a stamped, addressed envelope for private reply.)

Head of Student Residents Gets First-Hand Knowledge Of Problems From Daughters

By RENA MARLEY

OTTAWA (CP)—Mrs. Eileen Cox, administrative head of Carleton University's two new student residences, has first-hand knowledge of students' problems.

Her daughters, Brenda, 22, and Joan, 19, are Carleton undergrads and her Ottawa home is a gathering place for many out-of-town and foreign students.

Mrs. Cox will move from her home, dubbed "the annex" by visiting students, to a campus apartment before the residences open next fall. The quarters, one for 172 men and the other for 164 women, are Carleton's first since it was established 30 years ago.

Mrs. Cox, a youthful 40 with soft brown hair and twinkling brown eyes, has been a member of the university's administrative staff since 1953.

She took a position in the registrar's office 17 years ago "because all of my friends were working." Her husband died the first day she reported for work.

WORKED AS REPORTER

Eileen Cox was born and raised in Yorkton, Sask., where her father, Sam Wynn, is publisher of the weekly Enterprise. During summer holidays, she used to report social and sports events, an easy job "because I used to know everybody."

She graduated from Victoria College, University of Toronto, in the midst of the depression and moved to Galt, Ont., where she worked without pay for several months at a training school for delinquent girls and then went to Ottawa for a month. Although she had no yen for teaching, she ended up on the academic staff of the one-room high school.

"I never studied so hard in my life as I did preparing those lessons."

Later she moved to Toronto and was secretary to a mining engineer.

Mrs. Cox plans to visit both of the new residences at other universities before the Ker-level residences here open in the fall. Board and room for the academic year will be $675 for double rooms and $700 for single rooms.

Mrs. Cox says she is getting a bit of advice from her daughters about her new job.

"They tell me what I'm not supposed to do."

Women's Institute

REDNERSVILLE W.I.

ALBURY — The monthly meeting of the Rednersville W.I. was held on March 22, with 15 in attendance. The president Mrs. Mac Wallbridge, welcomed the members and visitors.

A short business period then followed during which time it was noted that the Institute had adopted a nine-year old Hong Kong boy, by the name of Kwok-Yuen Kee. A millinery course is to be held at the school on April 25-26-27, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. The summary day for "143 pounds of meat" was held at Picton on March 29th. The "Achievement Day" dealing with "Separates for Summer," was held at Picton on March 31, at Picton. The district annual will be held on May 30th. The next meeting will be held a week earlier, April 19th, at the home of Mrs. Elmer Young.

Mrs. Hubert Townsend took charge of the program which was based on historical research during which time various stories of old farms, graves and cvaporators were told.

The meeting closed and a delicious lunch was served.

USE KNIVES

SANTO DOMINGO (Reuters)—Groups of knife-wielding youths broke into two radio transmitting stations here Monday and forced announcers to broadcast an anti - government proclamation as the third straight day of strife gripped the Dominican Republic.

H-S Assoc. Sponsors Fine Fun Fair

WELLINGTON — The Wellington Home and School Association held their first "Fun Fair" in the school on the evening of March 30th. There was a large attendance of parents and friends, who enjoyed the fair.

Mrs. J. Collow, the president of the association, welcomed the guests at the door.

There was entertainment for everyone. Long tables filled with home cooking proved to be a popular spot in the auditorium. In other rooms were tables filled with handicrafts, books of all kinds, plants and records. There was also a white elephant table. These articles were nearly all sold during the evening.

Down in the gym, games for both old and young were enjoyed. A big fish pond in the corner was the delight of the young folks. This was sold out completely. In the kitchen, one could buy soft drinks, hot dogs, popcorn balls and freshly popped corn which kept the ladies busy as there was a great demand for it.

Tea and cookies were served in the home economics room upstairs.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

Philip D. — He should sweat it out and graduate with me.

* * *

Mack B. — I'm 16 and I've decided to quit school at the end of the term, but my friend Phil is giving me such a hard time about it that I want to explain my reasons and find out what's so terrible. He keeps trying to talk me out of it, but he doesn't make sense.

School isn't getting me anywhere. I can't get interested in any of the courses I'm taking. I could use this time deciding what I want to be. My folks are leaving it up to me. Since I'm not going on to college, what am I waiting for? I can get a job in a repair shop and see how I do. Or I could sign up for an outdoor job on a farm or with the forest rangers.

If I knew exactly what work I wanted to do, school might help me. But now it's wasting valuable days. For instance, why must I know about the War of the Roses? I'm not going to be a florist!

* * *

Philip D. — I can't convince Mack he is making a bad mistake to check out of school. I don't know the exact arguments, but I do know that most fellows who've done it admit 2 years later they regret it.

I'm bored with European History, too, just like him. But it's required for a diploma and there must be a good reason. I guess it helps you understand what's happening all over the world today — that, if you can get all those years of courses straight.

I may not go to college either. Just like Mack. But as long as neither of us has to go to work right now, we ought to grab our chance for a decent education. Why, the other night I read in the paper of a guy who left school at 15 to work for the telegraph company. Now at 40 he's back at school because he wants to be a teacher.

Mack started school with me. He should finish with me, too.

The Council: It's frightening to realize how many big decisions in life hinge on advice, good or bad, that happens to be available at a crucial moment. It's no more scientific than the toss of a coin. And yet the difference between an effective, successful future and a stymied one may well depend upon who happened to be around when a young fellow reached a crossroad and yelled, "Which way?"

Well, for Mack, Philip's around. But he may be too much of a lightweight to anchor Mack to a course he resists. Where's the school? Where are the parents? Evidently this is an able boy, bogged down in studies which have not been made to come alive for him, courses in which he may be failing — with no guidance expert to analyze what's happening. Declaring, affecting the rest of his life are "left" to him as an age where he knows little, perhaps zero, of life.

Let's see what we can suggest to bolster Philip's heavy try and keep Mack from the ranks of adult "regreters" over lost opportunity.

The immediate need for Mack is a heart-to-heart talk with a vocational counselor. (If, parents can arrange for this either at the school or privately.) Once the boy has narrowed his sights a bit, set himself a more specific vocational goal, his studies may begin to take more meaning. He'll even find the War of the Roses fitting in, for it had something to do with who ruled England and that had something to do with American History, and us!

Next, Mack should look at the record. Without a diploma he's likely to be relegated to the unskilled labor ranks which often glut the employment market. Last year, Dept. emphasizes, that only four out of every 100 jobs available today went to an undecorated applicant. High school dropouts are found to earn less, be fired sooner than graduates.

With better adult attention, inspiration and guidance, Mack may gain the motivation to finish the job of high school before striking out his new job. And, if he and Philip change their mind about college, that precious diploma is their ticket.

Overwhelming Odds Fail To Hinder Polish Artist

Mary Schneider, a Polish artist, who painted her way through two years in prison and slave labor camps during World War II, and later became court artist for Iranian royalty, held her first American showing of her work, at the main gallery at Florida Gulf Coast Art Centre, on March 25th.

Mrs. Schneider, wife of Dr. Roman Schneider, a teacher of architecture at the Warsaw College of Arts and Crafts and Warsaw Academy of Fine Arts, is a graduate of Warsaw College. She was also active in Poland's art world until 1939, and continued painting even when sent to the concentration camp in Siberia, where she was allowed to transform her quarters into a makeshift studio and sell paintings to the townspeople.

After she was released by the Russians, she and her husband were reunited to serve under the British command in the Middle East. Together they were sent to Iran, where she painted scenes for court members and Dr. Schneider designed the summer palace for the Shah's sister, Princess Aschraf.

Since emigrating to Canada in 1950, Dr. and Mrs. Schneider have taught at and headed the Mackenzie Art Centre of Ontario.

Mrs. Schneider's show consists of almost 35 water colors of Canadian, United States, Europe and the Middle East scenes.

JACK RABBIT

The jack rabbit got its name from early settlers of the American west, who originally called it jackass rabbit because of its long ears.

Lunch was served and the girls enjoyed a social hour.

Special Service Held By Y.P.U.

CENTENARY — The Young People's Union held a special service on Sunday evening at Centenary United Church. The worship service was led by the president, Miss Helen Hart, assisted by Miss Marilyn Nobes, Roger Harder and Don Bowers.

The Rev. T. F. Townsend introduced the guest speaker, Miss Margaret Draper, of Belleville whose message was challenging to young people.

The offering is to be given to the work of Quin-mo-lac camp.

Mr. Townsend closed with the benediction.

Mrs. Kennedy's Clothes Ill-Fitted Says Designer

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Three fashion designers who met Tuesday to discuss "what makes a best dressed woman" decided that Jacqueline Kennedy doesn't have it.

The president's wife who has twice led the world's best-dressed lists could learn a lot about being elegant from her sister, Princess Lee Radziwill, designer John Moore told women attending the third annual Fashion Forum. The forum was sponsored by the Philadelphia Museum College of Art.

Moore said: "Princess Radziwill is always immaculate. She frequents French dress houses and her clothes are well-lined. They hang beautifully. Her hair is flatteringly styled for her face and her shoes suit her legs."

About Mrs. Kennedy, he said: Her clothes are ill-fitted, in photographs I have seen they are pulled and twisted, which would not happen if they fitted her figure properly. Her skirts are much too short, her feet are too big for that type of shoe and she has a big face, far too much hair."

Clare Potter, a veteran fashion designer, asked "I agree."

Kenneth Lane, shoe designer for Christian Dior, said Mrs. Kennedy dressed well, but he believed she should forget some of her own style preferences, such as short skirts, and bow to public preferences while she is the president's wife.

"Princess Margaret is much better dressed for her position," he said.

SPEAKING of MANNERS

PATRICIA LEWIS

BE CAREFUL OF UNINTENTIONAL SLIGHTS

A well-bred person would never consciously slight another human being.

But being human, himself, even the most considerate person sometimes goofs and unwittingly strikes a blow where it hurts the most — in the ego.

A direct snub, although the height of rudeness, often is easier to weather than the indirect variety. In the case of the former, the victim is more or less primed for it, knows the character of the belligerent one and why he or she would behave so knavishly in public.

He's then able to meet the situation tactfully and gloss it over with some degree of grace and good humor.

It's the unintentional slight, however, that really vexes, because the innocent victim usually is caught off-guard and has to retreat behind a tired smile to hide his discomfort.

Luckily, most people are considerate about the feelings of others and would rather die than say anything that might offend. But, despite the best intentions in the world, a slight often can be administered in the most off-hand way.

When making introductions be sure to get names straight and to include everyone. A person is bound to feel slighted when his name is hashed up or he's overlooked completely. If a name eludes you, pause, when you get to it and let the person fill in the blank space. It's more gracious to let him introduce himself than to rechristen him on the spot or pass him by as a nonentity.

Avoid talking about parties you've been to or parties you've given, just in case someone in the group was not invited to them. Nothing makes a person feel more left out than to know his name was left off invitation lists of people he considers friends. He'll never know he's been slighted if you don't bring up the subject in the first place.

Keep party conversation general enough so that everyone in the group can join in. Naturally a person feel slighted when he finds himself on the sidelines or on the fringe of a discussion. Even if your remarks are meant for a specific few, it's always more courteous to include each person present with a glance, at least, so no one feels left out.

When you're talking to someone, don't suddenly dash off to greet a friend and leave him standing with his mouth open. Wait until your friend joins you, then make the proper introductions. It will mark you as a gracious person and you'll flatter, rather than slight, all concerned.

Above all, never issue an invitation to some members of a group and overlook others who are present. Invitations should always be delivered in private, when nobody else is around. To do otherwise is the unkindest cut of all.

Euchre Party Enjoyed by Neighbors' Aid

McNaughton Retiring

If Canada Keeps Resources Great Future Seen Assured

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton says Canada has a great future "if we don't give away our resources or get whittled out of them."

Asked whether he was referring to the Columbia River, and the question of exporting surplus Canadian power, Gen. McNaughton said he is not ready to talk about the Columbia.

"I stand for Canada first in all aspects," said the 75-year-old soldier - scientist - diplomat whose distinguished career of more than a half-century in public service was garnished with the thorns of controversy and defeat.

Now about to step down as Canadian chairman of the Canada-U.S. International Joint Commission, the tall, husky - browed, white-thatched general told a reporter Tuesday:

"I believe in the future of Canada and if the French and English in Canada continue to work together and co-operate for the benefit of both cultures, nothing is going to hold us back."

Still a trim figure with a military stride, Gen. McNaughton was interviewed in the midst of the semi-annual meeting of the commission, observing its 50th anniversary.

While about to retire from the commission—this will be his last meeting—Gen. McNaughton said he has plans for new activities but declined to divulge them at this time.

A native of Moosomin, Sask., and a graduate of McGill University, Gen. McNaughton joined the Royal Artillery as a lieutenant in 1909 when he felt "pretty disturbed" about the world situation.

"Things haven't changed much since, but threat still hangs over the world but the cushioning effect of distance has been lost. Time has been shortened. Things happen quicker nowadays."

It was during the Second World War that Gen. McNaughton topped into his greatest controversy. As leader of Canada's overseas troops he opposed splitting the Canadian Army between Britain and sending a corps to Italy. In 1940 he withdrew from command.

"The many dispatriates the analysts of history, the more I am convinced of the correctness of my judgment of the situation," he said as he reflected on the war lanes and the national debate that raged over conscription.

"My life has been controversy after controversy. But you don't get things done by pussyfooting.

"The first thing I did when I became minister of defence in 1944 was to reunite the Canadian Army.

"Towards the end of the war we were one of the most formidable fighting forces in Europe, not only on a man-for-man basis but in integrated ability to act. There was no army in the world in which mechanization had gone as far as it had gone in brigade and aid the troops."

Gen. McNaughton became involved in defence, he said, because when, as defence minister in 1940-41, he visited soldiers and overseas service and his appeal for volunteers failed. Men conscripted for overseas service ordered overseas.

"I had a lot very strongly about the volunteer system and in the non-permanent active militia. Of course, there had been special occasions which arrangements had been made to meet the work out. Then it's too bad for the people involved."

A problem encountered by Canada during the Second World War was that the country failed learned how to build and run an army but had not learned how to switch between political direction at home and the needs of the front at 40

Canada entered the war, said Gen. McNaughton, without a psychological or national strategy. The difficulty it encountered was in struggling to reach a decision on what targets army should be directed.

Syria Crisis Is Beginning To Show Worsening Signs

By DAVE CANCIA
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The Syrian crisis is beginning to show signs of developing into an international crisis that could involve as many as six of her neighbors.

Observers say that unless the dissidents and Nasser-backed rulers are pacified rapidly, the Syrian situation could foster to a point where it could jeopardize the uneasy peace in the Middle East. President of Egypt and already has offered to mediate between the various factions. This is a crisis that much of the Syrian army, once tightly controlled by Egypt since the United Arab Republic, could hardly welcome.

Neither Jordan nor Iraq would like to see the Egyptian leader's influence rise again in Syria. Some authorities say King Hussein is keeping his army ready to move to prevent a takeover by Cairo.

Israel is also a factor that cannot be ignored. The tiny nation has had a number of skirmishes with the Syrians in recent months. Some observers do not consider it improbable that the Israeli army could take advantage of the confusion to wipe out some of the gun emplacements across their frontiers.

The immediate upshot of the current Syrian crisis could well be the birth of a new military dictatorship headed by Nasser, Gen. Abdul Zahredin, the army commander-in-chief.

The current troubles are attributed to Zahredin's failure to establish the army's authority over the whole Syrian nation after he and his forces ousted the government headed by President Koudsi.

This group, opposition groups their opportunity to move. Followers of the arrested politicians, thrown out of power by the military, appear to have concentrated forces around Aleppo in northern Syria.

A group of officers advocating unity with Egypt has also set up headquarters around Homs, in central Syria between Aleppo and Damascus. They call themselves the "command of free officers in Syria."

The decisive factor in the internal power struggle is said to be the force based around Damascus. This is said to be still loyal to Zahredin and his associates.

Previously no concrete information has filtered out of the Arab state since its borders were sealed.

About the only certainty so far is that army high command is determined to exclude the politicians from power for the time being and to keep out external influences on Syrian affairs.

Four Policemen Face Charges In Man's Death

MONTREAL (CP)—Four Quebec Provincial Policemen are to face preliminary hearing April 16 on charges of manslaughter arising from the death of Paul-Emile Boutin in a police cell in February, 1961.

Sgt. Florent Landry, Cpl. Armand Gagnon and Constables Edouard Marrocco and Fernand Bouchard, all of Montreal, Tuesday, Marrocco was also charged with perjury, arising from testimony he gave at a coroner's inquest into Boutin's death.

Evidence is brought to Montreal in a provincial police car following his arrest at Boutin's home in Papierville, 35 miles south of the city. He was questioned in the cells and upstairs cell at provincial police headquarters in Montreal a few hours after his arrival.

All four accused were released on $500 bail after their arrests.

They were among six police men suspended Tuesday as a result of an investigation into the death of Boutin. Others are Sgt. Alfred Gagne and Const. Henry De Francesco.

The suspensions were ordered by Attorney - General Georges Lapalme after statements the four arrests were obtained by Crown prosecutor Guy Desjardins.

Witness testified at the inquest that Boutin, 39, a married police fisherman from suburban Pointe-aux-Trembles, had spent most of the day in a Napierville hotel traveler's room drinking beer with unknown and threatening to "clean up" the place.

The hotel manager called police for help and Boutin fought with the policemen. Police said he kept struggling most of the way to Montreal and managed to kick out a window of the police car.

A coroner's jury returned a verdict Feb. 15 of violent death but no criminal responsibility attached.

Buying Peaches Below Minimum Price Brings Fine

ST. CATHARINES (CP)—Two Toronto fruit wholesalers were fined a total of $600 Tuesday after pleading guilty to five peaches last fall below the minimum price.

They both pleaded not guilty. Angelo Calderone was fined $264 including costs on conviction of 10 counts. He was convicted of buying 1,362 six-quart baskets of peaches for 25 cents each instead of the minimum of 45 cents each between Sept. 8 and Oct. 2 from two local growers.

The other man, Victor Vetere, was fined $436 including costs on conviction of eight counts.

Evidence was that Vetere bought 11,700 six - quart baskets of fresh peaches for between 30 and 60 cents each. Offences occurred between Sept. 8 and Oct. 6.

Thomas Postar, a Grimsby Beach peach grower, told Magistrate Harley B. Hallett he "practically begged Vetere to take the peaches." Postar said the board's license of a dealer couldn't take the peaches under any circumstances.

Another peach grower, William B. Orton of Grimsby, said Calderone's price was the "best deal available." He called the minimum price unrealistic and said he had nothing to gain by certain the price level.

Magistrate Hallett said he was satisfied that the wholesalers had been aware of the minimum price regulations. He said the law must be obeyed and the growers' or wholesalers' opinions on the fairness of the minimum price had no legal bearing.

Algiers 'Quiet,' Only 5 Bombs Shatter Night

ALGIERS (Reuters) — Terrorists carried out the slightest organization set off five explosions at three-hourly intervals in Algiers during the night, destroying four Moslem shops but causing no deaths.

The explosions were the only terrorist incidents after a day in which 19 persons were killed and 25 wounded. All but two of the dead and two wounded were Moslems.

Ten Moslems were killed and 23 wounded when a European Secret Army commando unit burst into a hospital and sprayed the helpless patients with sub-machine-gun fire, then exploded a plastic bomb which destroyed part of the building.

The motive for the slaughter was at first thought to be a "finishing off" of Moslems wounded in terrorist street attacks, but later there was speculation that the Secret Army might have planned it as a "blind killing" on a suspected Moslem insurgent headquarters.

During the day, seven bold-ups attributed to the European terrorists netted a total of 1,758,000 new francs, (about $350,000).

According to unofficial estimates, a total of 30,000,000 new francs (about $6,000,000) has been stolen in terrorist holdups in Algeria since January.

Brig. Bailey Treated to Very Imaginative Displays At Final Course Inspection

The final inspection of the third course of the Special Militia Training Program was conducted by the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, held Saturday, greeting of the regimental armouries, was a most notable event.

The public and the inspecting officer, Brigadier A. J. P. Bailey, D.S.O., E.D., C.D., were treated to a very imaginative series of displays following the formal inspection.

The dramatic highpoint of the evening occurred during the emergency rescue and survival display when an apparently shell-shocked "mother" resplendent in red wig nightgown and paratrooper boots went into hysterics looking for her "son." Taking the inspection team by surprise as she fought with native peasant retaining a lot of imagination in their demonstrations and for "outstanding progress" in becoming a cut of insanity.

Mayor A. McLean Haig brought the greetings of the city and remarked that the work being carried out by the Special Militia Training Program was most valuable "because we do not know what is in store for us." He expressed the hope that many of the course candidates would join the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment.

His Worship announced that this Thursday representatives of the Bastion Group, Prince Edward County, Trenton and Belleville would be meeting to establish a Quinte Area Emergency Measures Organization.

Major Haig paid tribute to Lt.-Col. Angus Duffy who was making his first formal appearance since his illness of last fall, as "Mr. Soldier" of this district.

He stated that people of this community were grateful for the leadership and service which the former commanding officer of the Hasty Fees had given.

Lt.-Col. Angus Duffy made a few remarks to the course. He stressed the importance of being strong enough to defend oneself and suggested that that was the only sure way for course peace. He advised the course candidates that they were wanted and needed by the Hasty Pees to help keep the course up to the standard and loyal members in the militia.

Major Hugh Campbell of Trenton, the regiment's new second in command, brought the greetings of the new commanding officer, Lt.-Col. Gregsh Black and extended a welcome to those who wished to join "The Regiment."

Close to 150 persons were on hand to witness the presentation of St. John Ambulance First Aid certificates to 98 of the 170 course candidates. Awards were also presented to the top candidate in each of the four platoons and to the most improved candidate.

Sarah Churchill Makes Another Trip to Altar

LONDON (AP) — Sarah Churchill, actress daughter of Sir Winston, announced her engagement Tuesday night to Baron Audley, a widower in the Worcestershire Regiment.

She has been married twice before and Audley once.

Audley, 46, became the 22nd baron of his line in 1942 in succession to his cousin. A son of the late Thomas Tuchet Tuchet-Jesson and great-great-grandson of the 20th baron, he formerly bore the name Thomas Percy Henry Tuchet Tuchet-Jesson.

A spokesman at Lord Audley's London residence said: "No details or date of the marriage have yet been decided."

Firemen's Ranks On 2 Railways Being Thinned

MONTREAL (CP) — Spokesmen for Canada's two major railways said Tuesday firemen are still employed on some freight and yard diesels but their ranks are being thinned out through retirements and transfers and the gaps are not being filled.

They were commenting on a statement by H. E. Gilbert, president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen (CLC), who said in Washington Sunday that "we have firemen working on all the locomotives in Canada."

Labor - management negotiations have begun in the United States on the future of firemen of American railroads.

In Canada, a royal commission recommended five years ago that the use of firemen on freight and yard diesels be curtailed.

CNR and CPR spokesmen said Tuesday that, under agreements reached with the union after the commission issued its report, firemen then on the payroll have been protected in their jobs but are not being replaced when retired, transferred to other jobs or dismissed for cause.

The agreements did not affect passenger trains, where firemen are still used regularly.

The CNR estimated that the number of its firemen has dropped by about 600 since the agreement was signed in 1957 and, when the "normal process" of attrition is completed, a total of 2,800 firemen's jobs will have been eliminated.

Crown Witness Was Lying Defence Claim

TORONTO (CP) — Defence counsel for Toronto sportscaster Jim Crystal in cross-examining Crown witness of telling "a pack of lies" at Crystal's trial on charges of theft and possession of stolen goods.

Gerald Rubin, counsel for the 53-year-old broadcaster, made the accusation in cross-examining Michael Young, 26, who is serving a two-year sentence for theft and possession of stolen furniture.

Under questioning, Young admitted that his statement to police at the time of his arrest last August was "not a truthful statement." He had told police he did know the furniture he was selling was stolen and that he pulled one of the transactions when he found out it was.

Young, warehouse manager of Modernage Furniture at the time, told Mr. Dubin Tuesday he could not remember whether he had sold a liquor cabinet to Crystal or how much he got for the furniture he sold.

"I suggest what you are trying to do is put anything you said on this man to protect someone else," Mr. Dubin said.

"No," the witness replied. "But as the time goes on, the details get more vague."

The case is continuing.

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Dr. Loyda Sicher, 71, former Vienna psychiatrist and colleague of Dr. Alfred Adler, died Monday night of a respiratory ailment in hospital.

Any Change in Migratory Bird Laws Could Lead To Extinction of Waterfowl

OTTAWA (CP)—Any pecking by northern communities — or anyone else — at the migratory bird regulations agreement signed by Canada and the United States could mean an end of waterfowl on the North American continent.

This possibility was raised Tuesday by Joe Bryant, game administrator of the Mackenzie District in the Northwest Territories.

Mr. Bryant said any changes could snowball and the result could mean the shooting down of the entire continent's waterfowl supply, precariously balanced now with the strict, international regulations.

The warning came at the close of a conference of the Eskimo affairs committee, an advisory body to Ottawa composed by the northern affairs department to discuss the problems of the natives of the Northwest Territories.

The members, including four Eskimos, and representatives of the church, industry and the federal government, ranged for two days over the problems of Canada's last frontier.

Drinking water and sewage, housing, employment, education, health, and what to do about southern Canadians and manufacturers in the north who tries who copy the carvings and prints of Eskimo artists.

The two - country migratory bird agreement calls for the setting of seasons in the protective areas starting Sept. 1. The seasons are shortened or lengthened in specific provinces and states and even within areas of provinces and states on the advice of wildlife biologists who study the strength of the flocks.

Victor Allen of the Eskimo delegation had asked for a spring hunting season in the Territories.

"You guys are shooting ducks at Christmas," he said.

He said hunters in the North should "get a whack at them in the spring" because it was too cold in September and most of the ducks have left for the South by then.

During the discussion on Eskimo works of art, heightened by passing around the conference room in Parliament Hill's East Block examples of native crafts, it was suggested the government and perhaps even an Eskimo launch suits against persons copying the carvings and prints.

The committee was told the government has so far approached the Japanese embassy about fakes produced in Japan—with good results—badgered Canadian dealers selling Canadian products and decline to remove the copyrighted trade mark from imitations.

The committee was also told that a uniform written language for Eskimos is used in the various dialects of the North.

A search will now be launched for 12 Eskimos from across the Territories to come to Ottawa and learn the 15-letter language and return to teach it to others.

Lawyer Claims Steelworkers Practised Deceit at Sudbury

TORONTO (CP) — Supporters of the United Steelworkers of America "practised the greatest deception on a grand scale" in Sudbury, lawyer Aubrey Golden said Tuesday.

Mr. Golden was addressing the International Labor Relations Board, which is hearing an application by the Steelworkers to take over bargaining rights for workers of the International Nickel Company of Canada at Sudbury.

At present the 14,000-plus Inco employees are represented by Local 598 of the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers (Ind.).

Mr. Golden, representing the Local 598 executive, said the USA alleged Steel supporters "spread the myth" that if the Steel union took over bargaining rights for Sudbury local would merely be affiliated to a different international union.

It was implied, he said, that Mine-Mill executives were sold to the Steelworkers they would be present at negotiations for buildings and assets belonging to Local 598.

"In clear words they would just change the name on the door," Mr. Golden continued, "... this is legally impossible."

(Tom Taylor, elected by members of Local 598 to attend the hearings, said later the local has assets of "close to $2,000,000." Including a union hall assessed at $700,000, five other halls and 6-acre summer resort reported kissing Liz on and off the set of the movie Cleopatra.

The Daily Mail newspapers had something to say about the Taylor-Burton wedding.

Masai Leader Threatens War On Whites

CP from AP-Reuters

LONDON—John Keen, representative of the 100,000-strong Masai tribe in Kenya, walked out of the Kenya constitutional conference in London Tuesday protesting violence and bloodshed against all white settlers.

His statement still stunned delegates who have been conferring here for more than seven weeks on a new constitution for Kenya.

Keen, organizing secretary of the Kenya African National Union, made the statement shortly after British Colonial Secretary Reginald Maudling refused to grant land claims of the Masai in the Rift valley highlands area. The tribes raises cattle.

"This is the end of our relationship with the white race in Africa," he told reporters. "We shall adopt the same ruth . . . cruelties that have been taken by other people if it is the only way we can get our rights."

'Love to All' Burton Cables Wife in London

Friends said the cable, in Welsh, said:

"Love to all. Everything fine." He followed with a long "m'n" a telephone call. The result was that Burton's 32-year-old blonde wife Sybil, is much happier, friends said.

Mrs. Burton was in seclusion at the London home of the actor's brother and manager, Ifor Jenkins. Friends said she was upset by the talk of romance between her husband and Miss Taylor, but that she was calmed. He gave her sedatives and she was resting and sleeping.

Actor-playwright Emlyn Williams, long-time friend of the Burtons, said he was sure of their two children, said he is convinced that the romance is between Burton and his wife.

Williams denied reports in two London papers that Mrs. Burton plans to fly to Rome to join her husband, who was reported kissing Liz on and off the set of the movie Cleopatra.

The London newspapers had something to say about the Taylor-Burton wedding.

Violent Upheaval Shakes Huge US Retail Industry; Buyer Stands to Benefit

By JACK LESLIE

NEW YORK (AP)—A violent upheaval has shaken the $200,000,000,000-a-year United States retail industry.

Some call it a revolution, others evolution.

In some respects the industry is completing the circle from general store to general store—where almost everything is sold under one roof.

In others, it is forging ahead into completely new concepts of merchandising.

No matter what it is called and no matter what direction it takes, the buyer may stand to benefit from increased competition.

The change began after the end of the Second World War and its shortages and price controls. It has passed.

Conventional retailing—centring in the big downtown department stores and spreading out to specialty, variety, drug, food and appliance stores — was turned upside down by the advent of the shopping centres and the discount houses.

Shopping centres started rather small—usually a couple of little stores around a supermarket. But they have never stopped growing.

LACK OF PARKING

From neighborhood centres they progressed to regional centres — virtual business sections of scores of stores dominated by a huge department store and sometimes two. They capitalized on the lack of downtown parking but now some are so congested that they have their own parking problems.

Shopping centres inflicted a reeling blow to the downtown sections—in some cities so serious that the central business area sagged into blight.

By 1961 about 3,500 shopping centres were doing $50,000,000,000 a year in business. An estimated 1,000 were built last year and, according to the International Council of Shopping Centres, another 1,000 will spring up this year.

As an example of the shopping centres' inroad, Joseph Meek, president of the Illinois Retail Merchants Association, reported that retail sales declined $500,000,000 in Chicago between June 30 1960, and June 30, 1961. At the same time sales increased by $77,000,000 in the country area outside the city.

What brought immediate success to the centres?

The centres became so large and varied that suburban women didn't need to go to the city any more. And housewives delighted in the informal attire which permitted them to shop in shorts and slacks.

DISCOUNT STORE

The second phenomenon, the discount store, was born in vast sheds crammed with surplus military goods.

One retailer described the founders of the early discount houses as hungry men who worked long hours, eliminated every service and tried to cut every ounce of fat from their expenses. As a result, they thrived.

How they thrived is illustrated by the fact that in 1961 their volume of business was estimated by The Discount Merchandiser, pioneer publication of the industry, at $4,500,000,000. This compares with department store volume of $14,500,000,000.

The Discount Merchandiser said 500 new discount houses were opened in 1961, bringing the total to 2,000. It estimated another 500 will be established this year, adding another $1,000,000,000 to sales.

The discounters based their merchandising policy on the old premise that everyone loves a bargain. They sold their goods on a markup averaging 24 to 28 per cent. Traditional markup had been 40 to 43 per cent.

Russians Show Willingness To Talk About Berlin Crisis

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The United States and Russia likely will resume negotiations on the Berlin crisis soon, but American diplomatic quarters remain against any assumption that a compromise solution is in sight.

The only encouraging sign, they say, is that the Russians, instead of whipping up a new diplomatic storm—are showing willingness to talk.

Soviet Premier Khrushchev has delayed implementing his long-standing threat to sign a separate peace treaty with Communist East Germany. His optional peace treaty deadline was last December and he has set no new ultimatum.

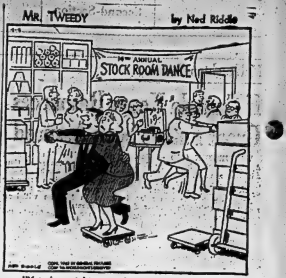
HAVENT BUDGED

But the key point in the issue, says an American authority close to the problem, is that the Russians haven't budged an inch from their original demands and their original intentions—to get the Western Allies out of West Berlin and to win Western recognition for the Communist East German regime.



The U.S. has attempted to concentre discussions on the day - to - day operations of the Autobahn linking West Berlin with West Germany and has proposed the highway, running through Communist territory, be placed under international control.

Russia ridiculed this proposal but Rusk has been informed, in his talks with Gromyko, that there might be some compromise on this proposal provided the Western powers recognize East Germany's physical settlement to the access route.

Rusk has cautioned that while this might be construed as recognition of East Germany and therefore unacceptable, East Germans might be included in some international control team. This would not require U.S. recognition of the East German regime for, in fact, the West deals with East German guards on border points as agents of Russia.

Previous to Geneva, the exploratory talks on Berlin were conducted at Moscow by Gromyko and U.S. Ambassador Llewellyn Thompson, now in Washington consulting with Rusk. It is thought possible that the new talks might be opened this time in Washington between Rusk and his associates and the new Soviet ambassador, Anatoli Dobrynin.

ICEBREAKER AT WORK — While work is in the final stages for opening the 185-mile St. Lawrence Seaway in mid-April, government icebreakers have been in operation the several months now keeping shipping lanes clear along the lower St. Lawrence River. Here, Capt. Alfred Lavoie of the C'Iberville pulls the icebreaker alongside the Manja Dan to break the ship clear of ice. (CP Photo).

Economic Health of Giant Inland Waterway Depends Largely on Steel, Grain

By ALEXANDER FARRELL

MONTREAL (CP)—Aided by a spell of unseasonably mild weather in mid-March, the St. Lawrence Seaway is getting ready to open its fourth season April 15.

As usual, the two big questions are how much grain will move down the seaway to world markets and how much iron ore will move up it to inland steel-manufacturing centres from Quebec and Labrador.

R. J. Rankin, president of the St. Lawrence Seaway Authority, said the economic health of the giant inland waterway in 1962 will depend in large part on the answers to these two questions.

Meanwhile, engineers and technicians are busy preparing for the new season. Along the 186 - mile waterway between Montreal and Lake Ontario operating machinery and communications facilities are being examined, rust wiped away and ice broken up and floated away.

FOUND LESS ICE

Seaway officials report that the arrival of spring found more open water and less solid ice in the seaway this year than last. Little difficulty was therefore anticipated in clearing the route in time for the first vessel.

To speed up the dispersal of broken ice, dummy lockages are being staged in the canals. This involves a complete change of the water in a lock from one level to the next, as is done when a ship is passing through.

The gates and underwater machinery are also being operated as if the season were already in progress, to make sure that they are functioning properly.

The final step, taken in the days immediately preceding the opening date, is to lay buoys along the navigation route.

MISSED GOALS

The seaway has so far been unable to reach the traffic goals predicted by economists when it was still under construction but business showed a considerable increase last year and there is general confidence that this will continue to be the case.

Pierre Camu, vice - president of the seaway authority, predicted in a Montreal speech that close to 26,000,000 tons of cargo will be carried through the seaway this year.

In 1961 more than 23,000,000 tons were carried compared with about 21,000,000 in both 1960 and 1959.

The original estimates called for 26,000,000 tons in the seaway's first year, rising to 37,000,000 this year and the break-even level of 50,000,000 by 1968. On these estimates were based the toll structure and the forecast that the $450,000,000 seaway could pay for itself in 50 years.

TO REVIEW TOLLS

Mr. Camu, himself an economist, said it is still intended to amortize the cost in the half-century period and an agreement between the seaway authority and its United States counterpart the St. Lawrence Seaway Development Corporation, provides for a review of seaway tolls not later than July 1, 1964.

At that time the two bodies are to present conclusions drawn from this review to their respective governments.

Shipping observers in Montreal say the 1962 season should see more ocean-going lines using the seaway and intensified competition among inland ports for this expanding deep-sea commerce.

Montreal has so far withstood the impact of the seaway, remaining a terminal point for many ocean ships and a transshipment point in the grain traffic. In 1961 Montreal had its best cargo season on record—more than 22,000,000 tons were handled—and millions of dollars are currently being spent on port improvements.

English-Language Papers In South African Oppose Nationalist Govt. Politically

Brian Harrow is a South African journalist who has spent many years working for English - language dailies in the country. In this story he discusses the findings of a commission of inquiry into the press.

CAPE TOWN (CP)—Nationalist politicians threatened the English press in South Africa so often after they assumed power 14 years ago that the appointment of the press commission in 1950 was no surprise.

Government supporters hoped that a commission of inquiry would reveal the English press as a monopolistic monster controlled by subversive British interests and bent on the destruction of Afrikanerdom and all it stood for.

After 11 years of zealous factfinding the commission has published the first part of its gigantic report. But its factual approach appears to have ended with the collection of facts. The report on the facts is doctrinaire and hypothetical. It shows little knowledge of the day-to-day running of newspapers.

The report said the conduct of the daily press in South Africa and its limited choice of daily papers militates against formation of an informed public opinion on race and political matters.

WANTS SAPA CHANGE

It recommended that the country's only news agency, the South African Press Association, amend its constitution to give more say in its affairs to the Afrikaans language press.

There are 12 national English-language dailies in South Africa with a total daily circulation of about 800,000 and five Afrikaans dailies with total circulation of about 300,000. The three English Sunday weeklies have a total circulation of about 800,000 and one Afrikaans Sunday paper about 130,000. Circulation of the English press therefore outnumbers that of the Afrikaans press about 4 to 1.

Politically all the English-language papers oppose the Nationalist government; all the Afrikaans papers support it.

The reason for this political division is mainly that the growth of the Afrikaans daily press was allied body and soul to the growth of Afrikaner nationalism.

Today Afrikaans dailies are full-blooded Nationalist Party organs. They dare not oppose the government on any big national issue. The English press supports the Opposition but does so of its own free will.

IMPUTES BIAS

The central theme of the commission's report is how differences of race, language and tradition have influenced the policies of English and Afrikaans newspapers.

It says the two sections of the press are so biased in selection and presentation of race and political news that it is impossible for people who can read only one language "to get an informed and objective opinion of race and politics."

It does not say what an informed and objective opinion is. No doubt each racial group and political party has its own opinion which it regards as the only objective one in multi-racial South Africa there are several aspects of the "truth."

As for presentation and selection of race and political news, both English and Afrikaans newspapers have always given generous coverage to speeches and statements of their political opponents. Polley statements of Prime Minister Hendrik Verwoerd are often given more space in the English press than in the Nationalist press.

CONTENT SIMILAR

Time and again selection of political news is, in fact, the Burger (Nationalist) and the Cape Times (United Party) is substantially the same, suggesting that in choice of political content "news" and not politics is the guiding factor.

It is difficult to say what the commission means by bias. Perhaps it is referring to the English press habit of exposing the humiliations and hardships caused by apartheid—the government's policy of racial segregation—the implication being that it should suppress such news as the Afrikaans press has done for the last 13 years.

Main concern of the commission is the South African news sent overseas. This also, happens to be the main concern of the government. The press says 92 per cent of the political news sent to Reuters from South Africa is sent by SAPA and most of SAPA's news originates from the English press, hardly any from the Afrikaans press.

Also, "87.4 per cent of the votes that can be cast at a SAPA general meeting are controlled by the English press; there control of SAPA is tendentious.

FIND FAULT

Even the Nationalist press has found fault with this part of the report. The Bloemfontein Volksblad commented:

"In all reasonableness it must be pointed out that the worst reports against South Africa are not sent overseas by the agencies but by British correspondents in South Africa . . .

"It is the ordinary laws of economy which determine the English newspapers' power in an organization like SAPA but we believe they do not use that power with contempt."

This is true. The English press does not control SAPA at the expense of the Nationalist newspapers. The domination is only on paper; it has never been exercised. Indeed SAPA is one of the few examples of English-Afrikaner co - operation More than once it has had a Nationalist-journalist cannot speak Afrikaans. But the impression given that all political reporters of English newspapers cannot understand Afrikaans is false. There is not a political journalist in the country who isn't 100-per-cent bilingual.

There is nothing in the report so far that the government can fairly use as an excuse to take action against the English press. If anything an objective assessment shows that if all the reports received overseas had been sent by the Nationalist press the world would be just as cognizant of apartheid's inhumanity as it is now, even if it were described in theoretical rather than human terms.

Third of Snake Charmers Wind Up Poisoned and Dead

By PETER S. SOOG

RANGOON, Burma (AP)—That business of kissing a cobra can be fatal, but there seem to be fewer snake charmers working in Burma than ever before. It is becoming a dying art.

By some estimates about a third of the men following the ancient profession wind up poisoned—and dead.

The snake charmers come from sacred Mount Popa, which rises 4,500 feet above the fertile basin of Central Burma. This is the breeding ground of the famous Naungdaya, better known as the king cobra.

When disturbed, it coils up, raises its head five feet off the ground—and then is ready to strike, its neck, marked by a big V, expands into a sort of hood when angered, and it lashes out with lightning speed.

The object of snake charming, as practised in Burma, is to hypnotize the cobra, then kiss it on the mouth.

It is said cobras lose their venom for 30 days following the monsoon season. Into the breach step the snake charmers' bag the biggest males and take them down to the lowland—to be sacrificed. It's a big bamboo basket.

The performance begins when the charmer, to pipe music, dances around the basket. Then, suddenly, he flips the lid off the basket—and the cobra shoots up, its eyes angry, hood extended and forked tongue darting in and out.

SEIZES SNAKE

The reptile follows the dancer's movements, swaying to the music but never exposing its back to the charmer. Closer and closer dances the charmer —then, like a flash, the snake strikes.

The charmer sidesteps nimbly and, using two fingers, seizes the snake under its hood.

Again and again the snake strikes, but each time the charmer catches it under the hood. After a time, the snake apparently loses its will and dies to slither off in the other direction.

The charmer then catches it and wraps it around his neck next goes to the second basket, and then on to the third.

It is usually at the third basket, with two cobras already entwined around his neck, that the charmer brings the performance to its climax with the sometimes deadly kiss.

At this point the spectators usually shower the charmer with coins. A charmer can make enough money during the three-month period to see him through the entire year.

JOINS PARENTS — Five-year-old Zoltan Szaplonczay, separated from his parents for 4½ years following the Hungarian revolution, has rejoined them at Kingston, Ont. He had been left behind with relatives when his parents fled the country, and they were only successful in obtaining a visa for him to come to Canada. . (CP Photo).

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP)—Five-year-old Zoltan Szaplonczay is getting to know his parents here, after a separation caused by a cold war atmosphere he couldn't understand.

Theodore and Aranka Szaplonczay fled their native Hungary when Zoltan was an infant, leaving their son with relatives in Budapest. They felt they had to escape the Communist regime in Hungary and believed a baby could not survive the mid-winter trip.

The couple's trip from Budapest to Kingston involved a nightmarish trek through deep snow, a lucky crossing of the frontier into Yugoslavia, six months of waiting in a refugee camp and more long months of adjusting to a strange way of life and a new language in Canada.

Young Zoltan, with the intercession of the Red Cross, made the same journey almost five years later as a legal immigrant to Canada in the swift comfort of a scheduled airline flight.

HIRED GUIDE

The Szaplonczays and another fleeing family hired a guide to show them the way out of Hungary. The guide, left them at a spot he said was a mile from the Yugoslav frontier.

The mile turned out to be about 12 miles. The Szaplonczays were separated from the other family in a struggle through deep snow that ended just before dawn on the edge of a highway marking the border. Border guards apparently were sleeping when the couple slipped into Yugoslavia. They had never heard of the other family since losing them that night.

Mr. Szaplonczay now is a research chemist at Queen's University. His wife, also a chemist, was working in a textile plant but gave up her job to devote her full day to Zoltan when he was returned to them in March.

The boy arrived here with a toy squirrel and a handful of building toys about his only possessions. He came to a home bright with so many new toys he scarcely knew which to play with first.

Double-Talk Is Language Employed to Say One Thing When You Think Otherwise

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP)—Is your double-talk getting a bit rusty? Or maybe you just came in, double-talk—in the sense we use the term here—is camouflage language, employed to say one thing when you are thinking something else.

For a brush-up session, here are some examples from everyday life—followed, parenthetically, by their literal translations:

"The organization wouldn't be the same without you, Joe." (it probably would be a lot better.)

"I'd be glad to lend you the money Jim—" (if I didn't know I'd never get it back.)

"I remember your face, but—" (But I'd forget it if I could.)

"I love your little girl's touch on the piano. Please have her play one more tune." (This time with a hammer.)

"Oh, what a darling baby. He's the very image of you, George." (Some kids never have any luck.)

LOVELY COMPLEXION

"I hate to break up the game, but I promised my wife I'd be home early." (Oh, boy, I must be $40 bucks ahead—at least.)

"I wish I could make a marital date with you, Jim." (I'll patent it, and market it as a six cleanser.)

"Your speech really laid 'em in the aisles, chief." (They got tired sleeping sitting up.)

"Tell me, what really is the secret of your lovely complexion?" (Steel wool? Sandpaper?)

"After dinner, we have a real treat. Elmer and Joan are going to tell us about their adventures while bird watching in Peru." (They are, that is, if the mickeys I put in their coffee don't take effect.)

"I think it's wonderful that your dog is so friendly." (If I just could find a pin, I'd get that mutt off my lap.)

"Why of course I don't mind. I love a man who smokes a cigar." (But not here—in Timbuktu.)

"I hear your son is staying on at the university and taking an advanced degree." (What's the matter with him? My son found a job.)

"It's okay, Joe. I know you really didn't mean half of what you said." (But don't worry, old pal, I'll get even for the half you did mean.)

"Now, remember, if there's ever anything I can do for you—" (Don't call me—and you can bet I won't call you.)

Veteran Liner Given Overhaul

MONTREAL—After visiting the 81,237-ton Queen Mary during her recent annual overhaul at Southampton, England, Thomas McLaren, Cunard chief superintendent engineer, reported that her engines were in "superb condition and they will easily stand up to years of service on the North Atlantic."

Mr. McLaren said that the condition of the liner's engines was the more remarkable in view of her high average speeds. On her last voyage prior to overhaul the Queen Mary steamed from Ambrose Channel light vessel to Cherbourg breakwater, a distance of 3,133 miles, at an average of 30.61 knots. The voyage took four days, ten hours and 12 minutes.

Overhaul of the huge liner required six weeks during which hundreds of workmen employed by numerous trades inspected, repaired, cleaned and painted her thousands of parts and fittings. Other workers were employed on tasks as diverse as tuning pianos and servicing the Queen Mary's two palm courts stabilizing fins.

Soviet Union Busily Changing Pattern of Fish Population

By ARCH McKENZIE

OTTAWA (CP) — The Soviet Union is busily rearranging the pattern of its fish population, transplanting some species and importing others, including giant Chinese minnows.

The Soviet Chief Acclimitization Centre is the state organization involved in the airlift of fish eggs and fingerlings.

Transparent plastic bags are being used in the project, says an article in the Soviet News Bulletin published by the embassy here.

Humpbacks, believed to be the same as Pacific pink salmon, have been ferried to the Barents, and White seas near Scandinavia from the far eastern Soviet coast. Now, says the bulletin, some Norwegian fishermen report catching them, having the transplanted fish are bigger than their Pacific brothers.

Following that experiment about two years ago, the Siberian salmon has also been transplanted along with the far eastern crab. Prawns from the same waters have taken root in the Black Sea despite the warmer climate.

PIKE SHIFTED

about the same as the common Canadian variety called pikeperch, pickerel, wall-eyed pike or doré — has been moved to Novosibirsk Sea, a big lake in central Russia.

Lake Baikal, a bigger lake just north of Outer Mongolia, has provided a variety of species for transplanting.

One is the omul—a whitefish called the cisco in this country. Grayling have been shipped to Czechoslovakia and the sterlet, a type of sturgeon, has been exported too.

China has supplied two species of the minnow family which grow to two feet or more in length. One is the white amur, a big planfeeder that the Soviet Union has imported by air to clean heavy growth from rivers and ponds.

The bulletin says about 400,000,000 have been planted near a Moscow — area power station where the water was stagnant with plant growth. It says the fish ate more than 170 tons of weeds.

Another minnow from the Yangtze has been imported in the form of 3,000,000 eggs, for the Ukraine and more southerly

Hawks Strike In 3rd; Whip Habs 5-3

Blake Mad, Pilous Fumes

CHICAGO (CP)—Rudy Pilous was fuming at Lou Fontinato and Toe Blake was irked over the officiating in the aftermath of Tuesday night's Stanley Cup semi-final game here.

Pilous' Chicago Black Hawks won 5-3, squaring the best-of-seven series with Montreal Canadiens at two games apiece.

Rudy had bitter words for the efforts of the Montreal defenceman Fontinato to bottle up Stan Mikita, a key man in the Chicago win.

Said Pilous:

"After watching Fontinato go out of his way to spear Mikita, I would say he had been instructed to do so.

"Mikita was becoming a big concern tonight—just look at his four assists. And I think Fontinato was out against him as a musclemen. Or maybe he just took it upon himself to go after the little guys."

Blake meanwhile was furious about the work of referee Eddie Powers.

"He's pretty hard to beat seven men when you only have five. That's three games in a row we have won out of the same time with penalties. It never happens to the other club."

SCORE FIRST GOAL

The Hawks scored the opening goal of the game after Fontinato and Montreal's Gilles Tremblay were penalized 17 seconds apart early in the first period.

They struck for three goals—two by Ab McDonald—in the final period to win after the clubs left the ice tied 2-2 in the opening 40 minutes of play.

Fifth game of the series is to be played in Montreal Thursday night.

Bobby Hull, Bronco Horvath and Bill (Red) Hay scored Chicago's goals. The Montreal scorers were Jean Beliveau, Dickie Moore and Gilles Tremblay.

Rod Gilbert Scores Pair

Ranger Rookie Sparks 4-2 Victory

By BOB EXELL

NEW YORK (CP)—Rod Gilbert, a 20-year-old rookie with a knack around the net, has put New York Rangers back in Stanley Cup contention with Toronto Maple Leafs.

Gilbert provided half of the Rangers' goal production Tuesday night as New York defeated Toronto 4-2 to even their best-of-seven semi-final 3-2. The clubs meet again in Toronto Thursday and Saturday, returning to New York Sunday for the seventh game, if needed.

"I've never been so thrilled in my life—especially when I got my first one," said the crew-cut youngster who plays regularly with Kitchener-Waterloo of the Eastern Pro League.

The Rangers brought Balon up for the third game Sunday night. In that one he also assisted on Balon's winning goal.

STARTS QUICKLY

Tuesday night, Gilbert, a Montrealer who began to learn English about four years ago, opened the scoring after just 41 seconds had elapsed. He intercepted a Leafs pass and shot from about 20 feet out to the right of the cage, plunking the puck in the far corner.

Gilbert, who wears a restraining corset because of a back injury, scored again at 15:46 of the first period. Johnny Wilson had passed out from the corner of the Leafs' net to Balon, who got it over to Gilbert.

The second period was scoreless and midway through the third period the sellout crowd of almost 16,000 beginning to hope Gump Worsley might get a shutout.

But at 11:50, after Rangers' defenceman Larry Cahan had been sent off for elbowing, Toronto's Bobby Pulford knocked in a shot by Red Kelly.

SCORES WINNER

Balon put New York ahead 3-1 at 14:01. Gilbert took a pass from Doug Harvey on the right boards inside his own blueline skated more than half the length of the ice, and moved the puck over to Balon, who scored from about 15 feet out.

About two minutes later Bob Nevin picked up Tim Horton's rebound and flipped it into the left corner, well out of the reach of the prostrate Worsley.

The puck hit Gendron's stick and slid into the empty cage. The Leafs put Bower back in goal.

"It's the game we needed to keep in the running," said playing-coach Harvey of the Rangers. "Our guys seem to be getting a little more confidence. I thought that it was one of our better games."

DISAPPOINTED WITH LEAFS

Punch Imlach, Leafs coach and general manager, said his club "could have played better.

DA Steps Up Paret Probe

NEW YORK (CP) — Emile Griffith of New York, who fatally injured Benny (Kid) Paret in their world welterweight title bout March 24, says "it will be some time before I fight again."

The 24-year-old champion, who regained the title by knocking out Paret in the 12th round of their scheduled 15-rounder, was shaken when he learned of Benny's death at Roosevelt Hospital here Tuesday.

He said he does not plan to retire, "but it will be some time before I fight again."

Paret, 25, suffered brain injuries in the bout and died after being hit with 29 consecutive punches.

Griffith said he will "do anything in his power" to help Paret's wife, who has a two-year-old son and expects another child in seven months.

"That means money or any other assistance I can render. It also means the future as well as now."

There has been criticism that Paret fought too soon after taking a severe beating in a 10-round knockout loss to middleweight champion Gene Fullmer last Dec. 9.

SHOWS NO OLD INJURY

Dr. Milton Helpern, chief medical examiner at Roosevelt Hospital, said Tuesday an autopsy on Paret "did not reveal any gross evidence of old brain injury."

"Death was caused by complications of brain injuries sustained as the result of the boxing match. These injuries consisted of scattered small traumatic hemorrhages in the brain substance and were associated with cerebral concussion."

Bears Trim Reds 7-2

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP) — Al Johnson, Ray Kinasewich and Myron Stankiewicz each scored twice as Hershey Bears defeated Providence Reds 7-2 Tuesday night in an opening Calder Cup playoff game.

The second contest in the American Hockey League best-of-three "Eastern Division Series at each will be played Thursday in Providence.

It was the first defeat in the last eight games for the Reds, who got goals from Danny Poirier and Stan Baluik.

Belchs' Whip Callows 6-4

Belch Construction moved to within one victory of the Prince Edward North Shore Hockey League championship last night by defeating Callows A. 6-4.

The Construction crew leads the best-of-seven set three games to two with the sixth tilt slated for Belleville Arena on Thursday night at 8.15.

Ralph Plaus, paced the winners' attack last night with three goals. Other markers went to Ralph Boomhower, Don Wood and Larry Bowbotham. D. Hallam, Boomhower and Howbotham drew assists.

Ab Wright led Callows with two goals and one assist. Bob Wannamaker and Larry Westfall added the other goals. Wannamaker and Jim Campbell had single assists.

The losers drew six of the game's ten penalties.

Western Hockey

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP)—Gordon Stratton flipped a short shot past goalie Al Rollins in the second period and Spokane held on for a 1-0 victory over Portland in a Western Hockey League playoff game Tuesday night.

The victory gave runner-up Spokane a 2-0 lead over first-place Portland in the best-of-seven Southern Division playoff. The Comets won the opener 2-1 at Spokane Saturday night.

Archie Now Sixth Heavy

'Ring' Dethrones Moore

NEW YORK (AP) — Ring magazine today withdrew its recognition of Archie Moore as world light-heavyweight boxing champion and installed the old gladiator sixth among heavyweight contenders.

Ring, in releasing its latest monthly ratings, declared the light-heavyweight title vacant and named Harold Johnson of Philadelphia, recognized champion by the National Boxing Association as the No. 1 contender. Johnson meets Doug Kenny of New York April 12 in a title fight which will probably clear up the disputed championship.

Ring said it took the action against Moore because major boxing bodies, with the exception of the California State Athletic Commission, had followed the lead of the NBA and New York State Athletic Commission in stripping Moore of the crown for failure to defend it in the proper time.

Ring noted Moore weighed 197 pounds — 22 pounds over the light-heavyweight limit of 175 — when he knocked out Alejandro Lavorante, the Argentine contender, last week. Lavorante, who had been sixth in the ratings, was dropped to eighth.

CLEROUX IS FOURTH

To make room for Moore in the heavyweight top 10, Dick Richardson, European champion from Wales, was removed from the elite group.

Only one Canadian is in the listings, heavyweight Bob Cleroux of Montreal. He is ranked fourth behind champion Floyd Patterson of New York, Sonny Liston of Philadelphia, Eddie Machen of Portland, Ore., and Zora Folley of Chandler, Ariz.

Ring also recognized the following as champions: Middleweight Terry Downes of England; welterweight Emile Griffith, New York; lightweight Joe Brown of Houston, Tex.; featherweight Davey Moore, Columbus, O.; bantamweight Eder Jofre, Brazil and flyweight Kiyoptch.

FIRST CENT

Irish Eliminates Marlies

TORONTO (CP)—St. Michael's College Majors, defending Memorial Cup champions, defeated Toronto Marlboros 3-1 Tuesday night in the seventh and deciding game of their Ontario Hockey Association Metro Junior A final.

The Majors, who rebounded with three straight victories after being down 3-1 at one stage of the series, now meet Hamilton Red Wings in the best-of-seven Memorial Cup eastern semi-final starting in Hamilton Friday night.

Oshawa Honors Champion

Mayor Christine Thomas announced at a civic banquet on the 22-year-old Jackson, who won the title in Prague last month, was being presented with a new automobile.

Jackson neither accepted nor declined the gift, and his decision when it comes will indicate whether he plans to retire from amateur competition.

Jackson, smiling, said he would make up his mind later whether to accept the convertible. He added:

"I hope my decision will be suitable to everybody involved."

A convertible given to Barbara Ann Scott by her home city of Ottawa after she won the world's women's crown 15 years ago put a big hole in her figure skating authorities. She had to give the car back to protect her amateur standing, although she later was presented officially.

Jackson was paraded down the main street in the car earlier in the evening as about 10,000 Oshawa residents lined the sidewalks. Streets were crammed for three blocks around city hall, where there was a public reception.

Mayor Thomas gave him the Oshawa Gold Medal, the city's highest award, and President Al Robson presented him with a life membership in the Oshawa Skating Club where he began his career, 13 years ago.

Eddie Arcaro Hangs Gear

'Old Banana Nose' Quits

NEW YORK (AP)—Eddie Arcaro, one of the greatest jockeys in horse racing history, has come to the end of his riding career after 30 years in the saddle. He might have ridden around another year if Jaipur had been nominated for the Kentucky Derby classic.

The immortal, or Old Banana Nose, as many folks called the 46-year-old veteran, made official his retirement Tuesday night.

Arcaro has probably ridden more star horses than any jockey in United States turf annals. He quit as the outstanding money rider of all time. No other jockey has won five Kentucky Derbies, six Preakness Stakes and six Belmont Stakes.

"My sincerely believe that if Mr. Widener was going to run Jaipur in the derby, I'd have stayed around another year," Arcaro said.

Jaipur was a top two-year-old of 1951 and Arcaro rode him. But trainer D. Wodener, chairman of The Jockey Club and former owner of Belmont Park, has a consuming desire to win the Belmont Stakes.

Jaipur is pointed for the May 5 Derby and the colt hasn't raced since last fall. Trainer Bert Mulholland has been taking the colt along slowly with the idea of getting him mind, and will give his initial 1952 start in the $50,000 Gotham Stakes, Saturday at Aqueduct Park here.

Arcaro will be field representative for the American Thoroughbred Company, which leases the mares owned by other tracks. American Tote is a division of Universal Controls.

Arcaro won a record 546 stakes races in every part of the U.S. He rode 4,779 winners with total purses of $30,346, another record. His total victory list is exceeded only by Johnny Longden, with more than 5,300, and Britain's Sir Gordon Richards, with 4,870.

In the Dressing Rooms

By CHARLES CHAMBERLAIN

CHICAGO (AP) — Chicago Black Hawks' dressing room looked like the first aid station near a battleground Tuesday night after the Hawks' 5-2 victory over Montreal Canadiens in a vicious, rough - and - tumble Stanley Cup playoff game.

Defenceman Red Fleming sprawled on one cot with a gash in his right eye open. Trainer Nick Gerard was trying to stop the blood so it could be stitched and at the same time reach a dentist on the phone to repair Fleming's teeth. A row of them were knocked out. It took 20 stitches to close the cut.

In the office of the Hawks' dressing room, coach Rudy Pilous was telling about the opposing tactics of the Canadiens' Lou Fontinato.

"After watching Fontinato go out of his way to spear (Stan) Mikita, I would say he had been instructed to do so," fumed Pilous. "Mikita has become a going concern around here, and at his four assists tonight. And I think Fontinato has it in for against him as a musicleman. Or maybe he just took it upon himself to go after the little guys."

KNOTS SERIES

The triumph tied the best-of-seven semi-final 3-2. The clubs go to Montreal for the fifth game Thursday.

"The Canadiens still have the advantage," said Pilous. "We have to win a game in Montreal. We have it up there last Thursday and now we have to vindicate ourselves. We intend to beat them four straight. But what we intend to do and what we actually do are two different things. Ever hear of anyone beating Montreal four straight?"

Montreal coach Toe Blake was furious about the officiating of referee Ed Powers.

"It's pretty hard to beat seven men when you have only five," said Blake. "That's three games in a row we have had two men out at the same time with penalties. It never happens to the other club, always to us. You know what they are trying to prove."

Blake was referring to the first-period penalties drawn by Gilles Tremblay and Fontinato.

Asked whether he thought it was an exceptionally rough game, Blake stated: "You could have been awful rough with all those penalties."

Montreal drew 35 penalties to the Hawks' 29.

Fontinato said the crowd's chant of "Get Fontinato" didn't bother him but he was sorry because of catching a beer can in the head.

"Norris (Jim Norris, owner of the Hawks) ought to spend a few bucks to put up barricades so those cans don't come flying out on the ice. They'll wait until something serious happens and be sorry. It never happens any place except Chicago."

Gary Merrill Has to Put On Shoes Visiting Hotels

By BOB THOMAS

Good thing, too, the Beverly Hills hotel being inclined to conservatism. Gary, of course, has become known as the barefoot boy with Chick; and Chick being Rita Hayworth. They are said to frequent local hideouts nude from the ankles down.

Merrill didn't deny it.

"I'm against shoes," he declared. "Some restaurants object, too, but I usually get my way. So what's the difference if you have a strip of leather under your sole?

"Most of the places don't mind, though. I get away with it same as I got away with wearing walking shorts in New York for years.

I hesitantly asked the state of the barefoot romance, which had been reported in the gossip columns as finished.

PLAY GOLF

"All I can report is that Rita and I played golf Tuesday against Jack Warden and Dick Widmark," he said. "Beat 'em, too. Not only that, they had to ride the electric cart."

Whether the romance is on or off, contracts for their professional teaming have been signed. They start rehearsals in August for a new play, Step on a Crack, scheduled for a Nov. 7 Broadway opening.

"Rita is lazy, like me," Gary commented. "But she can work hard if she finds something that interests her. She's interested."

I asked if he thought he and Rita would get married.

"Don't think so," he said thoughtfully. "I think we're all kind of losers. Rita's been married four times, I've been married twice. Neither of us so hot. Besides, I'm still paying on my first marriage."

Merrill's marriage, I was to Bette Davis, and the aftermath may yet get ugly.

PERFECTS COURT FIGHT

"I'm afraid we're going to drag it out in court," he reported. "Bette won't let me see the children—wouldn't let me visit them at Christmas or Easter. She won't give in, so we'll have to fight it out in public. Seems a shame."

Merrill is leaving this week for Hong Kong to make a movie called The Sources. Some Italian producers — wonderful fellows, he said — at least so I've heard. I've never met them."

The trip will interrupt not only his barefoot romance, but his speaking engagements. Between acting jobs, he travels to various cities to speak on the topic that interests him most: peace.

Weather Forecasters Start To Pick up Stern Critics

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

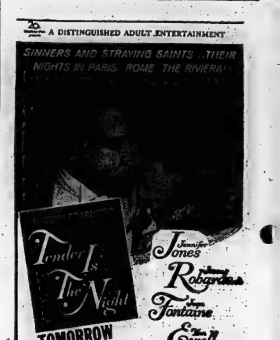
NEW YORK (AP)—With the blooming of the first daffodil and the return of the urge to get outdoors, the chatty bend of television weather reporters start picking up stern criticism—people whose business is affected by predicting of bad weather.

Sometimes, it appears, forecasts are inaccurate. Sometimes viewers misunderstood those evening meteorological chalk-talks. The result is that outings to the beach, motor trips or tickets to outdoor shows are cancelled—needlessly.

There have been reports from beach resorts about concessionaires left with huge supplies of unconsumed hot dogs when anticipated crowds failed to arrive after weather forecasts inaccurately predicted stormy weather.

What these people would like, apparently, is for weather reporters to inform the audience what the weather is doing at the moment (which they know anyway) and to make a big secret about the future—an unlikely situation.

Most of us appreciate educated guesses about tomorrow's weather today, but, also most of us could dispense with all those maps and comment about lows and highs and pressure systems. I could also dispense happily with the time-filling chatter of the forecasters.



Steve Allen is very busy—although not in front of TV cameras. His production company is turning out a TV series called Jazz Scene, U.S.A. for syndication, and another, The Boomers, an oldfields adventure series for—hopefully—network use. And he's writing music for a Broadway show.

U.S. Lead-for-Food Swap With Canadian, Australian Firms Has Sparked Protests

By HAROLD MORRISON

WASHINGTON (CP) — The United States government is operating an extensive $19,000,000 lead-for-food swap with Canadian and Australian firms that has sparked protests among midwestern mining centres and raised hasty accusations that were quickly withdrawn.

Under the deal, signed last year and now in the "status of being performed," the U.S. agriculture department has agreed to accept 30,000 tons of lead from the Consolidated Mining and Smelting Company in British Columbia and 50,000 tons from an Australian firm for stockpiling purposes.

In exchange, these firms were to get control over the export of certain U.S. surplus agricultural products including wheat, wheat flour, feedgrain and tobacco, to be shipped to other non-Communist countries in exchange for cash or other products to be shipped and sold in Canada and Australia.

While U.S. mining interests complained that the American metals market would be inundated, the agriculture department argued that taking the lead surpluses from Canada and Australia would ease pressure on the world lead market—and besides it costs less to store lead than it does surplus food which could deteriorate.

CITES STORAGE COSTS

One agriculture official estimated that including depreciation and other costs, storage of the surplus foodstuffs amounted to some $5 a ton a year while the lead would cost only 12 cents a ton annually.

The agriculture department made clear that none of the bartered American agricultural products would go to Canada or Australia. Shipments would move direct from the U.S., through American agents, to the non-Communist consuming countries.

In exchange, the importers could provide the lead exporting firms with cash equivalents of the agricultural products or other goods which could be sold in Canada and Australia and the proceeds turned over to the lead exporters.

OFFER 55,000 TONS

For the 55,000 tons of lead, the Canadian firm was to get the proceeds from American surplus agricultural products valued at $6,985,000. The U.S. is providing $12,020,980 worth of these products to the Australian exporter in exchange for 50,000 tons of lead.

An example of the deals made is $1,600,000 worth of wheat, wheat flour and feedgrain shipped to Peru under the Canadian barter deal. Another is $665,000 worth of U.S. tobacco shipped to Portugal.

Other countries which have agreed to accept the surplus commodities including Japan, Italy, Ireland, Costa Rica and Israel. Still to be completed are deals with some countries in the Latin American area.

Amid the confusion, consternation and worry caused particularly in midwestern mining communities, the agriculture department appears to have reached one definite conclusion — once this experiment is completed, there won't be any more lead-for-food swaps.

St. Lawrence River Pilots Plan Strike In Fight for Better Working Conditions

MONTREAL (CP) — Nearly 200 St. Lawrence River pilots, angered by what they term a "negative attitude" of ship owners toward their demands for better working conditions, have announced plans for a strike which could tie up shipping between Less Escoumains, Que., and Kingston.

The decision, announced in a prepared statement Wednesday, set the starting date of the walkout for 12:01 p.m. EST, Friday.

The 200 pilots affected are all split with the shippers over tariff changes in pilotage, which they say favor the owners, and the number of pilots employed.

Through the tariff changes the cost per net ton of shipping has decreased every year since 1957.

While the strike could cause a major problem in shipping circles in the area affected, Andre Bedard, president of the St. Lawrence Pilots Federation, said Wednesday measures have been taken to "assure the safety of all ships now in transit on the St. Lawrence River."

NINE ON RIVER

At present, there are nine ships on the river between Les Escoumains and 30 miles northeast of Quebec City, and Montreal.

The pilots now earn an annual average of $12,000. They protested at a meeting here March

Inspector Held On Two Charges Of Perjury

MEMBOO, Ont. (CP) — Jack Book, 35, Sudbury inspector for this Toronto suburb, was arrested today on two charges of perjury.

Book was arrested quietly at the town hall on a perjury warrant issued Wednesday following a meeting between Attorney-General Kelso Roberts and Crown Attorney Henry Bull.

In a brief appearance in Toronto magistrate's court he was remanded to April 13 on $1,000 bail.

Book's arrest followed a police investigation that began when Book told a Mimico council meeting Feb. 22 that he lied at the judicial inquiry last year to protect his family.

The first count alleged that Book falsely testified that funds for the purchase of a garage in 1959 were received by a relative who was not connected with the building trade.

The second allegation was that Book falsely testified that he paid a $500 instalment in cash towards the purchase of a boat from the Sansom Marine Company in September, 1959.

CNR Tries Cuts In Passenger Fares in East

MONTREAL (CP)—The CNR, faced with a steady decline in passenger traffic in recent years, today announced an experimental program of drastically reduced fares to try to win travellers back.

The program is to go into effect for one year starting May 1, at all points east of Montreal on the main CNR line through Drummondville, Que., and in the Maritimes.

A railway said the new fares—offering savings of up to 50 per cent and free meals in some cases — will be based on the St. Lawrence River."

The fares will be represented by three new tickets—red ones for bargain days, white for economy days and blue for regular days.

The bargain fares will apply in May and from Oct. 1 to April 30, 1963, every day except Fridays, Sundays and holidays.

The economy fares will be used for trips beginning on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursdays and Saturdays from June 1 to Sept. 30, and on trips beginning Fridays and Sundays between Oct. 1 and April 30.

The standard fares will be used for trips beginning on Fridays and Sundays from June 1 to Sept. 30 and such holidays as Christmas, New Year's and Easter.

The present one-way fare between Montreal and Halifax by coach is $39.95. Under the bargain rates, it will be $23, rising to $17 on economy days with the standard fare set at $21.

Wounded Moslems Shun Hospitals Fearing New Raids by Terrorists

ALGIERS (Reuters) — Moslems wounded by European terrorists are being treated in private homes for fear the Secret Army Organization will repeat Tuesday's bloody raid on a clinic here, it was learned today.

Informed Moslem sources said a substantial number of the wounded were being cared for by relatives or friends because "they still see in the hospital."

Ten Moslems were gunned to death Tuesday when terrorists sprayed a clinic with tommygun fire and then blew up part of the building.

Moslems have been the chief victims in communal battles since last month's ceasefire. Of 15 persons killed in Algeria Wednesday, 38 were Moslems, adds.

Thirty-six of 37 persons wounded Wednesday were Moslems.

In the western Algerian port city of Oran, meetings with contacts with 4200,000 were held Wednesday night. In Algiers, Secret Army members pounded the Moslem quarters of old Algiers and fired on two Moslems.

The Secret Army has been attempting to provoke Moslems into reprisals which would force French troops to side with the extremists, but Moslem leaders have maintained iron discipline.

The Belcourt bombing brought the Moslem crowds into the streets, but French troops and Moslem leaders moved quickly to restore order and prevent the feared reprisals.

The eastern Algerian town of Bone was rocked by 27 grenade explosions within a 3½-hour period Wednesday night, but casualties or damage. They were believed to be riot grenades.

Robarts Says Ban on Mining In Provincial Parks to Stay

TORONTO — The Ontario Government plans to continue its 1956 ban on prospecting and claim staking in provincial parks.

Premier John Robarts told the Legislature yesterday no new legislation is being considered.

He said the statement was to clear up misunderstandings which arose from references to the reopened public lands investigation committee.

Mines Minister George Wardrope had told the House during consideration of his department's estimates he could see no reason why mining and recreation could not exist side by side.

Mr. Wardrope said it was clear the committee felt there should not be exclusion of mining from whole areas such as provincial parks since mining groups need hold only surface rights to conduct operations.

Mining was permitted in parks before 1939 and during the Second World War when strategic materials were needed, Mr. Wardrope said. It has been prohibited since 1956.

"This is the Government policy and it is in effect and which continues in effect," he said. "Our parklands are a priceless heritage and it is our aim to develop them for the use of all people."

Sept. 10 Is Suggested Date For Commonwealth Parley

LONDON (CP)—Prime Minister Macmillan has proposed Sept. 10 as a suitable starting date for a conference of Commonwealth prime ministers to discuss Britain's bid to join the European Common Market, it was learned Wednesday night.

It now remains to be seen whether the suggested timing fits the work-schedule of the other 12 prime ministers.

In suggesting September—the British government is gambling that by then it will have a clear idea of the conditions for Britain's entry into the European Economic Community.

The September meeting, with London rather than Ottawa as proposed venue, would afford premiers an opportunity for a final statement of view on the price of British entry.

The Commonwealth concensus will undoubtedly be a major factor. This is true despite cynical woes suggest that Macmillan has already made up his mind to go in, whatever Commonwealth misgivings may say.

Australian Prime Minister Menzies warned House of Representatives in Canberra Wednesday night that Australia's manufacturing and primary industries will be jeopardized if Britain joins the six - nation group.

Menzies was urging that an independent authority be set up in Australia to recommend whether tariffs and quantitative restrictions where necessary to protect local industry. Australia and Canada are reported leading Commonwealth opposition to Britain's entry into the Common Market. They are fearful that Common Market membership for Britain will mean the end of preferential tariffs.

Canadian Prime Minister Diefenbaker has been urging a meeting of the six nations.

Although Sept. 10 has been suggested, it may take some time to find out if this date suits all the Commonwealth leaders, it was learned.

Meanwhile in Wuppertal, West Germany, Alwin Mommertz, president of the West German Industry and Trade Congress, told the Chamber of Commerce there Wednesday that Australia, New Zealand and Canada were expected to be treated as non-members of the Common Market once transitional arrangements following Britain's entry has expired.

50 Million Dollar Office Building Proposed by Govt.

TORONTO (CP)—A $50,000,000 complex of government office buildings will be built in the next 10 years adjacent to the seat of provincial government at Queen's Park, Premier Robarts announced today.

Calling it the "largest office building development in the history of Ontario," Mr. Robarts told the legislature the development will gather in the next provincial civil servants now scattered through 29 different locations in downtown Toronto.

It will comprise four high-rise office blocks, linked by a central three-storey building. The whole project will be immediately to the north of the Ontario East Block, currently the seat of the bulk of the civil service departments, and will occupy most of two city blocks bounded by Bay, Wellesley and Grosvenor Streets and Surrey Place.

First tenders are to be called in October, 1963, with the first four-storey block to be completed by mid-1966. The entire project will cost $12,000 square feet of office space.

The first stage will centre around a 34-storey block with a second around a 19-storey block and third around a six - storey building and the fourth around the highest building—a 28-storey structure which would be the province's third highest landmark.

Mr. Robarts said the project should meet increased efficiency, economy and public convenience. He stressed that the main 70 - year - old legislature building will be largely untouched, although members of the legislature will get more office space as government departments are moved into new quarters.

"It is not terribly efficient and there are those who do not think it is particularly beautiful," Mr. Roberts said in understatement. "However, it is a comforting old landmark that is becoming more steeped in tradition with each year that passes."

THREE ELDERLY WOMEN DIE IN TORONTO FIRE

Call Arson Squad For Investigation

TORONTO (CP) — Three women, all in their late 70s, died early today in a fire at a private home for elderly women.

Those dead are Mrs. 71, Marion Towers, 79, and Mrs. Frank Cocker, 71, were dead on arrival at the Toronto General Hospital. They were among five women carried by firemen from the second storey of the home rescued by Miss Dorothy Ashbridge.

Mrs. William Daniel and Kellie Spaulding were carried down by firemen from a second-floor verandah. Neither had been told of the evacuation order.

Mrs. Daniel said she was awakened by a commotion and someone banging on the house.

"I thought it was Miss Sprachman trying to get in, so I got up and I went to help her," she said. "I found the house was filled with smoke and it was hot. I yelled for everyone to get out. I think perhaps Miss Jamieson lost her head."

STAIRS GO BACK

The fire apparently started near the back entrance to the building. Damage caused by fire has been unable to determine the cause. The arson squad has been called in to investigate.

Damage to the rambling two-storey brick home was estimated at $30,000.

The house is part of a Crown land grant leased in 1796 to the present owner's great - great - grandmother and great-grandfather.

NEW SAFETY ACT IS INTRODUCED IN LEGISLATURE

Workers' Safety Up to Employers

TORONTO (CP) — A bill to implement recommendations of one of Ontario's most-discussed royal commissions topped Wednesday's business in the legislature.

Labor Minister Warrender introduced legislation to repeal the Building Trades Protection Act of 1911 and in its stead introduced a new Construction Safety Act.

He said the action follows, recommendations of the royal com. mission on industrial safety, which presented its report last fall, and of the Ontario Advisory Labor Safety Council of Ontario.

"This new act places the main responsibility for the safety of workmen where we feel it rightfully belongs—squarely upon the employer," he said.

Responsibility for enforcing the safety provisions will rest with the municipalities.

HAVE NEW POWERS

Mr. Warrender cited as one of the main features the new powers of building inspectors. Such inspectors would be able to demand drawings, and specifications for construction projects, and can issue "stop-work" orders until the regulations of the act are complied with.

"The fine for failure to obey a stop-work order can be up to $100 a day for every day the regulations are ignored," the labor minister said.

Some other sections of the act provide penalties of fines up to $1,000 imprisonment for up to 12 months, or both.

The act covers not only building, but also such other structures as derricks, not covered in the former act.

MUST APPOINT

Municipalities of 50,000 population and over are required, under the new act, to appoint their own inspectors and enforce the provisions. Counties will be responsible for appointing inspectors and enforcing the act in municipalities where there are no inspectors.

Two or more municipalities will be able to join forces in appointing an inspection staff. And the labor department will have inspectors for unorganized territories.

The department will help municipalities to select suitable persons for the job of inspector and help them carry out their duties.

Mr. Warrender stressed the role of the industry and the worker.

"A workman who knowingly endangers the safety of his fellow persons or who fails to use or wear protective devices or clothing when required by his employer, can be fined up to $500."

EDMONTON (CP)—Dr. Ray March of Fort Nelson, B.C., says the federal government's refusal to send a doctor to look after the Prophet River reserve Indians is getting its up dams mad. I don't know what to do next."

In a telephone interview from Fort Nelson, 500 miles northwest of here, Dr. March, a private practitioner, said Wednesday Dr. A. J. Cunningham, head of the Fraser River health unit at Dawson Creek, B.C., visited the reserve Saturday — but he couldn't bother to send another 67 miles to look at our hospital records on these Indians."

Dr. March visited the reserve Indians March 19 after he received a telephone call from Prophet River to tell him that "many of the Indians were sick."

He said he found Indians of the Sekanner band lying on the dirt floors of their wood - and - tarpaper shacks "incredibly dirty, sick and virtually starving." He said all were infected with hepatitis, a disease which affects the liver.

Dr. Cunningham said Saturday: "After examining their fire, ving quarters and speaking with the Indians, I arrived at the conclusion that the situation has been blown comletely out of proportion."

He said the Indians were "a pretty healthy bunch" and "the report that 30 Indians were infected with hepatitis is completely absurd." He said the Indians had been living off the land in terms of food at any time this winter.

Dr. March said all I want "is a doctor appointed and to come up here" to this hospital.

Dr. Paul de Montigny, partner in private practice with Dr. March, said in a telephone interview from Edmonton Thursday March that, "someone is trying to blame Dr. March for the protest those who are responsible."

"Sending Dr. Cunningham to Fort Nelson officials last Thursday and said he would investigate," he said. Admission $2. Adm. prizes to town 247-re-tu-f-tf

Union Will Not Defy Action Of Government

House Will Sit Until Strike Deadline Passed

TORONTO (CP) — Premier Roberts said today the legislature will sit until midnight, the announced strike deadline for 8,300 Ontario Hydro employees, to ensure that a walkout does not take place. But a union spokesman said the men will not defy government legislation outlawing the strike.

Union officials today sent telegrams cancelling the strike to members throughout the province.

Kelley Cummings, president of the Hydro local of the National Union of Public Service Employees (NUPE), described just government's action as "strictly unjustifiable from start to end" but said the union will not defy the law.

The bill will make a strike or lockout in Hydro illegal and provide for compulsory arbitration of the issues in dispute.

Premier Roberts introduced the bill in the legislature just before Wednesday afternoon's adjournment.

It came after a day of hurry-up, last - minute negotiations. Mr. Roberts told Labor Minister Warrender both attempted to persuade the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission and the National Union of Public Service Employees (CLC) to resolve their differences without a strike.

'ALMOST UNTHINKABLE'

Legislative action was taken reluctantly, Mr. Roberts told the House, because a strike which would be "almost unthinkable in this gravity of its possible consequences for the people of Ontario."

The arbitrator, whose decision will be binding on both parties, had been appointed as of Wednesday night but his name was expected to be announced to the House when debate begins at 2 p.m. EST.

Opposition parties did not make clear immediately what their stand on the measure would be.

To forestall a strike, the bill must receive second and third readings and be signed by Lieutenant-Governor J. Keiller Mackay—he will be standing by at Queen's Park—before the union's deadline midnight tonight.

Kelley Cummings, president of the Hydro union local, said the legislation will be protested at the international convention of the Canadian Labor Congress in Winnipeg next week by Gordon Archer, president of the Ontario Federation of Labor, agreed.

Tweed Liberals Elect New Executive, Hear Candidate

TWEED, (Staff)—Sixty cit- dividual farmers of these corizens from this community met porations by the large operlast night to elect a new exec- ator, he advised.
utive for the Tweed Liberal Association at the community hall, and to hear an address by Robert Temple, the Liberal candidate for Parliament in the next federal election.

Reg Dunham was the meeting's unanimous choice for the presidency of the association. Other executive members elected were Stan Trudeau, first vice-president; Mrs. Janet Manlon, second vice-president; Bob Beare, secretary; Clare Rashotte, treasurer; and Ken Lavallee, Vince Lynch, Guy Hughes and Anthony Craigen as poll chairmen.

Mr. Temple advised the association members and executive that the election could be expected to be called within the next two weeks.

Speaking on the political situation Mr. Temple stated that many problems existed in the country today due to mismanagement by the incumbent government. He expressed concern over the situation of the farmer and his ability to retain his position as an independent freeholder due to the present spiral in which he was caught.

Since the current government took over the cost of farm services has increased by five per cent according to the latest data from the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, Mr. Temple said. This price increase has not been met with a similar increase in farm revenue but has been accompanied by a loss of 3.5 per cent in produce income during the same period according to the same information source, he added.

This situation leaves the individual farmer, who was and remains the backbone of Canada development and existence, open to being priced out of existence by large corporations who eventually engulf him, Mr. Temple commented. This trend is already indicated through the purchase of farms formerly owned by in-

DISPUTES CLAIM

Despite government claims that they have done more for the farmer in the past three years than done by the Liberals in the previous ten years the fact still remains that the average farm income for the last ten years of Liberal government was $1,459,900,000, whereas the average farm income for the first three years of the present government has been but $1,380,000,000, according to the latest available figures, Mr. Temple stated.

He also said that the country's rate of growth under the current government was not sufficient to even keep up with the natural growth of Canada's population and cited current employment and unemployment figures to support his statements.

The speaker promised to dedicate himself towards the establishment of a federal policy of free education for any Canadian with the ability to advance his education and a policy of cash grants to assist students where need exists so that they may continue their advanced education. If such a policy is not established the development of the country will be further behind than it has over the past few years, he commented.

Mr. Temple was introduced by Frank Pollwell, former Liberal member of Parliament for Hastings South. Mr. Roy Reid, president of the South Hastings Liberal Association, congratulated the new executive of the Tweed Liberal Association on their election.

REJECTS CLAIM

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney-General Robert Kennedy rejected Wednesday a declaration by Rep. Hiss that a 91-year-old claim of innocence to perjury can now be proven by Richard M. Nixon's new book, Six Crises. The United States Justice department recently reviewed the case carefully, Kennedy said, because of renewed controversy over a key item in possession of a typewriter—but found nothing to substantiate Hiss' contentions.

Five Persons In Reno Fire Still Missing

RENO, Nev. (AP)—Five persons were still unaccounted for today as firemen prepared to tear down the walls still standing of the fire-ravaged New Golden Hotel.

The lobby body recovered so far was identified as that of Gertrude Rokbrugh, 64, proprietor of San Francisco children's shop.

Miss Rokbrugh unaccounted-for were identified as:

Lucia Pedlar, about 75, a resident of the hotel.

Nathaniel Banks, 51, hotel porter and bookkeeper.

Mrs. Marie Colden, Sacramento, Calif.

Walter H. Klitz, Herlong, Calif.

The search for bodies was held up Wednesday while fire officials sought permission from hotel owners and insurance adjusters to tear down the walls, which Fire Chief Wayne Sorensen said made the ruins a death trap.

Sorensen said it was possible that some of the missing persons' bodies were but failed to notify authorities.

Several others who had previously been unaccounted for turned up safe Wednesday. They had returned to their homes.

Sorensen said the fire that razed the 50-year-old, four-story building behind Reno's casino row started in a basement from a gas leak.

Hydro Users In Suburbs To Get Relief

TORONTO (CP) — W. Ross Strike, chairman of the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission, announced Wednesday a rate reduction that will affect 90,000 suburban customers in the province.

Mr. Strike said some relief will be given to shopping rates for residents of heavily populated suburbs using not more than 749 kilowatt-hours a month.

Under the new schedule customers will pay 2 cents per kwh for each kilowatt-hour above 240 a month. This is now the "real" rate."

Previously customers paid 1.1 cents an hour after the first 240 kilowatt-hours, and 1.5 cents over 740 kilowatt-hours.

The new rates will apply in areas where there are at least 1,000 customers per square mile, a density of 46 or more customers per mile.

Mr. Strike said: "As customer density increases by suburban development in townships adjacent to large municipalities, it is expected that the new communities will assume the same responsibilities as the 200 cost contract municipalities now being served."

This step recognizes the township to purchase the rural distribution facilities, and take power under a standard cost contract.

Walter Harris (NDP—Peterborough) said all the information should be collected in one way, without relying on various other agencies or techniques for companies not exempted.

Mines Minister Flynn assured that federal subsidies will be paid on all coal shipments from and within the Maritimes, Previously, Three Rivers freight - rate - assistance payments covered only shipments west of Levis, Que., and were aimed at opening up Ontario and Quebec markets for Maritimes coal.

The subsidy was run about $12,000,000 annually and the change is anticipated. Similar assistance is being given to moving coal shipped to Japan from British Columbia and Alberta.

Senior Citizens Enjoy Pictures Taken in Europe

The Senior Citizens Club held its regular monthly meeting on Wednesday evening in the Recreation Centre, with president Mr. C. L. Hyde, opened the meeting. He extended greetings to all those who will be celebrating that occasion during the month.

After a brief sing-song and reports from the six standing committees, the treasurer and other announcements, the president introduced Mr. and Mrs. Jack Coutts from Trenton, who showed some of the group with pictures of their recent tour of European countries, including Holland, France, Belgium, Switzerland, Germany and Italy. The introduced pictures were very beautiful and attractive and the commentary by Mr. Coutts made the showing much more interesting.

Mrs. Fred Cook read a letter she received April 2 from Mrs. Lewis Fields, wife of the president of the local club, and Mrs. Fields is now living in Hamilton, congratulating them on their 50th anniversary and also extending best wishes to Mr. and Mrs. John Robinson, a recent anniversary couple. A large number of those present accepted the invitation to be artists who so delightfully entertained the club members two weeks ago on the occasion when the club celebrated these events with the happy couples, namely, Tommy Carter for his solos, William McKay and Mrs. Ethel Carter, George Gulliver with his accordion, accompanied by Mrs. Donovan at the piano, Rev. Gordon Woodcock and His Wonderful Singing Voice by whom, in somewhat humorous vein extended greetings and best wishes.

The president named a committee to nominate slate of officers, to be elected at the first meeting in June and also announced that the zonal conference of the East Central Ontario Zone of Recreation would be held all day on Saturday, April 14 in Moira Secondary School to which all members are invited.

Several rounds of euchre were then indulged in by all members and delicious refreshments were served by the committee. The euchre winners were: ladies' first, Mrs. Barrage; second a tie, Mrs. Taylor and Mrs. White; men's first, Mrs. Ford and second, Mrs. Simons, each receiving as gentlemen. The door prize draw was won by Mr. R. Campbell.

Pyromaniac Hits For 13th Time At Lucan

LUCAN, Ont. (CP)—Lucan's mad arsonist struck for the 13th time early today and a vacant two-storey frame building in the downtown district was gutted by fire.

Fire Chief Alex Young of this town 18 miles north of London said the fire was "definitely set."

Fire broke out in the Dennis and Ray block on Main St. as pyromaniac Hits For 13th Time At Lucan Volunteer fire fighters prevented the flames spreading to adjacent structures.

TOWN NERVOUS

The fire bug has kept Lucan's 900 citizens jittery as building after building in the city mysteriously breaks into flames in the early nights.

All the fires have been in abandoned buildings. Inspector Jack Wilson, chief of the London office of the Ontario fire marshal's department said today he and half of his staff will be here within 100 yards of the town hall.

The fire marshal's office started an investigation last July 27 when three fires were set.

There have been no injuries in any of the fires.

The building destroyed today was the fifth to be gutted by fire since the month to make way for the new post office.

"It's amazing the building stood as long as it has," commented Chief Young today.

Five Stranded For Two Days Aboard Tug

BAYFIELD, Ont. (CP)—Five men were stranded for two days with little food or heat aboard their fishing tug and trapped in a moving ice pack in Lake Huron this week.

Details of the ordeal were learned Wednesday night. The tug, Bert and Dick, became stuck in offshore ice at Bayfield late Sunday and remained there until the tug Bert and Dick pulled through ice floes to reach it Tuesday afternoon.

The Robin was recovered from Goderich harbor in January after it sank in a gale. Since then it has been without blankets and mattresses, and its radio has been out of operation.

Unable to communicate with shore, the crew sent two of its members over the ice Monday in an effort to obtain provisions.

Captain John Semple said Dick Heard and Bill McClinchey, both of Bayfield, set out limbed by a rope. About a mile from the tug Heard slipped through and ice into the water.

Heard, soaked to the waist, trudged back to the tug with his companion to rejoin the captain. Robert Greenhalf of Port Dover and John Black of Bayfield.

The tug, moving with the ice, was four miles from shore at one stage during the two days. It was occasionally surrounded by banks of ice 10 feet high.

Productivity Council Farce Says Union Man

VANCOUVER (CP)—A director of the United Steelworkers Union (CLC) today described the National Productivity Council and "show-window" project pledged full support for the "phoney" economic advisory council.

Opening a two-day policy conference for local union officers, union Chairman Mahoney challenged the federal government to broaden the Productivity Council's terms of reference, otherwise it will be "just an inconsequential advisory board on overall economic policies," he said.

"Such a council should be representative of various sections of the Canadian economic community and should have the power to advise and assist government in developing a more prosperous and expanding economy within Canada."

Mr. Mahoney said the Steelworkers union—Canada's largest and fastest growing—did not support the council as it now stands, fix ing it as a limited fact finding agency of expanding productivity without dealing with broader economic problems.

WON'T 'FOOL' PUBLIC

"We will not go . . . operate in fooling the public by appearing to endorse an ineffective substitute," he said.

Mr. Mahoney's attack on the council was in line with government hesitancy to go far from a top labor leader against the 25-cents-an-hour wage hike set up Sunday a year ago to oil the wheels of Canada's productive efficiency.

Parking Charges To Be Continued By Authority

Parking charges will be continued this year at the Colonial Houses of Vanderwater Conservation Area at Thomasburg, it has been decided by the Conservation Committee and Board of the Moira River Authority.

Parking charges will be made by Attendants on Saturdays, Sundays and on holidays through the summer season, it was decided.

Camping sites will be developed at the Vanderwater area this year and the service road will be extended approximately 700 yards to provide access to additional picnic and parking areas.

Other recommendations made by the advisory committee following an inspection of Authority conservation areas last week, included a motion to reconstruct the waterwheel at the O'Hara Mill site to provide greater efficiency, and to drill a well at the Crow Conservation Area at Actinolite.

Trenton Man Freed Because Of Insanity

BROCKVILLE (CP) — Peter Lyle Davis, 30-year-old railway conductor from Trenton Wednesday was acquitted on grounds of insanity of a charge of arson in connection with a $500,000 fire that destroyed the Grand Central Hotel here Jan. 10.

Magistrate Gordon Jermyn's verdict was reached on Davis' counsel, Frank G. Foster of Peterborough.

Under the terms of Magistrate Jermyn's decision, Davis was remanded to the Brockville hospital at the pleasure of the lieutenant-governor.

Mr. Foster argued his client's plea had been not guilty of the crime rather than not guilty because of insanity and that on Wednesday morning he had been certified sane.

Mr. Foster said he intends to make an application to the lieutenant-governor to have Davis released from custody.

Grounds will be that he has been acquitted of the crime and therefore innocent, and has been discharged from the Ontario hospital here as cured from a temporary alcoholic psychosis.

Despite the defence's attempt to show there was no direct evidence that Davis had set the fire, the magistrate felt that there is started in his room and that he was the only person seen coming from the washroom area of the hall, where a second fire was in progress, he was satisfied the accused had set the fire.

MISS $50,000

MONTREAL (CP) — Two armed bandits escaped with $50,000 from an east-end branch of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce Wednesday. They missed $50,000 that arrived minutes later at the bank's front door in a Brinks express truck.

Managing Director of Bata Shoe Co. Turns First Sod For New Recreation Hall

TRENTON — On March 17, 1961, the large recreation hall at Batawa burned to the ground, with losses estimated at upwards of $50,000.

Lost in the fire too, were the Bata workers' cafeteria and a gathering place for area recreational groups. In fact, the loss could hardly be measured in dollars and cents, as such things as a film library, sports' trophies, gym equipment and other irreplaceable articles were destroyed.

Yesterday afternoon Karel Vytopil, newly-appointed managing director of Bata Shoe Company of Canada, "turned the first sod", heralding the start of a new multi-purpose community service building.

Arthur Duncan, public relations officer at Bata, and master of ceremonies at yesterday's event, had thoughtfully provided a ribbon-bedecked shovel for the sod turning ceremony, but at the last moment, Mr. Vytopil was asked to climb aboard a bulldozer and take a mean sized "sod" out of the grass plot on site.

Mr. Vytopil, who admitted that he "didn't have his driving licence with him," rose to the occasion and after a few preliminary instructions from driver Arnold Ray of Stirling cut a swath of land to the delight of the 400 some spectators present.

Pierre Harleigh, Hamilton, of Sidney Township and Reeve of Douglas McMaster of Murray were welcomed to the special event by Mr. Duncan.

Along with the grown ups were rows of excited children from the near-by Secred Heart School. Bata workers looking from windows in the plant, or viewed the official ceremonies from fair escape.

Architects for the new structure are the John B. Parkin Associates of Toronto and the building contractor is the Eastwood Construction Company of Peterborough. Total floor space will be 11,000 square feet and the building will be about 108 feet by 100 feet.

In the building will be a modernly equipped cafeteria, a panoramic vestibule or rotunda spanning the entire frontage, bowling alleys, conference junchroom, check room, modern lounge, (with a fireplace) rest rooms and plenty of storage space for equipment.

The building will be much larger than the one destroyed by fire and will provide facilities for concerts, dances, movies, bowling and other recreational activities as well as banquet hall space.

Present at the ceremony were Rev. W. H. Dunphy of the Sacred Heart parish, Rev. H. M. Beach of Stirford, deputy reeve Fred Bruyea of Murray Township, deputy reeve Gerald Irvine of Sidney Township and Bata personnel, including A. Storey, E. T. Stewart and J. Polak.

SPECIAL ANNOUNCEMENT

The undersigned farm equipment dealers have been pleased to represent Cockshutt Farm Equipment locally for many years, and we are proud to announce we will continue to sell and service Cockshutt equipment, with the understanding that the recent affiliation with the farm equipment division of White Motor Co. will greatly strengthen our position. This timely union of two industrial leaders has already provided a strong transfusion of research facilities and strong management leadership for Cockshutt.

White Motor Co. has already laid plans to close one of its U.S. farm equipment plants and add production to the Cockshutt Plant at Brantford, Ontario, where expansion plans are already underway.

Work schedules planned at Brantford, to produce equipment for Canadian, U.S. and export markets, indicate greatly increased work volumes and increased, steadier income for Canadian workers.

We look forward to an even brighter future with the Cockshutt organization. We expect an ever increasing flow of new and improved Cockshutt equipment which will greatly increase our opportunity to serve a greater number of progressive farmers in this area . . . to provide farm machinery engineered to make farm work easier, more efficient, more profitable.

Time for Some Role Changes

In the days of Friar Tuck, wielding a quarterstaff was a sport.

Times change. Perhaps the changing times have brought the necessity of bidding farewell to boxing as a sport. And yet it will be a shame. Nobody who has in his youth enjoyed the thrill of boxing, of hitting a shifty opponent and, yes, of being hit in return, will agree with those who consider it necessarily a degrading and brutalizing activity. Yet, at the same time, little good can be said of a sport which excepts as a normal risk the battering of a participant to a bloody pulp, as happened to Benny Paret, now, alas, dead.

Perhaps the sport could be rescued by proper revision of the rules. There are several possibilities. Hitting while one man is on the ropes could be barred, with points being scored against a boxer every time he backed into the ropes. After a knockdown, a boxer might be required to regain his feet by the count of three or four, although the fight would not resume until the count reached ten. In this way a man badly hurt by a punch would be prevented from absorbing a further beating. These rule changes would diminish the appeal of boxing as a spectacle to many and would, therefore, be resisted by the people who now control professional boxing. That, though, ought not to prevent law makers from acting.

There is no reason for cruel brutal punishment of a man to line the pockets of managers and promoters; there is, by the same token, no reason why he should be horrified by the thought of one man striking another. The boxer who has never had a fight has never really known a boy, and boys are hardly supervised, is a civilizing, not a brutalizing, influence for boys. It is natural that as long as boxing is a sport for any, there will be a tendency to consider it to be a sport for all—but without drastic changes in the rules there is little relationship between the professional prize ring and the boxing bouts of youngsters.

Explanation Please

A countrywide test of babies begun by family doctors 18 months ago uncovered the fact that a Pictou baby was suffering from phenylketonuria. A Canadian Press despatch from the ocean liner Empress of England, aboard which 350 members of the College of General Practice of Canada are meeting, reports this fact.

Phenylketonuria is described as a rare disorder which can be treated with a rigid diet if discovered early, but which otherwise leads to severe mental retardation.

The significance of the discovery of the Pictou baby suffering from the disease is that, according to The Canadian Press story, this was the first time a case of PKU was detected in Canada.

Yet we are told that PKU "occurs only once in 20,000 live births."

Obviously there is some discrepancy here. Births are not so rare in Canada that the Pictou baby could be the first to suffer from PKU if the ratio given is correct. Perhaps what is meant is that this is the first case discovered in time to treat the disorder. In that case the College of General Practice is to be congratulated for its initiative in sending PKU test kits to 2,000 general practitioners. It is to be fervently hoped that in future not one single case of PKU goes undiscovered until too late for an effort to be made to avoid mental retardation. Prevention is always much preferable to cure, and where cure is impossible, as is so often the case with retarded children, prevention becomes all the more important. In the past few years there has been a province-wide trend towards providing proper care for mentally retarded children. This is all to the good, but care can never be an adequate substitute for prevention where this is possible.

"What has happened to that golden girl you used to hear so much about, the one who hated expensive restaurants, who cooked delicious meals and washed your socks and snuggled at your feet knitting you mohair sweaters, listening to your views on the Congo, the United Nations, the Common Market, and decimal currency?' I have never met such a girl in my life. The girls I meet are beautiful; frail, and helpless. Not one has washed a sock in her life and each and every one has an enormous appetite. Not that they will look at a meal cooked by me."—Angus McGill speaking in the BBC Home Service about life as a bachelor in London.

Guessing Election Date Popular Pastime in Ottawa

BY RICHARD JACKSON
(from The Canadian Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau)

OTTAWA — Tomorrow COULD be the final day of life for this slow and painfully dying Parliament.)

(The writing of the highly perishable variety of political speculation comes of the task, by whomever it is performed, is one that Prime Minister Diefenbaker could easily saw off in the next 24 hours by the simple process of letting Parliament live another week

But the simple process of letting the clock thus automatic remains to confront and harass cautious Cabinet Ministers who loathe any scoff at continuing election forecasts which up to now have consciously misfired.

For tomorrow is the last day on which the Prime Minister can call his Parliament that its day, at last, it done, and still get in under the wire for an election Monday, June 4.

Missing June 4, the PM would have to wait then almost seven weeks to June 18; for the Queen Mother Elizabeth will be in the Capital, Monday, June 11 — and on that otherwise likely election day, the Prime Minister would be obligated, although not actually on hand, to be waiting in attendance on her, rather than on vote counts coming in from the polls across the country.

THE RUNS OUT

But tomorrow just might be the day of Diefenbaker decision because, like seemingly all Canadian Parliaments, this one appears to put great store in anniversaries.

And it was four years ago, on a weekend, in just such a stupefying heat as has existed.

The Young Conservatives from all across Canada were here in Ottawa, as they are coming now.

The Prime Minister had left the Commons quietly, raced out to Uplands Airport, climbed aboard a plane with Trade Minister Hees and scooted down to Washington for talks with President General about the Dissolution of Parliament.

Flying back, he gave the not unsuspecting but still mildly surprised Conservatives the official word of Dissolution and Election — and the word went directly down to the nearest telephone to round the campaign call to battle stations. Very young pucks.

Well, the Young Conservatives will be down at the Chateau tomorrow and Saturday, waiting . . . waiting . . . waiting . . . and the rest of Canada.

Well, the Young Conservatives will be down at the Chateau tomorrow and Saturday, waiting . . . waiting . . . waiting . . . ment and the rest of Canada.

But even if nothing does happen tomorrow, there still will be something of a date of destiny. For time is running out on Prime Minister, and after the Friday he will have just three weeks in which to get the election before the end of June and the start of summer holidays.

Parliament might just as well have gone home weeks ago, for all the really constructive business it has been doing.

But while it hasn't been making history for its good works, this Parliament, ever since this 24-year-old first opened, has been adding to history by its awful if particularly attractive wordage to Hansard.

The Honorable Members have been specializing in calling one another all investive varieties of prevaricator.

"Liar," is still out.

"Unparliamentary."

But one Member can openly accuse another of "not telling the truth," which is just a mild way of saying "Stinking liar," as much edges smoothed down.

New turn of phrase was Member for Hastings - Frontenac - Monteith the other day when he called General Commissioner Paul Martin a "stinker."

It got by.

So, too, did "idiot."

Combine the two, and the Parliament Hill version of the art of insult had a new verbal splitball. "Demented Stinker," or even, perhaps "Stinking Idiot," and both of them apparently not Unparliamentary.

MPs' Pay

Ottawa Journal

MPs, who certainly are concerned about their salary, are cautious about parsimonious allowances for increased spending on their behalf during the election. It is poor economy if the nation's business is to be done only by those who can afford to serve or by those who are sufficiently self-denying or thrifty to make do on an income inadequate for their position.

Letters to the Editor

Reply to Editorial On Hospital Problem

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer:

The writer would like to reply to your editorial of March 22nd on the appointment of a social worker at the hospital. To suggest that the policy laid in the past might be correct from a philosophical viewpoint. However, we believe it is too late in the day because with all due respect to the social worker only not that dated. Of course, it could be said that anyone recalling the Mrs. Caudles would be living in the past in the light of the progress being made almost daily in all branches of science. Still, there have been many things done too come out of the past and they should not be discarded because they originated a generation or more ago. Why can we not adopt some of those good things of yesterday and apply them to our present mode of living? Indeed an idea or a practice is new it is not necessarily better. Some are and some are not.

It would be interesting to know the exact percentage of patients who were re-admitted to our hospital in any one year. Of this number the larger portion would be re-admitted because of a recurrence, not through lack of proper nursing care at home.

Here is the home that cannot provide some mild form of nursing care for a convalescent. What do people do in cases of ordinary illness such as flu, common colds, measles, chicken pox etc. where hospitalization is not necessary? Surely not the patient himself and his own family except to know whether they can manage when the sick person returns home and it may not be amiss to have a two-hour conference with the busy doctor to decide.

Your editorial points out that many large hospitals have turned to social workers. What is the name of this game. Follow the leader? Here is an attitude so currently dominant. Let us have decision of our own despite the independent thought which they deserve and let us base decisions on the facts at hand of the situation and the resulting effect on our own locality.

Praises Belleville Theatre Guild Play

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer:

Last Wednesday the Belleville Theatre Guild presented "The Valiant" by Elizabeth Reginold at the Eastern Ontario Drama Festival in Kingston. Their show was a pleasure to the audience and made a fine contribution to the festival. A difficult, but rewarding play. was well done!

I'd like to the audience who know of the small numbers of the Guild membership and the difficulties under which they labored, this very fine effort was a source of wonder and admiration.

Belleville is to be congratulated on this ability as a guild group, capable of giving live theatre of a high calibre to the town.

When the industrial age first dawned, men were valued as producers. In its present mass production stage people are valued by many as consumers — wearers of lipstick, buyers of 1962-style toasters. Their governments, in its role as referee, should be authorized to set minimum standards of consumer protection, even though no political consumer bloc may ever exist.

Letter To The Editor

Could Sell Butter To Outer Mongolia?

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer:

I note in your edition of the 22nd by March that the Department of Agriculture had paid $2,442,000 for butter storage costs including the conversion of some butter to butter oil for ease of storage.

The needy taxpayers was appalled, (pardon) astonished to read in Mieliams that the government so far has found no use for butter oil, save for the fact that it costs less to store. Good news for the taxpayer appears in a recent National Geographic where by latest colour tidings appear that in Outer Mongolia butter oil is used in their lamps.

This certainly opens up a vast area of hope for the otherwise odd-ridden taxpayers.

No doubt the government's clipping service will read this letter and instantly arrange with Outer Mongolia to sell all our butter oil to them at once as well as a reward for saving the country from the $2,000,000 taxes (just for one year) except me from all future taxation!

Any other correspondents who think to be so exempted from personal income tax should put forward similar ideas and no doubt they will receive the same attention and reception.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

There is no easy way to obtain freedom, except by inheritance. The normal process of securing freedom is long, hard and slow. Such freedom as we enjoy. In the older enlightened western nations was generated, struggled for, fought for, seized many centuries of time, with countless men and women and children among our very ancestors, suffered persecution, privation, imprisonment, exile, in the process of getting for us what we have got. Millions have died, and scores of blood spilled. We keep forgetting this — even those of us whose great-great grandparents came from Scotland as evicted crofters, or from Ireland during the famine.

All that was in pursuit of freedom, and was filled with distress and pain. Yet it was only a beginning. We are in the long story of the insatiable need for freedom which reaches back across the centuries to events far more remote than the field of Runnymede.

Yet here we are, every day, at present, in the pitches of the UN in which nations both large and small, most of whom have hardly begun to dream of freedom, engaged in the business of acquiring freedom as if it were something you merely have to talk about in order to acquire it.

If so, we older free nations have come the long, bloody way round.

Teenagers Always Query, 'Why Do Doctors Smoke'?

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: If smoking is so bad for a person, why do most doctors indulge in the habit? I have not met or seen a doctor who doesn't smoke.

I am a 15-year old girl and have smoked for three years whenever I can get away with it my parents, teachers, neighbors, etc.

I have fell no ill effects, I out-run, out-swim, out-dive and hold my breath longer than any girl in my gym class. Have been disillusioned by people who say smoking short-circuits one's brain? Or do they just try to halt our freedom? —D.S.

Well, there's one thing you can say about 15-year-olds. They speak their minds. When they aren't hiding their cigarets from neighbors, teachers, parents, etc.)

This candid young lady is wrong. She may not know any doctors who don't smoke, but how many doctors does she know? Two? Three? Four?

I know scads who smoke, and scads who don't. Many of my fellow practitioners have made the convincing statistics and thoughtful study I made. Others have also read the statistics and have said to themselves, "Yeah, I know all that stuff, but I've learned to like smoking so I'm going to do it and take the consequences.

Young athletes should avoid cigarets. Their exercise does out their respiratory passages rapidly. Say it reduces physical efficiency by one per cent. (Maybe more or less.) A one-percent loss in a game can be a sloppy tackle, a missed basket, one-inch of a second in a 100-yard dash.

A good athlete who smokes may beat a poor one who has "perfect habits," but if both are of equal ability, the one who doesn't smoke will have the slightest possible edge over the other.

I suppose that I know a couple of hundred doctors who have quit smoking. They are "playing the percentages," but the only way I can see the difference between them and others is to compare their average life spans and their relative freedom from illness.

(I could name one famous doctor who recently quit smoking after 50 years. He said: "I knew all the figures, but I liked to smoke, and I wasn't concerned about the risk. I'm 70 years longer, I quit because I wanted to get a good night's sleep and not wake up coughing.)

It may take 10 or 20 or 30 years before the difference between a non-smokers and non-smokers is big enough to detect. Earlier in life, the one per cent difference is impossible to measure.

For 50 years we've told our children not to smoke, but we didn't have any facts to back up our prejudice. Now we do. It is more or less right in her complaint. We said "no" and didn't know why.

But it's not a matter of just trying to "cramp the freedom" of young people any more. There's real evidence against smoking.

(P.S.: I'm not sure what "D.S." will be getting ready to do her health-destroying first smoke, I wonder if she'll succeed.)

Dear Dr. Molner: In tests for tuberculosis, which is positive, a smear or a culture? — J. J.

A "smear" is taken from sputum. If it is positive — if it finds the presence of acid-fast germs — that is that. If it is negative, then a culture may be made from pooled sputum taken over a period of several days. If it is still negative that's fine.

Men Forget Dates, Women Forget Times

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Purely Personal Prejudices:

There is a clock in every man, but no calendar; and a calendar in every woman, but no clock; thus, men remember dates, but are weak on hours, while anniversaries; whereas women remember dates, but are weak on hours. Each sex is as good as, 6 to them.

All philosophers have pushed to their logical and ultimate conclusions, are nonsense—for the reason is too weak a weapon and too subtle to be contained by any structure or system of thought.

A person who has no genuine sense of pity for the weak is missing a basic source of humanity. One of the prime moral forces that comprise greatness and strength of character is a feeling for the poor.

Both too much and too little money disturb one's sense of reward it: as William Feather observed, "The petty economies of the rich are just as amazing as the silly extravagances of the poor."

I have never understood why prostitutes are arrested but their customers are not, and why the only reason I can think of is that laws are made by men and not by women.

Once a slang phrase really catches on it has a much deep down into the language, it's hard to correct. Such a word used before it as an equivalent; for instance, until "it's for the birds" came into use, you could say to express the same thought.

Patience is at the heart of every art, every craft, every science and the chief weapon against the beatnik artists is not their revolt against form, manners but their lack of inner discipline, their refusal to work quietly, slowly and carefully at perfecting their craft in private.

There is a person imagines that he or she is "in love" with two different people at the same time, all the evidence is that neither of the love-objects means the full experience.

The greatest mistake reformers make is thinking, either secretly or openly, that they are better than the people they are trying to help, and that this attitude no real conversation is ever possible. If the Bible is the word of God, it is also a sinner can get to heaven-more easily than a prig.

Women are slaves to the past, and men are slaves to the future; a woman tends to look back at yesteryear's romance, a man to look forward to next year's enterprise; she wonders what she has lost and he calculates what he has to gain.

STRENGTH FOR THE DAY

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

NATURE OF REWARD

Many people believe that there is something unworthy about reward. Whatever we do, they say, we must do it without any anticipation of reward. We must not be doing simply because it is right to do. Whatever it is we do or hurts us is not a matter of any concern.

This is high and exalted philosophy. Unfortunately it is true in large measure, but very difficult to live up to. All of us have, to some extent, a longing for reward. If we do well, we want people to appreciate the fact and give us at least modest praise. If we perform some useful service, we want to be paid for it at the highest rate the traffic will bear. If we love our neighbor as ourselves, we want both the neighbor and everybody along the line to know this, to appreciate it, and above all to appreciate us.

Now there seems to be a lot of unworthiness in all this. As we have said, it is not. There may be a little of childishness in it, but we are all high grown youngsters. Desire for reward is perfectly legitimate if it is not put first in life or if it does not occupy too broad a section of our horizon.

Jesus spoke of reward frequently. "Great is your reward in heaven," he declared to his disciples on occasion. We all long for at least a little bit of reward — and we should get it.

In a resolution passed at its third annual convention, the Pilot's Federation declared itself "categorically opposed to the project" and could "only assume that Ottawa wishes to cut the cost of pilotage."

One part of the federal plan which the pilots consider a threat to their incomes is a transport department proposal that they contribute a portion of their earnings o pay for the upkeep of pilot boats, the hiring of clerks and the maintenance of communications facilities.

"Pilots would pay without having any control over expenditure," their statement said.

CHARGE WILL USE

They charged the government planned to use part of their pay for navigational services.

The pilots also attacked the transport department's method of calculating their income, saying the authority uses "an erroneous base that produces inflated figures."

"These problems were submitted early in the winter, allowing plenty of time for them to be solved," the statement said. "But the representatives of the ship owners have refused to discuss these problems and work toward a satisfactory solution."

MAY EXCHANGE IDEAS

OTTAWA (CP)—A proposal to let Russian scientists see how Canada copes with winter ice navigation to and from ports along the Gulf of St. Lawrence was made here Wednesday at a scientific conference. The suggestion, aimed as a step towards the eventual opening of the Canadian and Soviet North for reciprocal visits, is being considered by the Canadian Committee on Oceanography.

UNION WILL NOT

alterably opposed to compulsory arbitration," Mr. Archer said. "In the long run it solves nothing and often causes more trouble than it cures."

Wages are the big issue in the deadlock. The union wants an eight-per-cent increase in two stages of a two-year contract. The commission accepted a conciliation board majority recommendation of four per cent over two years and this week extended the offer to 6½ per cent in three stages over a three-year pact.

The bill, to be repealed the day an agreement comes into force, provides fines of not less than $100 and not more than $1,000 to persons who encourage a strike or lockout. Fines for workers walking off the job range between $10 and $50 a day.

Said Mr. Roberts:

"In taking this step, the government does so in the full knowledge that there will be those who argue that it violates a basic individual right. I would point out simply that we are acting in this way only because the parties have become deadlocked in a dispute of vital importance to the public welfare and cannot agree to submit voluntarily to impartial and binding arbitration.

MUST ARBITRATE

"Over the years the matter of enforcing arbitration upon management and labor by statute has been avoided in Ontario, except in certain instances. . . . On the other hand, experience shows that the rights and interests of trade union members are be served quite satisfactorily by the arbitration technique."

The issue almost arose in 1950 when the same parties were deadlocked in contract negotiations and the workers voted to strike. A settlement was reached, however, on the intervention of then labo- minister Charles Daley before a strike deadline was set.

The union offered earlier to maintain essential services in the event of a walkout, but Hydro declared it was impossible to split service to its customers. The commission declared it would attempt to keep the system operating by using supervisory, non-union personnel.

Mr. Cummings said union stewards across the province would be requested to make sure the law is complied with, but claimed the government's action would end bargaining in good faith with Hydro.

He doubted an arbitrator could be effective in resolving the issues.

"An arbitrator is only effective in a situation where facts are not in dispute," he said. "But in this case some of the facts have been in dispute for 14 months."

Mr. Roberts said: "It is clear that a strike would cause tremendous hardship, chaos and confusion in the economic, domestic and industrial life of this province. It is for this reason and this reason alone, the government has concluded that it must recommend to the House the course of action. . . . We are simply protecting the interests of all the people of Ontario, whose day-to-day health, welfare and livelihood would be jeopardized by a strike in this vital public utility. I need hardly call to your attention that our whole supply of life's daily necessities and our entire industrial employment depend on a continuous supply of electricity more than on any other single factor. . . ."

He pointed out that policemen and firemen fin this province have bargained collectively under the law for many years and have come to agreement and signed contracts without the privilege of withdrawing their services to achieve their goals.

JOHN SMITH, 13, of St. Mary's School, Picton Heights, recently won the district final of the elementary schools' public speaking contest at Brighton. John will now represent Durham, Northumberland, Peterborough, Hastings and Prince Edward Counties at the provincial finals in Toronto on April 22nd. A son of WO2 and Mrs. G. E. Smith, John is a grade 8 pupil, who hopes to become a high school teacher. He competed in the district finals with 14 other contestants. (Hodgson).

Probe Death

TORONTO (CP)—An investigation was being held today into the death of Leslie Williams, 62, found dead in the vestibule of his west-central Toronto rooming house.

Police are holding a man.

Detectives said the extension handle of a socket wrench was found near the dead man who appeared to have suffered only a few facial scratches.

No charges have been laid.

SEES DISCRIMINATION

OTTAWA (CP) — Deputy Northern Affairs Minister Gordon Robertson said Wednesday racial discrimination exists in the Northwest Territories. Mr. Robertson, also commissioner of the territories, said white, Eskimo and Indian children mix in the schools with no discrimination of consequence. But the situation changed when they left school to seek jobs, with whites in most of the communities not really accepting the natives.

The buildings will cost an estimated $40,000,000 and furnishings will add to the over - all cost. However, Mr. Connell estimated the government can save some $5,000,000 a year in office rents by building its own facilities.

Between $7,000,000 and $10,000,000 should be realized, in addition, by the sale of other buildings outside the Queen's Park area owned by the government.

EASY ACCESS SEEN

The buildings will contain ground-floor offices for those departments most closely concerned with the public. There will be committee rooms for use by all departments, an auditorium, cafeteria, parking both above and below ground, a central heating system for all of Queen's Park and underground pedestrian tunnels.

Courtyards, parks and treelined pedestrian walks will connect each building.

"There will be ample room for statuary, fountains and reflecting pools in these courtyards," Mr. Connell said. There will also be substantial provision for art in other forms, such as murals, inside the buildings."

Meaford Edges Collingwood

Meaford edged the Collingwood Shipbuilders 5-4 in overtime on the latter's ice last night to take a game lead in the new best two-of-three series.

The Shipbuilders led 4-3 after regular time but Meaford tied the score with five seconds to go.

Meaford fired the winner after 17 minutes of overtime.

The teams go at it again tomorrow and Saturday night. The winner meets the Pepsi's here Monday night in the first game of the best-of-seven intermediate "A" semi-finals.

BELIZE, British Honduras (Reuters) — Prince Philip left here Wednesday afternoon for Grand Cayman Island in his personal aircraft, heading for home after a two-month swing through South America.

Miriam Henry, 18-year-old grade 13 student of Prince Edward Collegiate Institute, Picton, won top honors in the district finals of the Ontario Secondary Schools public speaking contest, held at Peterborough. Miss Henry won the prepared speech section of the competition and was third in the impromptu group. She and Barbara McIntosh of Brighton, impromptu group winner, will represent Durham, Northumberland, Peterborough, Hastings and Prince Edward Counties at the provincial finals in Toronto, April 25th. Miriam is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Henry of Picton R.R. 1.

A second winner from Prince Edward Collegiate was Wayne Fyffe, 13, a grade 9 student, who turned in a remarkable effort to finish third in the prepared speech against older competitors. Wayne is a son of Dr. and Mrs. E. D. Fyffe. Picton. (Hodgson).

200 Former Teachers Want More Pension

TORONTO (CP)—Like errant schoolboys, members of a legislative committee bowed Wednesday to the wishes of more than 800 former school teachers, all of them women and all of them mildly annoyed.

They represented the Ontario Association of Superannuated Women Teachers as well as an organized widows of teachers who died before 1946, when pensions for widows were first provided.

Chairman Edna Lancaster of the association told the committee the government should provide a special grant of $1,000,000 to increase the pensions to a minimum level of $1,200 a motion asking for extra funds for the pensioners.

"Gentlemen, this has not been done," Miss Lancaster said. "From that day, nothing has been heard of your motion, and we have looked in vain for action from the government."

The widows also said they had been promised action last year. They want a $100-a-month pension for each of the 141 members of their group, instead of the present $25.

The committee agreed unanimously with the former teachers. Creating party lines they passed a motion asking Education Minister Robarts to meet committees and consider the problem before he brings down the department's estimates during the current session.

Gamma Mu Holds Pledge Ritual

On Tuesday evening, Gamma Mu Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi held a pledge ritual at the home of Mrs. Ingrid Bateman, with the President, Doreen Greer, in charge of the proceedings.

Five new members took part in the ritual, Miss Elizabeth Black, Miss Elizabeth Klein, Mrs. Oriol Temple, Mrs. Dorothy Whitman and Mrs. Muriel Mightingale.

Following the ritual, the president conducted a short business meeting. Plans concerning the "Founder's Day" banquet in Trenton were announced, after which Mrs. Jessie White enlightened the members about the facts to be considered in selecting the girl of the year, an event soon to take place.

Mrs. Gwen James sold tickets on a bottle of maple syrup which was won by Mrs. Margo Hall.

A most interesting speaker was brought to the meeting by Lascoe Willocks. This was Mrs. Helen Jones, who entertained the members with her demonstration of "how to make an Easter table centre," simply using sugar and egg white. She produced a most delightful pink egg, decorated with icing and little yellow chicks. Tickets were sold on the completed centre-piece, which was won by Mrs. Dorothy Whitman.

Refreshments served by the hostess, Mrs. Bateman, Mrs. Verna Mellinger and Mrs. Barbara Baird, brought a most enjoyable evening to a close.

Guides, Brownies, Rangers Meet Lady Baden Powell

On Wednesday evening a cross section of Belleville Girl Guides and Brownies had the opportunity to attend a rally held in the Queen Elizabeth building at the Toronto exhibition Grounds, for Lady Baden Powell.

Thirty-five girls, a Guide and Brownie from each Company and Pack plus one lass from Newcastle boarded a bus, chartered by the Belleville Division and supervised by Mrs. Doris Bannon, incoming commissioner for the West District, and were accompanied by Mrs. A. McLean Haig, Quinte Area Commissioner; Mrs. Olive Gerow, Guide Captain, and Sharon Holmes of the Rangers.

The founder of the Guide movement not only spoke to the 4,000 girls from all over Ontario, but also entered the aisles to mingle among the audience and personally speak to a number of her admirers.

The four girls from D.S.D. were given special seats near the front. Mrs. Haig was invited to a reception following the rally and at which time she shook hands with Lady Baden Powell.

On her previous visit to Canada last fall, Lady Baden Powell, who makes her home in London, England, suffered a heart attack. At that time arrangements had been made for three bus loads of local girls to visit her in Kingston; unfortunately the trip had to be cancelled.

Woman Trapper Beats Men For Best Group of Pelts

By AL MARKLE

TORONTO (CP) — Fur trapping, according to an expert, is like cattle-selling.

"The buyers don't want skinny cattle and, by the same yardstick, they don't want scruffy furs."

The expert here is Jude Gilbert, a wiry 130-pounder standing five-foot-five, who freely admits to her 39 years.

June, christened Mary Margaret June Gilbert, this year won the award for the best group of pelts of the 1961-62 season in Ontario.

The award is tantamount to a championship trophy for Ontario trappers. None of them knew, however, that their pelts were being judged as they were being sold in routine fashion during an Ontario Trappers Association auction in North Bay earlier this year.

MADE 'EM SIT UP

June wasn't at the convention when the word came out, to gasps from many a grizzled male, that a woman was the winner.

"Heck, I didn't even know about this until a trainmin told me I was on the front pages," she said.

June, tanned and with cap-cut hair turning grey, knows trapping from away back. She was born in the Vermillion Bay area. Her father was a trapper and June used to help her mother with the sticking chores.

Later the family moved to Fort William. As June grew into maturity, she had one plan in mind: A trapline.

"It was because I had always wanted a trapline of my own. I liked the life. I figured if other people could do it there was no reason I couldn't."

So, in the fall of 1957, June Gilbert established her line, appropriately 60 miles east of Sioux Lookout and 115 miles north of Port Arthur.

The first two years were bad but she made a living. In the third year she learned of the Ontario Trappers Association and the higher prices paid to members, and joined it.

How about trapping generally? Does she find it harder as a woman, or because the men refuse to accept her?

"The work is hard but I like it. The fur is not going to come like a lamp. You have to go out and get it.

"Some of the men call me 'Lucky' and think I'm making money because I have a good area. They're nuts — I work. They could do the same thing."

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

Mr. M.V. — She promised to chip in for our living expenses.

Mrs. M.V. — He has much more money than I have.

* * *

Mr. M.V. — This is a second marriage for each of us. I was a widower and I married a widow six months ago. Each of us has a married son who's supporting himself and his family, and on his own.

Before we were married, Bella and I agreed to pool our Social Security checks for current expenses. We each have savings accounts, but these were not to be touched without the other's consent. They are still in our separate names.

Since I happened to own the house I was living in, I transferred the title to my son's name before I moved out. Bella feels that since my son has so much more than her son, she should send him part of her Social Security funds each month. This would force me to dig into my savings to make up the difference. We'd go broke that way.

* * *

Mrs. M.V. — Since there's no comparison in the amounts of our savings, why should Mel object to paying more into the household kitty than I do? I have about $7,000 behind me, while he has three times as much.

With a home to call his own now, Mel's son is sitting pretty. But how about mine? He has no such security. The least I can do is help him out on his monthly expenses; a little, so he can try to get ahead and save up for a down payment on a house.

When I agreed to turn over my entire monthly Social Security check to Mel, I didn't know about the transfer of the house. Now I think it's no more than fair for me to give a thought to my own son who's having tough sledding. If we have to touch Mel's savings a bit, I won't break him.

* * *

The Council: In discussing this type of case, an official of the Jewish Conciliation Board of America remarked, "People are often too close to their own problems to see an orderly way out. They need the aid of a qualified outsider to help them stand away from their tangles and view them afresh. They need 'binocular vision.'"

It is this "binocular vision" which the V.'s require. Leading them a few paces away, the Council may be able to show them where to look first for a way out of this impasse.

Let's look at the prenuptial pledge. Obviously there was a lack of frankness on Mr. V.'s part. While exacting Bella's promise to match his entire Social Security check with hers each month, he failed to tell her of the disposition of his real estate. Had she known this, she might then and there have spoken up in behalf of her son. Since Mr. V.'s son had been so substantially enriched.

Now she's assailed by guilt feelings at having "forsaken" her son, for the sake of her own happiness, and she seeks to make amends even though it means reneging on the financial pact with her new husband.

A fresh look suggests a fresh approach which we trust Mr. V.'s will consider for a post-nuptial pledge: Combine the savings accounts into a joint trust. Withdraw a lump sum, sufficient for Mrs. V's son to use as a down payment on a home. Mrs. V. is to live up to her original agreement and deposit her entire monthly check toward the upkeep of her home with Mr. V. The remaining savings may be turned to as needed and as agreed upon mutually. And upon the death of both parents, the balance may be shared equally by their respective sons.

If this "adjudication" works out, it will remove a small cancer sore in an otherwise healthy marriage. Neglected, the sore might grow to bitter, painful proportions, bringing grief to three households. Time heals better than one, they say. And three heads may be better than two when the third one the Council's this time — can turn up angles seen "from a mile off."

100 Mothers Present Brief To Ban Nuclear Tests

GENEVA (Reuters) — More than 100 mothers from 10 nations, including Canada, marched through a biting wind Wednesday to petition the 17-nation disarmament conference here to ban nuclear weapons tests.

Many wept.

The women were received by Arthur Dean of the U.S. Zorin of the United States and Soviet co-chairmen of the conference.

Mrs. Dean Zorin talked to them in the rambling Palais des Nations, the United Nations European headquarters, after a plenary session Wednesday morning which again failed to break the deadlock in the nuclear test-ban issue.

READS PETITION

Dean and Zorin sat silently as Norwegian mother, Mrs. Aasmarit Sletten Duve, read a petition in English addressed to the disarmament conference.

These are its main points:

1. No more testing of nuclear weapons.

2. No further dispersal of nuclear arms to nations or groups of nations.

3. Agreement upon staged and controlled disarmament.

4. Immediate action in areas where agreement has been reached.

5. Continuation of negotiations until agreement is reached on general and complete disarmament.

REPRESENT ALL WOMEN

The jointly - drafted petition said, "We women, who are a part of the creative force of the world and who are representative of different ideologies and social systems, assemble here in Geneva, Switzerland, to express the hopes and fears of all women in their deep concern for the survival of mankind."

Then a deputation of the mothers handed Dean and Zorin more than 50,000 American signatures to the petition.

Zorin then told the women: "I believe that we—the Soviet Union and the United States as co-chairmen—will consider the petition you have brought and carry out our work in the light of your desires, which represent the desires of millions and billions of women throughout the world."

50th Year Marked by Couple

FRANKFORD — Twenty-five neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Smith on Monday evening, in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Angus Woodcox's 50th wedding anniversary.

The evening's activities began with a hearty sing-song and Mr. Ed. Payne as master of ceremonies.

Mrs. Jack McGeachy gave a reading of her brother and sister-in-law's wedded life.

Mr. Payne presented the guests with tool sets and a set of dishes. They both responded.

Refreshments were served at the close of the evening, including a lovely decorated anniversary cake.

Delicatessen Table At Bazaar

by Mary Moore

Excerpt from reader's letter: "I have been asked to assist at a delicatessen table at the annual bazaar sponsored by the Belleville Children's Association. Since this is a new venture we are at a loss to know just what type of food should be included and what type of packaging is best. Also how do you go about pricing items such as this? The decoration of the booths is left entirely up to the conveners of such table so any help you can give would be appreciated — Grace E."

This idea is popular and other bazaar conveners will welcome help.

Items that sell first and fast are those that can be taken home and used for dinner or supper the same night. Here are: Devilled Eggs, Barbecued Spareribs, Barbecued Chicken and Fried Chicken, Jellied Salmon Moulds, Jellied Chicken Moulds, Individual Meat Loaves, Sliced Stuffed Roast Pork, Family-size foil pans of Macaroni and Cheese, Baked Beans, Potato Salad, Cole Slaw, Beet Moulds, Butter Tarts, Glazed Strawberry Tarts. (These two last items rightly belong on the bake table but could be on both since tarts are very popular.)

Yes, I do have one indispensable idea for setting up the delicatessen table. Since the foods will not be refrigerated, it is mandatory that you have a banner poster the full length of the booth reading "made fresh today."

Garnish lavishly with big trays of food up with blocks beneath bottom at back to make viewing easy. Light your booth brilliantly with spotlights directly on your most attractive and profitable items. Have a low bouquet at back of the table and sell it at the close of the bazaar.

Buy low 12-oz. waxed cartons from food freezer firm and when they are filled with food, cover tightly with saran wrap. The usual method of arriving at sale price is to assess total cost and add one third.

Line 12 tart tins with pastry. Chill. Melt butter; blend in all ingredients except eggs. Cool; beat in eggs. Spoon filling into tart shells. Bake at 450 deg. Fahr. (very hot) 12 to 16 minutes. Cool at least 10 minutes. Loosen edges; remove from pans.

Attach ribbons to baby bonnets with grips; tampers so you can remove ribbons easily for the more frequent washings they require.

Wife of P.E.I. Premier Is Shy About Publicity, Prefers Farm Life to City

By DAL WARRINGTON

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP) — The first lady of Canada's smallest province is a motherly-looking matron of 67 who shies away from publicity, does her own cooking and prefers farm life to the city.

Mrs. Margaret Shaw, wife of the Prince Edward Island premier, says living in town is all right in winter—in a small city like Charlottetown anyway—but her heart is really in the rolling hills of the West River country, about 10 miles away, where the Shaw farm lies.

"I can stand it in the city until March," she said, sitting in the living room of their winter house here. "But when the days get longer and warmer then I want to get home again." She produced some pictures to illustrate why.

The Shaws have been married almost 41 years, but Mrs. Shaw has been a premier's wife little more than two. Walter Shaw, 74, accepted leadership of the Progressive Conservatives in Prince Edward Island in 1908, at an age when most men are well into retirement.

OUSTED LIBERALS

He was a political novice who had spent most of his life as a farmer and civil servant, including many years as deputy minister of agriculture under the Liberals. After the 1930 election he became premier.

His late plunge into politics was not undertaken lightly. The Conservatives had not formed a government in this province for 33 years.

"But I went along with it," Mrs. Shaw said. "What else could you do? Walter loves P.E.I. and he's working for P.E.I. That's why he did it."

Actually, she said, Mr. Shaw seems to have more time home now than when he was a deputy minister. "Then he was always travelling to meetings or conferences. He used to be away for days on end."

She accompanies the premier on some of his trips but avoids the limelight as much as possible. "I'm still a little afraid of the press," she said. But reporters and photographers find her friendly and co-operative.

MADE FIRST FLIGHT

She had never travelled by air until last year. "I refused to go near a plane. Then we flew to a ship launching at Halifax last fall and I loved it." Since then she's made several flights.

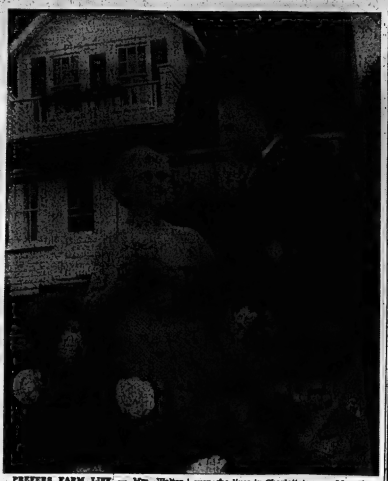
Mrs. Shaw was born of Scottish stock at Northam, a rural hamlet about 20 miles west of Summerside, P.E.I. Her maiden name was Margaret MacKenzie but Premier Shaw always calls her "Mom." She is a trained nurse and practised her profession in Massachusetts for a while but has lived most of her life in P.E.I.

Why do the islanders have such affection for their home province, no matter how far or how long they are away? She thinks it's because most of them are farm - born, never losing their love for the open spaces, pastoral atmosphere and easy-going life of the country.

Strathnairn, the Shaws' farm, is situated in some of the best P.E.I. scenery, with long sloping lawns and terraces, trees and hedges and a river sparkling nearby. It is named for the Shaw ancestral home in Scotland. They lived there all year until recently. Now they move to Charlottetown for the winters.

DOES OWN COOKING

The house is a modest frame building surrounded by beautiful flowers. Gardening is the premier's hobby, roses his specialty, in adjoining fields the Shaw herd of fine beef cattle graze.



Mrs. Shaw has a girl to help her with the housework "but I still like to do my own cooking."

None of their children is home now. All three are married and there are 11 grandchildren. Son Dr. W. M. Shaw lives in Oshawa, Ont., daughters Mrs. A. J. MacLeod in Ottawa and Mrs. Hugh Simpson in Charlottetown.

They were all home last July, though, when Walter and "Mom" celebrated their 40th wedding anniversary. The Shaws held open house at Strathnairn and more than 700 people called to wish them well.

NAKED CUBS

Black bear cubs have no fur at birth and usually weigh less than one pound although the mothers regularly weigh 300 pounds.

Contact Club Sponsors Lively Auction

The regular meeting of the Contact Club of Christ Church on Monday evening took the form of an auction sale.

Margaret Duck and her group were responsible for the pleasant evening's entertainment.

Under the direction of auctioneers Shirley Marshall and Barbara Janes, with Marilyn Smith as treasurer, a profitable night of fun and good fellowship got under way.

Lively bidding was heard on the sale of such articles as children's clothing, jams, jewellery, and knick-knacks. The last thing up for bidding was a lovely cake decorated in spring flowers donated by Trudy Sands.

After the auction was completed Trudy thanked the group in charge and announced that next Monday would be a business meeting.

Card tables with pastel cloths and flower centrepieces were arranged in the room and proved most convenient when the delicious lunch was served by Margaret Duck's group.

'Lines on Life'

By Dr. Stuart E. Rosenberg

Run, retaliate or reconcile. These are the ways we face conflict. There are times when any one of the three courses may seem useful. Ultimately however, only the latter way is wise.

We can run. When we retreat we sometimes lessen the tension, call back the area of battle; the noise abates but the guns have not been silenced.

The problems have not been resolved, only postponed. But an organized delay does sometimes help us regain our strength and consolidate our position.

It can lend perspective, change the angle of vision, help us see what we missed seeing; perhaps we were too close to the "front".

Running in retreat never helped anyone catch up with what confronts him. Once, the tale has it, a man mounted his horse facing its tail, and went galloping off.

The animal went off in the only direction it could - head first. Curious boys standing and shouted at the strange sight, mocking the rider as he went.

"How can you ride that way?" they demanded. With the misguided confidence born of nervous confusion, he shouted back. "How do you know which way I'm going?"

Too often, when we face away from what is ahead of us, the forces of life will lead us there anyway.

And then because we thoughtlessly imagined that we could avoid responsibility by fleeing it, we end up not knowing which way to face.

Sometimes when life bears in too heavily upon us and burdens mount, we try to retaliate. We may get rid of heaped up aggressions in this process; letting off steam can do us some good.

But, too often, when we fight back we hurt or destroy people or things. We even succeed in destroying ourselves. Every sword has a double-edge and something tears within us when we drive it into another.

Thus, retaliation is a way out of a conflict that only leads back to conflict. What is purpose to banish, it succeeds in reproducing.

The surest way is the way of reconciliation. We need to learn how to modify our own aggressions and discover the power that can come into our hearts when we have given in, but not given up.

Modification of our sometimes overly demanding egos for perennial pleasure and uninterrupted ease can provide the balance we need to face conflict or hurt.

We cannot have it our way, or no way, and we had better learn how to move to middle ground. When we look squarely at the face of our difficulty, and determine to meet what is up ahead, we may discover the futility of flight: instead of running, we need to take a stand.

And often we need most to stand up to ourselves - to pull down our self-made defences, removing the guard we put up to protect us from imaginary enemies.

PAPER BULLETS

Cartridge, a word derived from the Latin for paper, originally was a round of gunpowder wrapped in paper for use in a flintlock musket.

Club for the Middle Years

DEAR DORIS—We have a Catholic Club in Calgary called the Sing Club. Our aims and objectives are exactly those of the 39 Club of Kingston. It is for all single Catholics 30 and over and it is strictly a social group and definitely not a lonely hearts club.

I quote from Mrs. R. H.'s letter: We feel that by helping other people to overcome some of their problems, we can help ourselves solve ours. Loneliness is best overcome by being with people who have had similar experiences; and by forgetting one's own personal problems among friends."

Our social gatherings consist of dancing, bridge, bingo, etc.

We would much appreciate a write-up in your column, as we feel that every single middle-aged Catholic in Calgary should be aware of the existence of this club.—MRS. O. M., Calgary.

DORIS CLARK

DEAR MRS. O. M.:—Good! Perhaps readers in other cities will start something when they read about you.

Any readers in Calgary may have your address by writing me.

* * *

DEAR DORIS:—I have been friends with the boy up the street for five years.

Ever since he got a car for Christmas and a portable TV for his den, he thinks he is too good for us. Lately he has been taking me for granted and hardly speaks, but he is continually telling his friend, the boy next door, that he still likes me.

Do you think I should drop him or continue to see him? —CONFUSED.

* * *

DEAR CONFUSED:—Your erstwhile pal will be back. Soon the glamor of TV and car will wear off enough to make him realize he also needs friends.

Leave him alone for a while and give your attention to the other nice people around you.

* * *

DEAR DORIS:—My parents' 50th anniversary will be in March, 1953. They used to live here but now live in B.C., but most of their friends live here. My dad is in poor health but they plan to come here in July this year.

I am wondering if it would be too improper to have the celebration then, as I want to have it here in the community hall, and in summer most relatives could come.

It would be harder to have it the proper date, as it would have to be held in B.C. and none of the friends could go there. If we wait till July '53, my dad may not be able to come. Would it be any more proper then?—MRS. B.

DEAR MRS. B.—Actually, July, 1952, is in their Fiftieth Anniversary year. No reason why you could not hold it then and explain about dates and convenience if you want to.

If a couple comes within shouting distance of fifty years married, they are entitled to a celebration.

MAIL CALL

Question: My favorite nephew is to be married next month, but, due to ill health, I will not be able to attend the wedding. I'd like to send a substantial check, so he and his bride can buy something they really want. I know that wedding presents should be sent to the bride, but since I've met her only once, I'd rather make the check out to my nephew and send it direct to him. Would this be correct, or would it embarrass him in any way? — Mrs. M.O.C., Chicago, Ill.

Answer: The check may be made out and sent to your newphew. It would be quite correct. Or, if it's to be cashed after the wedding, it could be made out to "Mary and John Brown," if that is preferable.

Question: I'm about to send out thank-you notes for wedding presents, and wonder how they should be signed. Should I sign just my name, since the gifts are addressed to me, or should I sign both our names, since they're meant for both me and my fiance? — E.M., Chicago, Ill.

Answer: The bride-to-be signs her own name to thank-you notes for wedding gifts, but she may mention in the text how pleased her fiance is, too, especially is notes acknowledging gifts from his friends and members of his family.

The Experts Say

Reading, Appreciation Of Good Literature Motto

By EDNA BLAKELY

OTTAWA (CP)—The motto of the Canadian Home Reading Union is "to encourage reading and the appreciation of good literature."

There are no simple answers to the problem of accomplishing this aim among children, however, says the president, Mrs. G. G. M. Carr-Harris.

Reading to youngsters doesn't necessarily instil them with a desire to read by themselves, she says. For example, she read aloud to her two sons when they were children. Now one reads everything he can get his hands on." The other seldom does any reading.

Nor were television and movies always deterrents to developing good reading habits. TV and films might occupy time children could devote to reading. On the other hand some TV wheeled children's appetite for new subjects to read about.

One kind of reading matter she opposes without doubts, however, is comic books, even when the stories are taken from the classics. "Comic books give in a capsule what children should be reading in a book."

Mrs. Carr-Harris says she finds magazines "a rather trivial way of reading." She prefers books, particularly biographies, but conceded that "one can get some pearl of wisdom from everything."

The 36-branch Canadian Home Reading Union was started in Ottawa in 1932 by Mrs. W D. Dale-Harris* and Mrs. J. B Tyrrell as an offshoot of the National Home Reading Union in England. The British group has since dissolved but unions exist in South Africa, Belgium, The Netherlands and Canada.

Most of the 400 Canadian members belong to groups in Ontario and Quebec. There are three in Prince Edward Island and one at Rossland, B.C. All members are women.

One way members "encourage reading and the appreciation of good literature" is by writing half - hour papers on various subjects they have read about.

"To write you must read and you must read a good many books to compile a half-hour paper," .

Topics are chosen by individual groups. The national group selects topics for annual country-wide competition. This year members are writing sonnets and letters suitable for letters-to-the-editor columns in newspapers.

Minimum membership for a group is eight and the ideal number is about a dozen. Mrs. Carr-Harris says She belongs to three groups but admits she doesn't find time to read every week.

"People should not read to the exclusion of other things." But those who don't read at all "miss a good deal."

SEES GOOD FUTURE—Mrs. Jean Fraser, 71-year-old grandmother, had charges of fortune-telling dismissed in a Toronto court when three policewomen testified she had accurately predicted their future plans and told them of actual incidents in their past. Mrs. Fraser, a widow who operates a tea room, says she prays daily, reads the Bible and never looks for the bad things in the future. (CP Photo).

Talent of Fortune-Telling 'With Me Since Childhood' Says Scottish Grandmother

TORONTO (CP)—A 71-year-old Scottish grandmother, who doesn't look for the "bad things" in the future, has set about bringing a measure of respectability to fortune-telling.

Mrs. Jean Fraser is the proprietor of a genteel Danforth Avenue tea shop she calls The Bonnie Glen.

A small woman, she lives alone in a rented room. She studies her Bible with Presbyterian zeal and says she has a singular talent which has dominated her life.

It was her talent which landed her in police court here, charged with fortune - telling. And it was her use of it that got her out again.

Three policewomen testified they had taken tea in the Bonnie Glen. All three, under questioning, testified they had been told of incidents in their past—and a bit of their future plans—which were dead accurate.

When Magistrate W. F. B Rogers dismissed the charges Mrs. Fraser told him:

"I knew it would turn out all right, your worship.

"I could tell."

PRAYS FOR HELP

Mrs. Fraser said later she had known she would be taken to court.

In an accent as strong as when she came to Canada 40 years ago, she says her talent has "been with me since childhood."

Widowed and living on a pension, Mrs. Fraser decided to open her tea room a few months ago because her daughter was in dire financial circumstances and needed help.

"I know fortune-telling has a bad name," she says.

"But I've vowed to take away the bad name.

"There's not a morning but I don't pray to God for His help "And then, I don't look for the bad things in the future."

Crown counsel Peter Rickaby had a distinctly bad day in court when his three witnesses backed up Mrs. Fraser.

"I've never seen anything quite like this before," he said at the time.

And he hasn't Mrs. Fraser's "talent."

Sessions of Health Board To Hinge on Whether Canada Is to Have National Plan

By JACK BENT

OTTAWA (CP) — The deep split that exists in Canada on how to approach the problem of improving health services was brought into sharp focus by 4½ days of sittings here.

Noticeably more than in regional hearings the royal commission on health services has held across the country, sessions here tended to pivot on the crucial question of whether Canada is to have a national health plan, and in what form.

The fact that many of the briefs were presented by influential national organizations tended to underline the division between the two sides.

On the one side were such groups as the Canadian Federation of Agriculture, the Federated Women's Institutes of Canada and the big civil service organizations.

In different ways and with varying degrees of emphasis, they told the seven - member royal commission the time has come for powerful federal intervention to ensure that high-quality medical care is available to all.

WORK WITH PROVINCES

The 6,000 - member Professional Institute of Public Services of Canada took a somewhat different approach from the others, however, suggesting the provinces likely will evolve their own plans and arguing that Ottawa should lend a hand.

Besides financial support the federal government should provide a "federal framework" in which the provincial plans might operate, it said. This would involve a central administrative body providing technical and advisory assistance to the provinces.

In addition the central government would contribute research and training facilities and help supply medical buildings and equipment.

The business community, as represented by the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, continued its campaign against "socialized medicine", arguing that a government - run plan would be inconsistent with personal freedom and would endanger the economy.

The chamber, national voice of some 850 local boards of trade and chambers of commerce, takes the same basic stand as the Canadian Medical Association — that government intervention should be directed only to helping those who cannot afford to insure themselves against illness.

The CMA's position is to be documented in detail at the hearings in Toronto in May. These will follow sittings during April in Montreal and Quebec City.

Organizations representing the country's anesthetists, medical students and interns took advantage of the Ottawa hearings to endorse the CMA view.

However, the Royal college of Physicians and Surgeons of Canada took no stand on the issue of a state-controlled program. There were suggestions in its brief and in replies by college spokesmen to questions by the commission that the college is not exactly appalled by the prospect of government intervention.

Also non-committal was the Royal Canadian Legion. Spokesmen implied that its approach was based on concern that a national program might jeopardize the treatment privileges now enjoyed by ex-servicemen in veterans' hospitals.

The Canadian Dental Association said it could not recommend a state plan "at this time." "First priority in the dental field should go to bolstering the supply of trained personnel, preventive measures and research.

Extemporaneous statements by two individuals at the hearings provided an insight into the alchemy of the state medicine debate at the personal level.

Dr. Don W. Gullett of Toronto, secretary of the Canadian Dental Association, offered the personal opinion that state health plans sap the "moral fibre" of the healing professions. Dr. Gullett, who has studied programs in other countries, said "it is admitted by all authorities" that standards decline under state control.

K. O. Bardwell, electronics technician with the department of mines and technical surveys whose wife is a multiple sclerosis sufferer, attacked what he termed "the financially interested groups who will argue for equivocation, delay, compromise and continued neglect of the unfortunate."

Mr. Bardwell said he takes seriously the second greatest command, "love thy neighbor as thyself" — and likened opponents of the national health plan to Scrooge.

Diefenbaker Alarmed at Red Anti-Semitism

MONTREAL (CP) — Prime Minister Diefenbaker expressed "alarm and outrage" Wednesday night at recent manifestations of anti-semitism in the Soviet Union.

Addressing about 1,300 persons at the annual Histadrut dinner, the prime minister said religious institutions in Russia are under continued harassment and oppression.

Mr. Diefenbaker spoke after receiving the 1962 Histadrut Humanitarian Award. Fifth Bernard Bloomfield, president of the Canadian Association for Labor Israel.

Histadrut is the popular name for General Federation of Labor Israel, a 720,000-member organization engaged in economic development, educational and rehabilitation programs, and manufacturing enterprises in Israel.

Among previous recipients of the award have been former vice-president Alvin Barkley of the U.S., former president Truman, Justice William O. Douglas and Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt.

VISITS COLLEGE

Mr. Diefenbaker's speech capped a whirlwind, afternoon-and-evening visit to Montreal during which he also looked in at a Progressive Conservative ladies tea and visited Loyola College, where he was given a lively reception by 500 students who remained after classes.

The prime minister, in the best campaign form—though he still hasn't announced the date of the election—shook hundreds of hands and chatted with hundreds of people during his brief visit.

He was accompanied by Mrs. Diefenbaker. They flew back to Ottawa early today.

In his dinner speech the prime minister indicated he has received information that Soviet authorities are prohibiting Russian bakeries from making unleavened bread for the coming Jewish feast of the Passover.

"Why should a powerful nation stoop to deprive its citizens of their religion and of the traditional symbols used in religious observances?" he asked.

"What justification can there be for depriving Jews of unleavened bread (matzot) at the Passover?"

Mr. Diefenbaker said speculation, theft, corruption and bribery are apparently as rife in parts of the Soviet that authorities can find no solution but the death penalty.

LIVE CROW—DEAD WOLF — It's difficult to tell the difference, but the pet crow resting on Mrs. Harriet Marlatt, Mrs. Fred Wallis, Trent Road, is alive, while the smarling wolf with Belleville man Roy Woodley is dead—we hope. Mounted wolf is classic example of Mrs. Wallis' taxidermy art; but she also has a love for live wild animals and birds—hence the pet crow Blackie.

Crippled by inflation and threatened by internal politics) Brazil is seeking assistance United States financial help to overcome an economic muddle that may take years to straighten out.

Brazil has substantial quantities of coffee, tropical fruits, iron ore, hydro power and cattle but is short of those other ingredients that help make prosperitalize a country—oil and natural gas, machine tools and non-ferrous metals.

While poverty stalks the hinterland, the population, at just some 70,000,000, is estimated by Brazilian economists to be rising at about 200,000,000 in less than 40 years.

Clearly, great economic trials confront this, the largest of the Latin-American countries. Beset by a shortage of capital, by nationalism, challenged in some key conflicts by regional demands, Brazil is a bubbling cauldron that could be tipped at any moment by contending forces, strongly rooted in the impoverished life of the northeast.

Brazil is in critical need of help and must get it in some years to come. But her nationalist feelings, inherent as they are to Latin-American countries, are heightened in Brazil's case by the United States uneasy, particularly when Canada's timidly refused support anti-Castro forces and has gone so far, while visiting Washington, as criticize the organization of American States for backing Castro's efforts to get out of the central organ of the inter-American system.

He has accused the OAS of putting political expediency ahead of legal righteousness—perhaps another indication that Brazil still won't go along with the majority view of the Latin countries.

Plainly, Goulart will not worship at the altar of the existing policy, though he has indicated that neither will he bow to Communist bloc. He will attempt to pursue an independent course, to do what is best for Brazil in the light of trends that develop.

Under such circumstances, the United States might be less than eager to pour more capital into the Brazilian treasury. But the alternative appears so clear that the United States can pursue no course other than to help the forces dedicated to democracy in Brazil—to prevent the possibility of a Communist takeover.

So U.S. funds previously held up now are to be released. The U.S. treasury is turning over to Brazil some $100,000,000 in aid money. Other U.S. aid may provide Brazil with an additional $150,000,000 in goods.

STEAL $100,000

LONDON (AP)—Six masked men hit a post office driver with an iron bar Wednesday and made off with his truck containing stamps and postal orders worth $100,000. The looted truck was found abandoned a mile away, along with a stolen car the robbers in their get-away.

Gross National Product Up 2.5 Per Cent Despite Heavy Prairie Crop Losses

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's Gross National Product last year, hit by Prairie crop losses and the early-year economic slump, marked up a 2.5-per-cent rise to total $36,544,000,000.

The increase from $35,928,000,000 in 1960 was almost all due to gains in physical output with average prices up only 0.1 per cent, the bureau of statistics said today in its report on the major barometer of the country's economic health.

National output in volume terms was up 1.9 per cent.

Though the year's gain in Gross National Product—value of goods and services produced—was short of the three-per-cent rise predicted by Finance Minister Fleming, there was a rising trend of economic activity throughout the last nine months of 1961.

By the fourth quarter, total output was running at an annual rate of $37,520,000,000, adjusted for seasonal variations. This was more than three per cent above the average for the whole year and almost three per cent higher than the volume level in comparison with $37,396,000,000 in the third quarter and $36,384,000,000 a year earlier.

Consumer spending, the largest single factor affecting economic activity, registered a moderate advance of 3.8 per cent.

But exports of goods and services, sparked by rising exports to the United States and big increases in fuel China and eastern Europe, gained 7.9 per cent. Spending by all governments provided a strong support to total demand, advancing 7.5 per cent.

Business investment in new plant and equipment, reversing a previous decline, picked up in the last half of the year, while the build-up of business inventories, after a modest gains, turned strongly upwards in the fourth quarter. Outlays on housing were only one per cent higher.

Corporation profits, after a 15-month decline, rose sharply after the first quarter and by the fourth quarter were 21.2 per cent higher than a year earlier.

Labor income in the fourth quarter was 3.8 per cent higher than the last quarter of 1960 and wages of all governments were up 8.8 per cent.

Castro Bitter About Ecuador Severing Ties

HAVANA, Cuba (Reuters)—Premier Castro Wednesday night bitterly attacked the leftist president of Ecuador — latest country in the western hemisphere to break diplomatic relations with Cuba.

He said a youth group in the Sports Stadium here that President Kennedy's multi - billion dollar 10-year Alliance for Progress has proven to be an "alliance for failure."

Castro said President Carlos Arosequena of Ecuador was "more cowardly" than Argentine President Arturo Frondizi, who forced the only office last week by military leaders opposed to elected Frondizi—formally severed diplomatic talking office.

By breaking relations with Cuba, Arosemena "ceded the leadership of Ecuador, and resigned in favor of the military isle," said Castro.

"This marked his total divorce from the masses of the people."

Ecuador Tuesday broke relations with Communist Czechoslovakia and Poland as well as Cuba.

MEETS RESISTANCE

Arosemena's plan to hold a plebiscite to decide the question of Cuban relations met with stiff resistance from the powerful military and political leaders, who demanded an outright break.

Castro formally renamed the Cuban Young Pioneers Association, calling it the Union of Communist Youth.

The Associated Press reported from Washington that the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights appealed to the Cuban government, Wednesday, not to impose the death penalty on any of 1,179 prisoners taken in the abortive rebel invasion of Cuba last April.

(The Cuban trials, just concluded behind closed doors, began March 29 and ended Tuesday but sentences have not been pronounced. Havana newspapers said the death sentence had been asked by the prosecutor.)

PC Senator Urges Salaries Of Judges Be Increased

OTTAWA (CP) — A Progressive Conservative senator who said he had to sell insurance to keep from starving when he was a magistrate urged Wednesday that salaries of judges be increased.

Senator Malcolm Hollett, from Newfoundland, joined Liberal Senator Arthur Roebuck in increases in salaries of county, district and Supreme Court judges. He said because he was a magistrate for 25 years and I know what it is to starve as a magistrate."

Senators also urged an increase in the indemnities paid members of the Senate and the Commons as they gave second reading approval in principle to a bill providing for nine additional judges in Ontario.

The bill, after approval by the Commons, adds two judges to the Ontario Supreme Court, bringing the total to 22, and allows for the appointment of seven additional county and district court judges, bringing that total to 79.

The federal government pays salaries of $16,500 for Supreme Court judges and $10,500 for the district and county judges.

CAN NAME CHIEF

The bill also provides for the naming of a chief judge of the county and district courts who will receive an additional $5,000 annually.

Senator Sallie Hayden (Liberal—Ontario) said judges' salaries, which have not been increased since 1955, are "totally inadequate."

"In relation to the times, we are entirely out of focus when we talk in terms of $16,900."

Senator Arthur Roebuck (Liberal—Ont.), who described himself as the "senior member of the bar of Ontario," said the work and responsibility of judges has increased in the automobile age but their salaries remain in the horse and buggy era.

He said senators and MPs are also "very inadequately paid." He quoted from a newspaper article that members of the United States House of Representatives receive $22,000 a year "and we get $10,000."

He quoted a letter written by an unidentified judge to Justice Minister Fulton turning down an invitation to attend a function at Kingston because he couldn't afford to go.

Working with dead animals is the business everyday work of Mrs. Fred W. Wallis, Sidney township taxidermist.

But she would rather see animals alive and in their natural habitat and because of this has also developed into a field naturalist and wild life photographer.

As a photographer of wild animals she thinks nothing of spending hours out in the open hoping to catch a good color shot of wild animals or their life in the field - - or in the woods. She uses a tripod-mounted 35 millimetre camera, fitted with a 400 millimetre telescopic lens to bring the distant objects in really close.

Mrs. Wallis' collection of colored slides of animals and birds in their natural habitat has been seen and enjoyed by hundreds of persons in the Bay of Quinte district and she is in constant demand by local organizations to show her pictures.

CAN DRIVE DOG-TEAM

A native of "far north" Northern Ontario, Mrs. Wallis enjoys roughing it and is equally at home on a team of husky dogs and dog sled or at the wheel of her car.

She learned the dog-team technique as a young girl, she says, adding that a dog-team is the only form of dependable transportation during the northern winters.

The Wallis home on highway 2 between Belleview and Trenton contains many examples of Mrs. Wallis' work as a taxidermist.

One particularly striking display is a Canada lynx crouched on the limb of a tree, its fangs partially exposed, clutched in the claws of its front feet.

Likewise behind glass, in another display, are the skeleton of Canadian bird and animal wildlife, hanging all the way from the lordly moose to water animals such as mink and fisher and even a black groundhog.

Timber wolves grow big down in the Otter Valley district.

Just ask Roy Woodley, Belleville carpenter and "do-it-yourself" gunsmith, who last month shot a 100-lb. she wolf north of Deep River from a distance of 400 yards. The wolf was one of three sighted on the ice of the Ottawa River.

Wolves in that area were making a nuisance of themselves during the past winter and were reported to be attacking cattle.

Mr. Woodley turned his dead wolf over to Mrs. Fred Wallis, Trent Road taxidermist, who has mounted the animal.

MADE OWN RIFLE

He shot the animal with a 243 calibre high powered rifle which he put together in his home workshop. Using a standard 243 calibre action he fitted a special barrel and stock and mounted a four-power telescopic sight. He also loads his own ammunition, using either 75 or 100 grains of powder, depending on the type of game to be hunted.

He couldn't have killed the wolf at that 400-yard distance without a special rifle and scope sight," Mr. Woodley claimed.

Locating groundhogs is a frequent summer sport of the Belleville man, who each season averages anywhere between 200 and 300 of the pests.

Using his high-powered rifle with telescope sight, he doesn't have to creep up on the groundhogs and can down them easily even from a distance of 200 to 250 yards.

The deer hunting season seldom passes without Mr. Woodley getting his deer.

Canadians Take Vitamins They Don't Need

TORONTO (CP)—Too many Canadians are taking vitamins "willy nilly" that they don't really need, Health Minister Dymond said Wednesday.

He spoke as the legislature's standing committee on health approved a bill which would prohibit false and misleading claims for ordering large quantities of high-potency vitamins.

"We read glowing advertisements about vitamins," Dr. Dymond said. "but the average Canadian eating an average diet doesn't need them."

Most vitamins sold over the counter in drug stores are harmless, he added, but exports in the nutritional field are concerned about the dangers of over-doses of certain vitamins which "could have harmful results."

No Law Requires Speedometer To Be Working

TORONTO (CP)—Nothing in Ontario's law books require that a speedometer must be working, although there has to be one in each vehicle, a legislative committee learned Wednesday.

W. M. Earl, registrar of motor vehicles, told the committee on highway and labor bills that a speedometer is considered standard equipment in all motor vehicles, but it is not compulsory for it to be in working order.

Vernon Singer (L—York Centre) said he was "quite surprised" at the information and suggested the time has come for the law to be amended.

Transport Minister Rowntree promised to look into the matter. He debated a motion by committee gave clause - by - clause study to amendments to the Highway Traffic Act requiring all buses to be equipped with a speedometer in good working order.

Liberals Plan Federal Aid To Education

OTTAWA (CP)—The Liberals promised Wednesday to set up a new program of federal aid to handle federal help to provincial authorities for retraining unemployed workers and for long-range job training.

The organization would be called CANDO, short for the Canadian Development Organization.

The pledge was contained in a Liberal party election campaign pamphlet on federal aid to education. The leaflet also said the Liberals would provide 10,000 scholarships a year, valued at $1,000 for each of four years university training, and establish bursaries for students.

Family allowances would be continued after age 16 for children remaining in school to discourage unskilled teen-agers from going into the labor market.

CANDO would have a governing body of educational authorities, industrialists and trade unionists, and would have authority to provide provincial governments with funds, expert advice, and specialized organization—if they wished—to help technical and vocational schools.

"An important part of CANDO's work will be to look ahead to see which jobs will offer more opportunities in future, and which—because of automation or trade changes or for other reasons—will offer fewer opportunities."

Vatican Radio Makes Comment On Marriage

VATICAN CITY (Reuters)—Vatican radio, apparently referring to the love affair of Actress Elizabeth Taylor's marriage with Eddie Fisher, said Wednesday many people seem to consider marriage "a game which they start and interrupt with the capricious make-believe of children."

"The press, always looking for sensational news, finds the caprices of these child-adults interesting and vies in informing the public of the latest indiscretion, the most reliable gossip, and the most probable forecast."

The radio station did not name names. Its comment on marriage was in general terms but its timing suggested it had been prompted by the Taylor-Fisher case.

New and Significant Labor Agreement With Non-ops Will Take Effect June 1

MONTREAL (CP) — A new labor agreement that could pave the way for significant changes in railway operations in Canada during the next few years was signed Wednesday by the CNR and one of its biggest Unions.

W. T. Wilson, the CNR vice-president of labor relations, called the pact with the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers (CLC) a history-making document.

It will cover more than 18,000 express, freight and carriage workers across Canada and provides for a reclassification of jobs and a much wider seniority basis for employees.

Stan Eighteen, secretary of the union joint protective board, said the agreement offers some increase in job security by re-niloy employees.

The new agreement officially goes into effect June 1, replacing three old contracts.

The three old contracts covered the following groups of workers:

12,528 employees classified as clerks, freight and shed staff, shop laborers, stores department workers, station ticked office workers, and freight and passenger gate workers;

5,286 employees classified as express clerks, line service workers, platform and vehicle workers and express garage workers;

740 employees classified as carriage clerks, vehicle employees and carriage service employees.

Mr. Wilson said the Crown-owned railway decided these groups should be amalgamated into one staff in the railway's bid to streamline its operations to meet competition.

Under the three old contracts, however, 1,911 amalgamation could not be carried out.

Some union members were dissatisfied with the old contracts because the large number of seniority groups—200 of them across Canada—often meant that long-time employees were being laid off in a classification where work was not available, while men with no seniority were being hired in other classifications.

Mr. Eighteen said a senior worker will have a much better chance of retaining employment with his full seniority rights within the railway.

The CNR and the union gave this example of how seniority will work in one of the railway's geographical regions, the Great Lakes:

Instead of the 46 seniority classifications that previously existed, there now will be only eight—there in the Toronto area, two each in the London and Sarnia districts and one each covering the entire region.

The classifications will depend on the type of work involved.

Key Waterfowl Breeding Areas Are Improved

WINNIPEG (CP) — Some areas of the Prairie provinces have had heavy snowfall this winter but the way it melts will be the key to conditions for waterfowl.

"Outlook for the 1962 waterfowl breeding season, although improved considerably over that of 1961, still is not as bright as it could be," reports Angus Gavin, general manager of Ducks Unlimited.

"Snow conditions, the key to runoff, are quite good in Manitoba, eastern and northern Saskatchewan and the northern Alberta. Yet they are below normal in the heavy duck breeding area known as the Palliser Triangle which covers portions of each of the three Prairie provinces.

"Moisture in the good snow areas is quick thaw will be needed to guarantee an adequate supply of water in the sloughs and potholes. If a slow breakup occurs the land is apt to run off much of the present moisture could disappear, leaving habitat conditions little better than they were a year ago.

"Waterfowl populations, according to winter - inventory figures, are down from 1960. The 1961 breeding season, however, is not nearly as drastic as was anticipated last fall."

The report said the mallard population has suffered fairly heavy losses over the last few years but the decline could be reversed rapidly.

Youth Elects Trial by Jury On Sex Crimes

TORONTO (CP)—An 18-year-old youth elected trial by jury on charges of sex crimes after two months ago led to the arrest of Rabbi Norbert Leiner.

Brian Patrick Mayer of suburban York Township was remanded to April 11 on charges of rape, attempted rape, robbery, assault with bodily harm and indecent assault.

All the alleged offences took place in or near the Cedarvale Park area of York Township.

While looking for a sex deviate in the area police picked up Rabbi Leiner, 37, of Brooklyn, N.Y., on suspicion and ended up charging him with creating a disturbance and assaulting police.

The rabbi complained of police brutality and the charges were dropped and replaced by a habeas corpus inquiry, which has been adjourned.

Specialists Handle About Half Daily Total of Trading

"What's the market in G.E.?" one called.

"Sell 74¾, buy 74⅝," snapped a tall, greyish-haired, ruddy-faced man, standing with book in one hand and pencil in the other.

Two slips of paper were exchanged. Within seconds, 100 shares of General Electric common stock had been traded at $74.62 a share.

"What's mad?" inquired another broker, hurrying to the post.

He was given the quotations for Madison Fund, An exchange of papers and another trade was made.

The man with book and pencil was specialist George C. Dinsmore, 52, a veteran of 34 years on the exchange. He is one of 330 specialists operating at the 19 trading posts — the focal points for some 2,000 brokers and employees swarming the floor.

HANDLE HALF VOLUME

These specialists handle about half the daily volume of trading, which in 1961 averaged 4,085,050 shares.

Theirs is a nerve - wracking, ulcer-producing job with risks of stiff losses but possibilities of big profits.

To the investing public the specialist is pretty much a mystery man.

To brokers he is the backbone of the stock auction market.

To the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission his position in the stock market bears looking into.

Thus the spotlight of public attention has been directed on him.

Between split-second trades, Dinsmore crisply described his job.

"It's our responsibility to keep a continuous market. We make every effort to try to keep price fluctuations within a reasonable range."

This primary function of the specialist is accomplished by buying and selling stock for his own account when there is a disparity between the supply of stock being offered for sale at a given price and the demand for shares at that price.

NARROWS THE GAP

He makes a bid or offer between the quoted buying and selling prices, drawing the market together and preventing wide fluctuations.

For example, if XYZ stock is being offered for sale at $52.50 a share and the best bid to buy is $52, the specialist is quite likely to step in with a bid of $52.25. If the public raises the $52.25 bid, the specialist buys stock with his own money. He hopes that later on the price will go up and he will have earned a profit as well as kept the market active and narrow.

Another duty is to execute orders from other brokers.

Some also engage in a public brokerage business, buying and selling stocks for individual investors.

While the specialists on the New York Stock Exchange haven't come under public criticism from the Securities and Exchange Commission, Treasury counterparts on the American Stock Exchange have.

The SEC leveled almost half of its recent critical report on the ASE to activities of that exchange's specialists.

It said:

"The potential abuses of a system wherein specialists are permitted to handle orders in behalf of public customers of their firms are clear. The danger exists that such customers will receive preferential treatment. The danger also exists that those public customers' accounts may be used by the specialist to assist him in making large-scale distributions through the exchange mechanism."

MAY SEPARATE JOBS

The SEC has suggested the possibility of separating his job as a specialist from that of a broker.

Origin of the specialist is legendary. Around 1878, the story goes, a floor member named Boyd broke his leg. Rather than stay at home, he went to work and conducted his business from a chair.

Because he couldn't readily move around the floor, he chose one post and confined his trading to Western Union, a popular stock. He did so much business that ever after he recovered he continued to specialize in Western Union.

Brokers found this arrangement convenient and other men became specialists in other stocks.

There now is a specialist, and sometimes two, for each of the 1,860 listed issues on the stock exchange. Some specialists handle only one stock but the average is 12 or 14.

WIRELESS POWER

The U.S. armed forces have a new entry for Sir, "help wanted" columns. They're asking inventors to develop a way to transmit power without wires or cables.

Prime requirements: A technique to transmit 1,000 watts of power for up to 50 miles in usable form. A transmitter would broadcast the electrical power and it would be picked up by a receiver many miles away.

Experimental devices, hampered by low efficiency, have been tested.

TERMITES COMING

It's termite time again.

After spring rains, when temperature and moisture are right, termites signal their presence by rising in swarms. They search out wood, paper, or anything containing cellulose. Other signs: Mud tunnels built along basement walls as the termites migrate to wooden structures.

They look a little like flying ants, says the U.S. Pest Control Association. But they are different. Termites have thick bodies, no waistline and four wings of equal length, while flying ants have rear wings shorter than those in front.

PORT IN SPACE

A new radar system that can help find a space station and guide a chaser rocket to rendezvous with it was described last week.

The radar system, by picking up signals broadcast from the target satellite,can spot it at a distance of 60 miles and guide the chaser rocket in to dock at speeds up to 1,000 feet a second, Howard Reuler of Westinghouse Air Arm Division reported to the Institute of Radio Engineers.

SUNBEAMS AT WORK

A system that keeps its eyes on the sun and charts the direction of the sun's rays can help keep a satellite on an even keel by in a desired attitude.

The sun-seeking eye, uses the set direction of the sun's rays to determine when the spacecraft is rolling or otherwise changing its attitude, reports Heinz Goldschey of Northrop Space Laboratories.

When changes are noted, the sun seekers send signals to small jets which correct the spacecraft's roll, yaw and pitch.

The Congo Still Is Sinking And Bottom Out of Sight; Many Jobless, Far in Debt

Bernard Dufresne, Canadian Press staff writer who covered The Congo for five months in 1960, has gone back to report the activities of the Canadian signal men stationed there and on the general situation. In this story he writes of a deteriorating country.

By BERNARD DUFRESNE

LEOPOLDVILLE, The Congo (CP)—Twenty months after the violent collapse of The Congo, this African country still is sinking. And the bottom still is out of sight.

There is a lot of evidence that the over-powering strength of the jungle is slowly reclaiming the land that had been cleared to make this one of the brightest cities of Africa.

Economically, the country is getting more and more into debt. The number of jobless in Leopoldville alone is estimated at 100,000. The best possible guess of the population, swelled by thousands of natives arriving from other areas that are just as depressed, is more than 400,000.

Goods are scarce, except at black market prices. Store shelves are almost bare, and what there is available is usually at inflated prices that only highly-paid UN personnel and nouveau riche of Congolese politics can afford.

The black market for dollars is thriving among European businessmen who will pay as much as 170 Congo francs to the dollar. The official rate of exchange is 65 francs, but dollars are desperately needed to import goods, legally or through the black market.

HEALTH DEGENERATES

Public health conditions, despite a larger number of doctors in The Congo, due to UN operations, than during Belgian colonial days, are degenerating. Diseases of all types are taking a heavy toll in the over-populated native slums.

Belgian administrators would check the spread of diseases by restricting travel of the native population. Now that they have self-government, the Congolese travel as they wish, thus often bringing diseases from one district to another.

European travellers from other parts of The Congo say that despite all the signs of collapse here, Leopoldville is better off than most cities—where conditions are worse.

One exception is Elisabethville, capital of Katanga Province.

One member of the UN civilian staff who has been here since August, 1960, looked over the shoulder to see if anyone was listening, then summed up the situation:

"Things will get worse before they get better."

After a tour of Leopoldville, keeping in mind conditions in August, 1960, when this reporter was first here, the statement did not sound like the hackneyed expression that it is.

DISCIPLINED PATROLS

The only one bright spot in the picture is that in Leopoldville, at least, there is no sign of undisciplined patrols of Congolese Army soldiers who were everywhere during the first few months of independence. Now they are tightly under control in their camps and the air is free of tension.

The squalor of the native shanty districts is worse than it was 20 months ago. Open grounds in which children used to roam and play have become garbage dumps in which adults forage for scraps of food.

Here and there are dozens of automobile bodies that have been stripped of all mechanical parts. The wrecks are the result of wild driving by unlicensed Congolese motorists.

Hungry Congolese are often seen waiting patiently around the quarters of UN military personnel, ready to pounce on leftovers of food that are thrown out.

Leopoldville's many parks, once beautifully kept, have become little jungles. Villas in the once-exclusive residential area of Parc Hembises are practically lost behind tall grass and unclipped bushes. Many of these homes, which, if built to stand Canadian winters, would cost between $40,000 and $60,000, probably never again will be fit to live in.

MANY RETURN

Still, many Belgian and other European businessmen have returned with their families, and are trying to reopen their shops. Where three out of five shops were closed in the last half of 1960, now they are virtually all open.

During the relatively cool hours before noon, there is a lot of activity in the business district, but it seems superficial.

Businessmen seem to be continually frustrated by long waits outside the offices of inept and inefficient Congolese civil servants who may or may not grant the permits required for almost everything one wants to do.

Almost all activity comes to a halt in the sweltering afternoons.

But after dark, Europeans and Africans rub shoulders in the busy nightclubs where patrons drink black market scotch at $3 a shot and wait for the strip-tease dancers who come at about midnight and perform until the early predawn hours.

Lung Cancer Blamed For Fact More Men, Fewer Women Dying

Making allowance for the aging Canadian population, the rate of cancer death among males is rising, according to the Canadian Cancer Society.

The Society bases its conclusion on figures recently provided by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics which, over the 1960 a total of 23,181 Canadians died of cancer of all kinds, 13,608 of them males and 10,573 of them female. This is the highest figure ever recorded, but it must be related to the changing population.

Dr. R. M. Taylor, executive vice-president of the Society, points out that the rising rate of cancer deaths among men is almost entirely due to the rising rate of lung cancer deaths. In 1950 there were 2,223 men and 231 women who died of lung cancer; in 1960 there were 1,694 men, 201 women.

Dr. Taylor referred to a recent study by the National Cancer Institute of Canada which showed that the age-adjusted mortality rate per 100,000 population among men, between the years 1941 and 1956, had gone up from 153.2 to 163.4; during the same years, the rate among women dropped from 124.6 to 118.5.

"Age-adjusted" means allowance has been made for the fact that Canada is gradually getting an increasing proportion of the population in the older age groups. The risk of cancer, although present at any age, rises as one grows older. Mortality statistics, therefore, have to take this into consideration when comparing one year with any other.

In 1960 lung cancer deaths accounted to 17.7 per cent of all types of cancer deaths among men; ten years previously they amounted to only 11.2 per cent.

During the 18 years studied by the N.C.I., the age-adjusted rate for lung cancer rose from 9.1 to 26.2. "Obviously," said Dr. Taylor, "the trend is continuing."

It was in 1926 that lung cancer first ousted stomach as the cancer type killing the most Canadian men. Stomach cancer deaths in 1960 among men were 1,883 or 360 less than deaths from lung cancer. The trend over the 15-year study period showed stomach cancer among men to be on the decline.

Dr. Taylor said the Canadian Cancer Society had, during the past few years, devoted considerable effort to a program to dissuade teenagers from starting the smoking habit.

"We have found," he said, "that it is difficult to persuade adults to give up the habit. It's not quite 2 of adults now given up smoking or cut down on their cigaret consumption, but cigaret sales continue to rise."

So we have decided that our most useful field of activity is among young people. We hope that we can convince enough of them they should never start the habit. Then, maybe, some time there might be a significant drop in lung cancer statistics in this country."

Big Race Saturday

Canuck Rows for Cantabs

By ALAN HARVEY

LONDON (CP) — Canada's lone participant in Britain's Oxford-Cambridge boat race approaches Saturday's zero hour with a tremor of apprehension and sincere appreciation of what he regards as a great sporting occasion.

"It's a unique event and an absolutely terrific experience," said lanky John Lecky of Vancouver, the bulky blonde law student who will row at No. 6 spot for Cambridge.

Nervous? "Naturally you tend to be a little nervous, but it wears off once you get your head down and get going."

Rowing apart, the thing that really impresses Lecky is the ritual that surrounds this 136-year - old sporting institution, which annually draws 100,000 spectators to the banks of the Thames between Putney and Mortlake.

"There's a terrific amount of precedent and tradition bound up in it," said the 21-year-old oarsman.

"For the last five weeks, it virtually amounts to confinement for the crew. Everything is all laid down—how one eats, how one dresses, how one rows."

To start with, he said, you have three "sets of kit." Nobody departs from the standard dress.

This may entail strolling about in "blanket trousers" of heavy white wool or an old blazer, handed down from crew to crew through the years, that may be 50 years old.

Evening wear, rigorously adhered to, consists of white flannels, pale blue blazer and bow tie and white waistcoat with blue trim.

The crew eat together, with coach and occasional guest, and go to bed well on the safe side of midnight. It would be "almost" a sacrilege" to break away from the communal dinner for family or romantic reasons.

What do they talk about? Almost anything, from rowing to international affairs to theatre. Lecky and crew-mate Boyce Budd of Comwall, N.J., conduct lengthy but inconclusive arguments with Cambridge boatman Alfred Twine, the oarsmen sing the praises of a Seattle-made boat Twina, with 25 years' experience, prefers British-made craft.

In the long buildup to the boat race, an event that lasts some 20 half-pain-laden minutes and is remembered for a lifetime, the youth-ful crews lose several weeks of study and some holiday time, but hope to make it up in the third term.

Weekends, they visit country homes of old rowing enthusiasts. Under pressure, Lecky conceded this can sometimes be a bore but added quickly that there is nothing about the boat race he would criticize.

Lecky stands six feet, 4½ inches and weighs 200 pounds, making him the fourth heaviest man to take part in a river classic whose appeal nobody can satisfactorily explain. Budd, formerly of Yale, weighs 213 and is the heaviest in the history of the races.

Lecky and Budd are regarded as the "engine room," the real power, of a favored Cambridge crew that will probably prevent Oxford from improving its record of only eight victories since the First World War.

A graduate of University of British Columbia, Lecky rowed for UBC against Germany in the 1960 Olympics. His mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. John Lecky, are over here for the race and another interested spectator will be his grandfather, timber tycoon H. R. MacMillan.

Sports Snapshots

By JACK SULLIVAN
Canadian Press Sports Editor

When the Chicago cops nabbed the would - be Stanley Cup stealer the other night, it marked yet another incident in the life of the old trophy. All sorts of stories are connected with it but, as far as anyone knows, this was the first time a person tried to cart it off.

At least he was a daring young man, much in the class of people who figure they can pinch those big oak trays from hotel elevators and get safely out of the place. If he had been successful it would have been the story of the current Stanley Cup series.

But the odds were too tough. The Stadium was crawling with ushers and extra police and, after all, how can anyone hide a four-foot-high trophy under his overcoat and expect to leave the arena without someone asking questions?

If he had postponed his attempt until the daylight hours and disguised himself as a workер, it's a good bet he would have got away with it. There would be a lot of screaming because, although Lord Stanley paid only £10 ($48.67) for it in 1893, it now is considered a priceless piece of silverware.

It has travelled across Canada numerous times dating from the days when any senior club could challenge for it. It tumbled out of an automobile and bounced along a Montreal street one dark night in the distant past and in Ottawa it was supposed to have been booted into the Rideau Canal which, luckily, was frozen over.

Another time, an Old Ottawa Silver Seven player carried it home to show his mother after a celebration in a downtown hotel. He later pitched it over a fence in the dark and then started a laborious search for it in the long grass.

There was one incident, though, that wasn't funny.

It happened in 1907 and an irate Kenora Thistle club executive was heading with the cup in the general direction of the Lake of the Woods. He stormed out of a meeting with a declaration to cup trustees that "they would never again see the Stanley Cup."

The story was told to Sports Editor Bill Oliva of Ottawa Journal Westwick by the late Alf Smith, a great right-winger with the Silver Seven who was one of the principals in a big controversy.

It appeared that Smith and Harry (Hap) Westwick, Bill's father, left the Silver Seven to join the Thistles who were preparing to meet Montreal Wanderers in a two-game total-point series. F. D. Ross and William Foran of Ottawa, cup trustees at the time, said the Ottawa players were not eligible to play for Kenora.

At one meeting, Smith recalled, "a Kenora club official picked up the cup and prepared to leave the room with it."

"Asked what he intended to do, he replied that he was fully prepared to pay for it. He was actually heading for the Lake of the Woods to throw it in.

"He would have done it, too, if he hadn't been restrained, and it was no easy job to humor him.

"That cup sure was heading for a place at the bottom of the lake."

The series was switched to Winnipeg, Smith and Westwick played and Wanderers won 12-8.

Hair Specialist Here Friday

Will Show Men and Women How to Save Hair and Prevent Baldness

OTTAWA, Ont. New home treatment methods for saving hair and improving its growth will be demonstrated in Belleville, Friday April 9, at the Hotel Quinte.

Trichologist G. F. Thomson will be in charge, representing the dynamic Roberts Hair and Scalp Specialists organization. He will personally examine hair-worried men and women from 12.00 noon to 8.00 p.m.

This new treatment is neither "snail order" nor "curse-all". It is adapted to the individual after a personal examination and progress is checked at regular intervals by a Roberts Specialist.

Who Can Be Helped?

Will the new Roberts treatment cure baldness? "No!" For we cannot help men and women who are slick-bald after years of gradual hair loss. But if you still have fuzz and your scalp is still creating hair, you can at least save and thicken what you have. Some conditions, such as "spot baldness" usually have complete coverage if caught in time!

Other conditions that usually bring on excessive hair-loss—dandauff, liching, over-oiliness or dryness, follicle clogged with sebum or sebutse— can be corrected by the Roberts home treatment if caught in time.

DON'T WAIT UNTIL IT'S TOO LATE"

Baldness won't wait for doubters to be convinced, you are going to keep right on losing hair 'til you're bald —unless you get your scalp in healthy, hair-growing condition again.

Examine You Free

We want to make it clear that you incur absolutely no charge or obligation by coming in for an examination.

Your only obligation is to yourself. We do not accept cases that will not respond.

Guarantee Satisfaction

The Roberts Specialists will give you a written guarantee that you must be satisfied within 30 days or it will cost you nothing.

For a free examination and discussion of your hair problems ask the desk clerk for Mr. Thomson's room number. He does not make appointments, so come in at your convience.

Examinations are given in private.

Cards Turning Up Aces

Ernie Broglio, plagued by arm trouble last year after winning 21 games in the 1960 baseball campaign, has pushed St. Louis Cardinals' rising pennant stock up another couple of points with his strongest pitching performance of the exhibition season.

The 26-year-old righthander went seven innings and scattered six hits Wednesday in the Cardinals' 7-5 victory over Philadelphia Phillies at Clearwater, Fla.

Accorded National League sophomore-of-the-year honors two years ago after compiling a 21-9 won-lost record, Broglio, formerly with Toronto Maple Leafs of the International League, ran into assorted arm ailments in 1961. His record dipped to 9-12.

Broglio has manager Johnny Keane hoping a winter's rest has taken care of the problem and put him in shape to take his place alongside Larry Jackson, Ray Sadecki, Bob Gibson Curt Simmons and newcomer Ray Washburn as a starter for the pitching-rich Cardinals.

ON TOP OF STANDINGS

The victory for St. Louis-holiest team over the last half of the 1961 season with a 47-33 record after Keane replaced Solly Hemus at the helm—kept the club on top of the National League exhibition standings with a 16-8 mark.

In other fine pitching efforts, Ed Rakow went the distance for Kansas City Athletics as beat Cincinnati Reds 3-1, Jack Kralick and Dick Stigman of Minnesota Twins shut out Baltimore Orioles 5-0 and Pittsburgh Pirate rookies Bob Veale Jack Lamabe and Diomedes Olivo stopped Washington Senators 3-0.

The hitters lashed out as Houston Colts belted Los Angeles Angels 20-5 and San Francisco Giants beat Cleveland Indians 10-11.

New York Yankees edged Detroit Tigers 3-1, Milwaukee Braves defeated Boston Red Sox 9-2, Chicago Cubs nipped Los Angeles Dodgers 6-5 and New York Mets beat Chicago White Sox 6-4.

Barons Nip Indians 4-3, Bisons Win

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Cleveland Barons, unimpressed by Springfield Indians' awesome credentials, have gained a one-game lead in their American Hockey League semi-final series leading to the Calder Cup.

They did it the hard way, beating the Indians at home, where Springfield is virtually unbeatable—4-3 Wednesday night in the first game of their best-of-seven series. Wayne Larkin got the winner at 19:16 of the third overtime period. The second game will be played in Springfield Saturday night.

Larkin's dramatic goal after 110 minutes and 16 seconds of action came as a shocker to Springfield fans, who had seen their Indians lose only three times in 35 home appearances this season.

BUFFALO WINS

Buffalo Bisons defeated Rochester Americans 3-2 in a quarter-final match for a 1-0 lead in their best-of-three set. Hershey Bears, who hold a 1-0 lead in their best-of-three quarter-final with Providence Reds, visit the Reds' home ice in the only action tonight.

Gary Bergman, Fred Glover and John Ferguson scored for other Cleveland goals. Jim Anderson, Dennis Olson and Bill Sweeney were the Springfield marksmen.

Chico Maki got what proved to be the winner for Buffalo when his goal with a minute to go in the second period gave the Bisons a 3-1 lead over Rochester. Alex Faulkner got back for the losers in the last period.

Brian Cullen and Brian Smith got the earlier Buffalo goals and Gerry Ehman the other marker for Rochester.

Wants to Return Favor

WANTS GOLF SCHOOLS — Stan Leonard, the Vancouver golf pro who is ranked among the world's best at 47, wants Canadian youngsters to get the chance to become as good as he is. He has proposed a countrywide system of summer golf schools that would give the kids intensive instruction under top club pros. Leonard figures the 66 acre he shows here may be partly the result of the learned on a gift membership when he was 14. (CP Photo).

Golf Good to Leonard

By NAT COLE

VANCOUVER (CP) — Golf has been good to Stan Leonard, the ageless Vancouver professional, and he wants to return the favor.

At 47, Leonard has been a touring professional only seven years but has an international reputation second to none in Canadian sport. Now he wants Canadian youngsters to have the opportunity to reach the same stature.

Leonard wants to see the establishment of a country-wide chain of "golf colleges" to raise the standard of play and eventually make Canada a first-class power in international golf.

GIVEN MEMBERSHIP

"I recall that when I was 14, and considered a fairly promising player, I was given a year's membership in the old Shaughnessy Golf Club.

"I consider that a vital turning point in my career because I was then able to play far more golf than I could have otherwise afforded, and also far better facilities for practice. I would like to see many more young Canadian golfers get such an opportunity. We should see to that they get it."

Leonard's plan is for summer schools in selected areas across Canada. Each would hold a week's term on a golf course reserved exclusively under a rental arrangement. The schools, staffed by the best available pros in the area, would give intensive instruction to promising young golfers.

The students would pay a nominal sum, "perhaps $60 or $70," for the week's seminar including keep, and attend full time daily classes. The rest of the cost would be made up by golf association subsidies, local clubs, interested sportsmen and private industry.

COURSES CROWDED

"One of the greatest weaknesses and inequities of our golf system," says Leonard, "is that so many young golfers—because perhaps of the financial inability of their parents to join a private club—are denied the chance of playing on private courses, under the surveillance of the club pro.

"It is pretty difficult—as well as costly for many young players—to play enough golf, and learn it properly, on our crowded public courses."

The Leonard plan would see summer golf schools in British Columbia, possibly two of the Prairie provinces, Ontario, Quebec and in the Maritimes.

"It's an excellent idea," says Jock McKinnon, pro at West Vancouver private Capilano Club. "And it would only be a matter of time before it pays off."

McKinnon says a similar plan has been working well for some time in Britain, where local golf associations sponsor schools for young golfers from 12 to 20.

Leroy Goldsworthy, Point Grey professional, says the idea is "wonderful" but he's doubtful whether golf courses could find room for the youngsters.

Len Collett, professional at Marine Drive, is sure most private clubs would make room.

"It wouldn't be necessary for the schools to have exclusive use of a course. They could be allowed so many hours a day, use of the practice fairway, and so on."

Kid Pearet Funeral

Thousands Pay Tribute

NEW YORK (AP) — Several thousand persons filed past the body of former welterweight champion Benny (Kid) Paret 25-year old Cuban who died after taking a savage beating at a Bronx funeral parlor Wednesday.

At the same time, seven New York state legislators, one a former fighter, were appointed to a special committee that will investigate boxing to decide whether it should be banned in the state. Hearings will open in New York Friday.

There were new moves to end the sport in the Ontario legislature and Sweden. Rep. Abraham J. Multer (D-N.Y.), called for Congress to ban radio and television broadcasting of fights.

The Havana press reacted furiously to the death, accusing American "commercial interests" of causing it.

Paret died early Tuesday. He never regained consciousness after being carried from the Madison Square Garden ring March 24. He collapsed in the 12th round from a beating at the hands of Emile Griffith.

MAN ARRESTED

More than 20 policemen were on duty outside the funeral home to prevent any disorder. One man was arrested Tuesday night when the crowd got out of hand.

Griffith was not expected to visit the funeral home because of fears his appearance could create ill-feeling in the largely Spanish - speaking neighborhood.

The body will be flown Friday for burial in Miami, where Paret owned a home.

Mrs. Lucy Paret, the fighter's 21-year-old pregnant wife, sat in an adjoining room at the funeral parlor most of the day and then left for a meeting with New York State Athletic Commission officials to discuss disposition of Paret's $50,000 purse for the bout.

Paret was advanced $2,000 before the fight. Distribution of the remainder awaits a court order, since the boxer died without leaving a will."

Mrs. Paret also filed a claim for the $10,000 life insurance policy taken out on all boxers in this state.

HOLD SPECIAL MASS

A special Roman Catholic mass was conducted here Wednesday night.

More than 17,000 persons viewed the body at a Bronx funeral home Wednesday and police estimated nearly 2,500 persons were either inside the home or waiting in line to pay their respects Wednesday night.

Mrs. Paret will collect about $25,000, before taxes, as Paret's share of the purse.

Manager Manny Alfaro will receive a one-third cut and Paret owed about $6,000 in training expenses.

Lawyers estimated Mrs. Paret will receive a total of about $35,000. The Paret's own a $20,000 home in Miami.

Suggest Mental Test

Would Eliminate '10' Count

PHILADELPHIA (AP)— Elimination of the 10 count in favor of a quick mental test was suggested Wednesday as a means of helping to avoid fatalities and permanent injuries in boxing.

Dr. Robert Groff, professor of neuro-surgery at the University of Pennsylvania, emphasized there is no way of preventing death in the ring short of destroying the psychology of boxing—to knock out an opponent. But he urged a better means of determining a fighter's mental condition after a knockdown.

The professor told a conference on athletic injuries that just because a fighter gets up before the count of 10 doesn't mean he has regained his mental facilities. He said questions such as "where are you? Who are you? What day is it?" constitute a more definite test of a man's ability to go on.

Speaking in the wake of the death of boxing champion (Kid) Paret, the neuro-surgeon said it is impossible to determine during a fight whether a man has suffered a brain injury. He added, however, that he has a longer study of Paret's brain would show the Cuban fighter had an injury before being knocked out by Emile Griffith March 24.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

Sports-wise this city is somewhat unique—in the diamond sense of the word.

First, I believe it is the only community in softball captivity that has a commissioner and advisory board instead of the mine-run president and executive.

Secondly, it is the only city in Ontario that boasts two provincial sports organizations presidents and a honorary vice-president.

Earlier this year Jack Carson, the dynamic president of the Ontario Baseball Association, was given his second term of office by acclamation.

A year ago Don Lee was elected president of the Ontario Amateur Softball Association and after a highly successful season comes up for election to a second term this weekend. I have no doubt that the softballers will send the popular Lee back to a second "sentence."

Harry "Senator" Rollins, who has been connected with sport ever since he exchanged his three-cornered pantaloons for his first pair of softball trews, has been named honorary president of the OASA for the past few years.

The Senator, who has worn out three sets of tonsils cheering city hockey teams, was actively immersed in softball until a short time ago. He retired from the workaday life of an official but takes his honorary duties seriously and is one of the most popular delegates-at-large at the annual OASA get-togethers.

Belleville's first softball commissioner is Cliff Belch, Junior—and if you know of a better one, keep it to yourself, for nobody, softball-wise, will believe you.

Cliff won his spurs during the stormy sessions that were part and parcel of last year's softball activities. As secretary-treasurer and at times a one-man executive, he came up with an effort that earned him the plaudits of all concerned. There was not a whimper of dissent when Cliff was proposed as the city's first commissioner.

But Commissioner Belch wanted to be sure of his ground, "I think I can handle almost everything that might come up," he said, "but just in case, I want experienced heads behind me."

He proposed an advisory board of some seven of the city's sports officials, among them OBA president Carson and OASA Don Lee. The board met with league approval and will act only when called upon by the commissioner.

"There will be none of the nonsense that occurred at times last season." Commissioner Belch told this reporter. "I have the book of rules and words and the league will operate strictly on what they say. There will be no sidelining of issues.' All will be dealt with fairly and squarely."

And knowing the Commissioner and his ability as he do, he means exactly what he says. Which will be the best thing to happen sports here in many a moon. I concur with other well-known softball men of the city and district that Mr. Belch will handle any situation with tact and firmness.

Mr. Belch, with President Lee, the "Senator," Bill Shaw and Jim Tebworth will attend, officially, the OASA annual convention in Hamilton this weekend. The Belleville District Softball League has officially nominated President Lee for a second term. Three others, including Clare Butler, Willowdale; A. K. Davidson, Stratford, and Tommy Williams, Owen Sound, have been nominated, but the underground has it, will withdraw in favor of the Belleville chairman of the board.

But a battle looms for the six executive positions. Some thirty-one candidates from Windsor to Owen Sound to Kingston have been nominated and the lobbying will do justice to an American political convention.

Several amendments to the constitution are on the convention agenda. These as they affect softball generally will be published at the first of the week.

Hawks' Eye On Fontinato

MONTREAL (CP) — It looks as if a feud is developing between Stan Mikita of Chicago Black Hawks and Lou Fontinato of Montreal Canadiens.

Chicago coach Rudy Pilous claims Fontinato is out "to get" Stan, probably the top player through the first four games of the Hawks-Canadiens' current Stanley Cup semi-final series.

But Fontinato, one of the roughest performers in professional hockey, says it isn't so.

Pilous' charge came after Fontinato twice flattened Mikita in the series' fourth game at Chicago Tuesday night. The Hawks won the match 5-3 to even the best-of-seven round 2-2 in games.

The fifth and key game will be played here tonight. The sixth will be in Chicago Sunday night and if a seventh and deciding contest is necessary, it will be played here Tuesday night.

Fontinato drew charging and spearing penalties for dumping Mikita and on each ensuing play the Hawks scored.

"I wasn't out to get him," Fontinato said Wednesday.

Mikita survived the punishment and played an outstanding game, setting up four of Chicago's five goals.

"I'm willing to take it as long as he sta in his penalty box and we get the goals," said Stan.

Canadiens coach Toe Blake said "I can't figure out why they're being given so many penalties. I keep reading we're playing rough and dirty. That's a lot of rubbish."

Canadiens drew 10 of 18 penalties assessed by referee Eddie Powers in the fourth game and the Hawks capitalized for four power-play goals.

Each team has won twice on its home ice so far in the series, Canadiens taking the first two games 5-1 and 4-3 and Hawks winning the next two.

To eliminate the Canadiens, the defending champion Black Hawks will need to win at least one game in Montreal. Besides losing the series' first two contests, Hawks had an undistinguished record on Montreal Forum ice during regular National Hockey League season.

In seven starts, Hawks once, tied another, time and lost the other.

Canadiens may have centre Ralph "Backstrom back in harness tonight. Backstrom suffered a left shoulder separation in the third game and sat out the fourth.

Backstrom wasn't too hopeful about Bernie Geoffrion, who twisted his left knee in the third game. The Boomer is dressed for the fourth game, but wasn't used.

The Black Hawks are likely to be at full strength.

Penalties: Sclater, Duvall, McKenna.

Third Period
Belleville—Hunter	7.43
Woodbridge—Johnston (Barford)	17.12

Penalties: Reid, Mavety, LaRue, Duvall.

Golf's Cream Tees Off Today

Palmer Favored 3-1 For Masters

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP)—Arnold Palmer, bold as a pirate and strong enough to choke a tiger with his bare hands, is a 3-to-1 favorite to whip a record field in the 26th Masters golf tournament, starting today.

The relaxed, confident professional from Latrobe, Pa., heads a list of 116 of the world's top amateur and pro shotmakers who tee off on the first round of a four-day, 72-hole battle with the Augusta National course.

The field is so large, surpassing by eight the previous record of 102 in 1957, that the organizers found it necessary to break with tradition and send the competitors off on the first two days in threes, instead of the customary twos.

Palmer has won two of the last four championships and missed the other two by the combined margin of three strokes.

While wagering is illegal and frowned upon by the Masters sponsors, an Augusta bookmaker put a line which showed Palmer at 3-to-1, one of the shortest priced favorites in the tournament's history. Defending champion Gary Player of South Africa was listed as a 4-to-1 second choice with Bill Casper Jr., whose phenomenal putting touch has projected him to the top of the year's money-winner list, and Doug Sanders, the man with the hurry-up swing.

Smith Gets Hat-Trick

Macs Defeat Woodbridge

By GARRY ALEXANDER
Staff Writer

WOODBRIDGE—Left winger Dave Smith's second-period hat trick led the Belleville McFarlands to a convincing 5-2 victory over the Woodbridge Dodgers here last night — and to a comfortable position in the OHA Junior "B" round-robin playdown series.

Last night's win gives the Macs a one-and-one record in the three team round-robin set with their two remaining games to be played on home ice. The Macs meet Waterloo at home Friday night and then play host to Woodbridge next Wednesday.

Woodbridge plays in Waterloo tonight and Waterloo pays a return visit next Monday. The two top teams will meet in a best-of-seven all-Ontario semi-finals.

The Macs, going with three-full forward lines and four defencemen for the first time since early in the Kingston series, came up with a strong two-way effort last night to stop the Metro league champs.

Belleville outplayed the Dodgers by a wide margin in the second and third periods, holding a 39-22 edge in shots overall.

The first period, when the clubs had eight shots apiece was probably Woodbridge's best, although the Macs came out of it tied 1-1.

Then Mr. Smith took over in the second best. He sank a quick backhand from dead in front after Weston's corner pennout to make it 2-1 at 1.08.

The 4-1 goal came with McKenna of the losers in the penalty box at 18.26. Smith broke away from the Mac end of the ice, outdistanced two Dodgers and tucked the rubber home just before crashing into the goal post.

Back in the first period Bucky Ethier opened the scoring at 8.10. Bob Boyle and Gerry Reid assisted on the play.

Gord Parker came well out of his net to smother a loose puck and hold off the visitors at one point. Don Graham finally tied it at 16.01 with a snap shot.

In the third, the Macs killed off two early penalties without trouble, almost scoring themselves while down a man when Reid broke in. He and goalie Dave Kelly both ended up in the net but the puck stayed out.

Moe Hunter made it 5-1 for Belleville at 7.43. He stole the disc near the Woodbridge blueline, moved in for clear of two defencemen and deked Kelly neatly before flipping home the rubber.

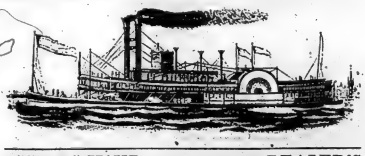
Parker came up with two fine stops in rapid order around the ten-minute mark but Jim Johnston pushed the puck under him to close the scoring at 17.12. Ed Barford drew the assist.

Daniell of the Macs drew an interference penalty at 18.43 and the Dodgers fired their goalie and itzew on six attackers, despite being down three goals. Needless to say the "strange strategy" failed to pay off and the Macs just missed adding to their total.

Mac coach Gordie Bell used Bobby Boyle on a line with McGuire and Ethier while forming a third line of Gary Duvall, Pug Kellar and juvenile recruit Don Goodfellow. Ted Rowland took Boyle's spot on defence. Kellar and Duvall were also used to kill penalties and turned in a fine job.

Belleville had five minors and Woodbridge four in a clean game.

Belleville: Parker, Zakos, Reid, Mavety, Rowland, Weston, Hunter, Smith, Ethier, McGuire, Boyle, Kellar, Duvall, Goodfellow.



Woodbridge: Kelly, Sclater, LaRue, Graham, Yurkiw, McDonald, Peacock, Pashack, Johnston, Ponder, McKenna, Murray, Hall.

Referee: Joe Saddler and Tom Smith, both of Toronto.

Yet To Win In Toronto

Confident Blues Ready For Leafs

By BILL MacDOUGALL

TORONTO (CP) — New York Ranger star Andy Bathgate said recently the club needed a win in New York to boost the confidence it lacked playing in Toronto.

The Rangers arrived here Wednesday night after two straight victories over the Leafs in New York in the best-of-seven Stanley Cup semi-final that now is squared 2-2.

If their confidence was boosted accordingly, it could be tough for Toronto tonight in the fifth game of the series. But the Rangers have a big psychological barrier to overcome. They've been winless in their last 18 starts here.

"They (the Leafs) have the advantage, but I'm not worried," said New York general manager Muzz Patrick.

Playing coach Doug Harvey and Patrick knew that if they can win either tonight's fifth game or Saturday night's sixth game, the Rangers will be in the driver's seat, theoretically at least. The seventh game would be Tuesday in New York, where Rangers have looked like anything but the club that was to be such a pushover for Toronto.

BREWER WILL DRESS

Toronto coach Punch Imlach said Carl Brewer, a good defenceman who has been out since late in the regular National Hockey League season with a severe charleyhorse will dress for tonight's battle.

Patrick was unimpressed with news of Brewer's return. "We'd like to beat all of the Maple Leafs. We're not afraid of any one of them," said the general manager.

Harvey figured Brewer can help the Leafs. "He's pretty good and quite a leader for them.

Rangers plan no lineup changes for tonight's game, meaning Rod Gilbert, an emergency replacement from Kitchener-Waterloo Beavers of the Eastern Professional League, will continue to ride Ken Schinkel's place. Schinkel has a broken toe.

Gilbert got two goals and an assist in New York's 4-3 victory Tuesday night.

Imlach is expected to dress

'Endurance Test'

Jocks Have Friendly Feud

NEW YORK (AP)—It may be up to old Johnny Longden to determine how long Willis Shoemaker, the crown prince of jockeys, occupies the throne abdicated by Eddie Arcaro.

"I plan to retire when I'm about 55, unless Longden is still riding," says the 50-year-old Shoemaker. Longden, formerly of Taber, Alta., is 55 and still riding.

"He was riding before I was born and darned if I'm going to let him outlast me," the Shoemaker said.

Arcaro retired after riding winners worth $30,039,543. Shoemaker's horses had collected $34,466,786 through 1961. Through 1961, Shoemaker rode 4,190 winners, third behind Arcaro's 4,779 and Longden's 5,509-plus.

Shoemaker holds the record of being the top money winning rider seven times, including a whopping $2,961,695 in 1958.

Beavers Whip Hull, Fronts Win

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Kitchener - Waterloo Beavers are not a team to stand in awe of champions.

Getting scoring punch from their first line, the Beavers turned back the first-place Hull-Ottawa Canadiens 3-1 Wednesday night in the opener of the Eastern Professional Hockey League semi-final.

There was no upset in Kingston, where the fourth-place Sudbury Wolves found the Frontenacs' big guns could not be muzzled indefinitely. The Fronts broke away for five goals in the third period and a 6-2 victory.

Only the best-of-seven series will be played Friday night in Kitchener and Kingston.

Only 14 seconds remained to play in Hull before a disgruntled sell crowd of 2,366 when Jim Roberts saved the home club from a shutout.

HAD SIX ATTACKERS

With Canadiens goalie Cesare Maniago out of the nets, Roberts flashed the puck out of a mass of players and poked it behind Jack McCartan, who had five shutouts during the regular season.

Kitchener scoring was by the big line of Len Ronson, Ron Stewart and Red Sullivan. Ronson scored one goal and had two assists, Sullivan had one and one, Natelle assisted on all three and the third goal was scored by Paul Andrea who filled in briefly for Sullivan.

The Beavers kept the Habs off balance from the start with heavy checking. Their own defence was almost impregnable and McCartan was brilliant on some shots that got through.

The K-W club, which finished third last year only once scored two games in Hull during the season.

NET FOUR QUICK ONES

Sudbury's strategy was to stop Kingston's high-scoring trio of Yvon McCarthy, Orval Tessier and Bobby Attersley. They did so for 3½ periods before Attersley and McCarthy broke through.

The other goals came from Don Blackburn, Bobby Leiter, Terry Gray and rookie Jeannot Gilbert. The Leiter-Blackburn-Gray line was particularly dangerous throughout.

Neil Forth and Dennis Kassian scored for the Wolves. It was 1-1 after the first period, the second was scoreless and Kingston dominated the third. The Frontenacs ended with a 37-25 edge in total shots.

WINNIPEG (CP) — Saskatoon Quakers defeated Winnipeg Maroons, last year's western Allan Cup finalists, 6-3 Wednesday night to advance to the western final against Trail Smoke Eaters. The Quakers won the best-of-seven series 4-2.

Don Smith led Saskatoon with two goals and Bill Lindsay, Charlie Goodwin, George Senick and Herb Jeffrey got singles. Winnipeg goals were scored by Leo Joyal, Red Abbott and Ken Saunders.

The Smoke Eaters defeated Calgary Adderson 7-6 at Calgary Wednesday to wrap up their western best-of-five semi-final series.

Ad Tambellini and defenceman Harry Smith paced Trail with two goal apiece and Harvey Staniland, Laurie Burnaw and Gerry Fenner added singles. Warren Hicks scored two for Calgary and Rock Crawford, Bruce Lea, Ken Gardner and Mick Gilday got the others.

Western Hockey

EDMONTON (CP) — Calgary Stampeders held off an Edmonton Flyers comeback to take a 4-2 Western Hockey League victory Wednesday night.

The victory sealed the best-of-seven Northern Division final 1-1 with the next game in Calgary Friday night.

Ron Leopold scored twice and Gord Peters and Lou Jankowski once each for Calgary. Ed Joyal got both for the Flyers.

Windfall Trade Benefits Fall In Canadian Exporters' Lap

By ALAN DOUGLAS-T

OTTAWA (CP)—Some valuable windfall trade benefits have fallen in the lap of Canadian exporters from the lengthy international tariff bargaining sessions in Geneva.

Indications are that Canada will gain considerably more from bilateral tariff deals made between other countries than from the direct agreements it signs on its own.

Trade experts here reckon they will provide tariff reductions by the United States on some $85,000,000 worth of Canadian exports to the U.S. And in the European Common Market there will be tariff concessions —though not necessarily reductions—on some $250,000,000 in Canadian sales to the six-nation Market.

These figures are based on 1960 export sales of goods affected, and the amounts probably are higher now.

The extent of some of these secondary benefits has become known through the early announcement by the U.S. of the bilateral deals it made with other countries in the drawn-out Geneva negotiations under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

GO TO ALL

Under GATT procedure, tariff negotiations are carried out chiefly on a bilateral basis between the principal suppliers of the goods involved. But when the two sides—for example, the U.S. and the Common Market—strike a bargain, the tariff concessions they grant each other must be made available to all GATT countries.

That is how Canada benefited. The secondary benefits to Can-

The U.S. tariff reductions will be a two-stage affair amounting in most cases to a 20-per-cent cut, with half the reduction coming this year, probably in late summer, and the balance 18 months later. For example, the U.S. tariff on aircraft and parts, now 12½ per cent, will drop to 11 per cent and next year to 10 per cent.

TALKS GO ON

Direct GATT negotiations between Canada and the Common Market are still going on, and the results won't be known until summer.

One by-product of some tariff cuts by the Common Market could be an easing of the impact on Canada should Britain enter the Market and adopt its common external tariff.

For example, the Common Market has cut its tariff on autos to 22 per cent from 29. The British tariff on Canadian cars now is 20 per cent. If Britain enters the Market with no special provisions for Canada, the British duty would increase to 22 per cent from 20. Although this represents an increase of two percentage points on Canadian cars entering Britain it's better than the 29-per-cent rate that would have applied if the Common Market had made no cut.

Will Promote Favorable Vote For Fluoridation

TORONTO (CP) — Board of control is to ask Metropolitan Toronto council to start a publicity campaign to promote a favorable vote for fluoridation in a plebiscite next December.

The decision came Wednesday after Dr. Gordon Bates, general director of the Health League of Canada, told the board he is appalled at the amount of "public misinformation" about fluoridation.

But Metro chairman William Allen said later Metro should not spend money on such a campaign.

"I don't think its incumbent upon Metro to spend money on either the pros or cons of fluoridation," he said. "It's a job for the people of the people. Let the various groups who are interested spend the money."

Mr. Allen said he personally favors fluoridation.

Controller Herbert Orliffe said fluoridation of municipal water supplies is a highly technical subject and, therefore, not a proper issue for a plebiscite.

However, he said, since there is a doubt as to its value, "it is our duty to explain the facts to the general public. It is vital for us to have this information from a health point of view."

DESERONTO

Rate Is Set At 118.49 Mills By Council

DESERONTO — The regular meeting of the town council gave a good news for the ratepayers of the town when the council set the mill rate for 1963 at 118.49 mills for the residential areas — a reduction of 1.91 mills. For the industrial areas—a reduction of 1.91 mills from last year. Of the assessment the residential areas will pay 49.37 mills for the upkeep of the two schools and the industrial ratepayers will pay 52.23 mills. The total expenditures for the town for the coming year were set at $151,951.00 of which $127,164.00 will have to be raised by taxation. Only $25,000 was earmarked for the upkeep of the high school.

During the reading of the minutes Councillor Detlor asked regarding the motion passed concerning the water main to West Deseronto Council, at their last meeting only asked for an estimate of the cost of a two-inch main.

In the correspondence the Deseronto Athletic Association asked for a grant of $4,350.00 to help finance the baseball program for this year. The letter was referred to the finance committee for their recommendation.

A letter about the Fire Marshal's training school at the University of Toronto was filed.

The letter from the Board of Education which was received at the last meeting was laid over until the next regular meeting so that more information could be obtained by council. Some members of the council felt that they had only heard one side of the argument and should have the other side present their case.

Permission was granted an organization to use the town hall on Monday, April 9th for a public meeting.

A letter from E. Luck and F. J. Gardner advised council that they had purchased a vacant lot on Main St. and asked to purchase a further portion from the council. The two businessmen feel that with the coming of the bridge that additional parking space will be needed on Main St. and they wish to convert the lot into a parking lot. After considerable discussion as to whether the town owned any land in the area the matter was referred to the property committee for a recommendation at the next meeting. The assessor was asked concerning the land and advised council that there was some land there but he was unaware of the exact location and extent.

A bylaw to establish Daylight Saving from April 29th to October 27th was also passed.

'Trouble Is Abbreviation' Says Producer Director

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—Repeated attempts to convert popular motion pictures into one-hour television programs have usually fizzled because of too much plot in too little time, insists actor James Mason.

"The trouble is the abbreviation," the British performer-producer - director explained. "They get so busy telling the story that they have no time left for scenes—and good scenes are what make an interesting show."

Mason, who recently finished playing the male lead in the movie adaptation of the Booker novel, Lolita, will be playing Maxim de Winter Sunday night in a live adaptation of Daphne du Maurier's famous Rebecca. The play is one of NBC's Theatre '62 series based on bold hit movies—which so far has proved one of the major dramatic disappointments of the season.

HAS IT BEATEN!

Mason — with that optimism that invariably infects performers before a show or program —believes that the problems of abbreviation have been licked.

"Rebecca has such good scenes," he said, "And Maxim de Winter is the woman novelist's eternal hero—all those unhappy, brooding heroes are descended from Jane Eyre."

Bail Totalling $115,000 Set For Three Men

TORONTO (CP) — Bail totalling $115,000 was set Wednesday for two admitted gamblers and a former member of the provincial police anti-gambling squad.

The three, former constable Robert Wright and gamblers Joseph McDermott and Vincent Feeley, have been in jail for two weeks, following conviction on a conspiracy charge.

Bail was set following their move to appeal the convictions.

Each man was sentenced to 18 months definite and six months indefinite for illegally attempting to get information from a police officer.

Wright's bail was $15,000, McDermott and Feeley each had their bail set at $50,000.

Police Asked To Pick up Some Furniture

TORONTO (CP)—A detective sergeant testified Wednesday Joe Crysdale, Toronto sports broadcaster, had asked police to come to his home after dark to pick up some furniture.

Crysdale, 39, faces three charges of theft and six of possessing stolen goods.

Det. Sgt. John Fallis said he went to Crysdale's home in August last year and identified a television and chesterfield suite which Michael Young, 19, had said were delivered there.

Det. Sgt. Fallis said he questioned Crysdale about his contacts with Young and quoted him as saying:

"I've known Mike for several years. There's nothing wrong with the stuff. About a year and a half or two years ago I bought some small stuff from him and nothing happened. He's a truck driver and this was stuff that was left over. It wasn't stolen."

CALLS AGAIN

However, Crysdale phoned him that night, said Det. Sgt. Fallis, and said there was other furniture he had coming from Young. He asked that police send a truck pick it up after dark so the neighbors would not see it being taken.

The detective sergeant admitted that if Crysdale had not turned the furnishings over to police they might never have known that the firm from which it was stolen had been robbed.

The court was told that Young, Allan Hutley, 24, and Wayne Munroe, 18, had arranged to obtain furniture by fraud and sell it to Crysdale.

Hutley, who has just completed a six-month reformatory term for fraud, said he paid a deposit on furniture at two department stores and the money received from Young. When the furniture was delivered to an apartment he had rented—with Young's money—he gave the delivery men cash and phoney cheques for the balance owing.

JOINED BY PAIR

Hutley said he was then joined at the apartment by Young and Munroe.

"We loaded the furniture on a rented truck, went out to Mr. Crysdale's place and took it in," he testified.

Young is serving a two-year penitentiary term for theft and possessing stolen goods and Munroe two years and a day in reformatory for theft and break and enter.

The jury trial continues.

BRINGING UP FATHER

Astrological Forecast

For April 3
BY SYDNEY OMARR

Aries (March 21 to April 19) Reward one who comes up with constructive idea today. Beware of those who try to "smooth things over." Lunar and Neptune positions indicate possible deception effort in business matter.

Taurus (April 20 to May 20) Cycle up. Some of recent emotional pressure is lifted. Key once more is relaxation. You come up with some sparkling conversation if you "let your self go." Progress destined for you.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21) If you try to piece together bits of information, rather than expect to have the whole answer handed to you on silver platter, you can gain much. Be perceptive.

Cancer (June 22 to July 21) There's a favorable lunar-Venus aspect in section of chart ruling hopes, friends, the emotions. Be with those who "count". Express yourself. Reveal your emotions.

Leo (July 22 to August 21) Romance seems to be in air tonight. And where there is excitement, love - so, too, there is Leo! Keep responsibilities in mind. Be practical where affairs of heart are concerned.

Virgo (August 22 to Sept. 23) Seeking external reasons for restlessness, minor problems could take you along wasteful dicated, with plenty of moving about - both in physical and mental sense. You are apt to change your opinion regarding person or subject.

If today is your birthday year offers chance for greater independence. You can take new steps in new directions. Isn't time to try hanging onto past. Carve out new life. Current cycle offers such an opportunity.

GENERAL TENDENCIES—Cycle up for Aries, Taurus, Gemini. Romance is highlighted. All signs tend to idealize persons, situations. Not good time to "issue." General restlessness could get out of hand. If you want to be "safe," better play it that way. Otherwise, be prepared to take the consequences.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 23) Like Taurus, key is understanding. This applies especially in connection with domestic affairs. One in your home may confide in you. Be quick to understand.

Scorpio (Oct. 24 to Nov. 22) Tendency is for you to be very diplomatic, to bend over backwards to see other points of view. Watch that others do not take advantage of your diplomacy.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23 to Dec. 21) Try to realize position of one who has been associated with you in connection with career efforts. Don't ask anyone to do anything you would not want to do. Avoid disputes.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Moon, Venus in part of Solar chart associated with creative efforts, romance, children. Today can push actual ideas, impress associates. Allow warmth to shine forth.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Like Taurus, key is understanding. This applies especially in connection with domestic affairs. One in your home may confide in you. Be quick to understand.

Pisces (Feb. 20 to March 20) A lively day and evening in-

DESERONTO

Departing Priest Honored By Parish

DESERONTO — Last Wednesday night the people of St. Vincent De Paul parish gathered at the Separate School to honor Father R. J. Pelow who left on Sunday to resume his mission work in Japan. Since last fall, Father Pelow has been looking after the spiritual needs of the Deseronto Parish which was left vacant by the retirement of Father Martin.

During his short tenure in Deseronto, Father Pelow made a great many friends both in the parish and the town. His work was inspiring and has will be greatly missed throughout the area.

The early part of the evening was spent in cards and about 15 tables were in play, the winners at euchre were: Terry Bates and Miss Margaret Dorse, while Marion Lost was the lucky lady holding woo the bridge prizes.

Following the games, the gathered at the gaily decorated tables for a festive lunch served by the ladies of the parish.

ADDRESS

Reverend Dowling, Jr., read the presentation address to Father Pelow, while Ernest Lavery and Anson Lord presented him with a purse, on behalf of the parish. The youngsters of the parish also presented Father Pelow with a travelling suitcase, useful for his work with them.

Father Clifford of Marysville, also gave a short address and regretted to see Father Pelow leave.

There has been no indication of an appointment to replace Father Pelow and, for the present, the vacancy will be filled by the priest from Kingston, who will attend on the weekends.

PREPARE FOR OPENING

BUFFALO (AP) — The U.S. Coast Guard icebreaker Mackinaw crushed through Lake Erie ice to Buffalo Wednesday and joined two smaller icebreakers in clearing ice from the harbor entrances. Great Lakes shipping is tentatively scheduled to begin out of Buffalo Friday. The three icebreakers are trying to break up the six- to 18-inch thick pack ice and start it moving down the Niagara River.

Five years in preparation, The Carling Gallery of Reptiles was opened Wednesday in the Royal Ontario Museum in Toronto. It is said to be acclaimed as the finest permanent display of its kind in the world. Here artist Terry Short—renowned throughout North America—is shown hand painting the mold of an iguana. All but six of the 150 specimens on display were molded from a latex compound and then hand painted.

Carling Gallery of Reptiles Opened AT Royal Ontario Museum Toronto

TORONTO — A five-year Royal Ontario Museum project reached its climax on Wednesday, when the Carling Gallery of Reptiles was formally opened.

With more than 150 specimens representing every major kind of reptile, the gallery is believed to be the most complete of its type in the world.

Original live material for the displays came to the Museum from many parts of the world. The basic collection was assembled by an 1957 expedition to Trinidad in 1957.

Another expedition early in 1962 collected original habitat material from the Florida Everglades. Other material was secured from Mexico, British Guiana, Malaya and other parts of the world.

Officiating at the opening was Mrs. C. O. Dalley, wife of the president of Carling Breweries Limited. Lands and Forests Minister J. W. Spooner and Dr. W. E. Swinton, head of the Museum's life sciences division also participated.

FINEST IN QUALITY

In describing the gallery Dr. Swinton said "it is not by any means the largest of its kind but I venture to suggest that it is the finest in quality".

"The original specimens were obtained with the greatest of care from many parts of the world. They were prepared for display with consummate skill and through the development of new techniques that are now being copied, but not surpassed, elsewhere," he added.

"The result is a triumph of public presentation and shows what can be achieved when industrial generosity is allied to Museum knowledge and skill."

In two areas — preparations of casts from original specimens and making latex models from these casts the Museum has pioneered in display techniques.

Lee Ehrenberg, associate curator of fossil vertebrates, is recognized as one of the world's experts in making plaster casts of specimens.

Under the supervision of Terry Shortt, chief of display, life sciences division, technicians for making latex models and then painting them in faithful re-creation of the original were developed.

Both these techniques have since been copied or borrowed by important museums in many parts of the world.

LARGE DISPLAY

Realistic backgrounds have been created, chiefly from original color photographs by Ari Gatti, a member of the display staff, to give as accurate an idea as is possible of the habitat of each specimen.

The new gallery includes more than 2,000 square feet of floor space and contains 30 display cases.

Among the obstacles dealt with in preparing this gallery were a strike and a flood.

In July 1957 the results of more than a year's work in Trinidad were held up in Montreal by a longshoremen's strike. Since the reptiles were not permanently preserved, there was a possibility of considerable damage being done to them.

Through the intervention of Transport Minister Hees, the strike was lifted briefly to permit unloading of these scientific specimens which were then flown to Toronto.

The Museum benefited from a flood at the Cleveland Zoo in 1959. More than $50,000 worth of reptiles were lost in the flood.

When the zoo asked the Museum if it could use them, Mr. Gatti was immediately flown to Cleveland where he prepared the shipment to Toronto.

Few Fowls in World Lead As Serene and Sacrosanct Life as the English Swan

By DODG MARSHALL

LONDON (CP)—Few fowls in the world lead a life as serene and sacrosanct as the English swan.

Besides being perpetually admired for their grace and beauty, swans enjoy statutory privileges under English law that are beginning to make them a problem in an industrial society.

Most people here, for instance, think all swans are the property of the Crown and as such cannot in any way be harmed. This is only partly true.

"The legal position of the swan is extremely complex," said a Home Office spokesman.

"Only swans in certain defined inland waterways are owned by the Queen. Other organizations, such as the Ancient Order of Dyers and Victuallers, also have property rights over certain swans."

Ever since Jupiter transformed himself into a swan to seduce Leda, the bird has been a dominant motif in literature. And after Ben Johnson wholesomed that Shakespeare was "The Swan of Avon," the fowl has been forever linked with sweetness and light.

BUSINESS NUISANCE

Today, although swans remain a distinctive feature in the pastoral elegance of the English countryside, they have become a sour and darkening nuisance in industry.

Electricity men report that "swan faults"—swans colliding with power cables — have increased alarmingly in recent years. Farmers claim that swans are downright scavengers. Even anglers say the swans tend to interfere with "the act of angling."

Recently the Nature Conservancy, a government department, invited all interested parties to a conference to consider whether there are too many swans and, if so, how they can be legally controlled.

Apart from saying everyone involved to keep cool and refrain from becoming emotional about swans, the conference didn't really decide much.

A detailed survey showed there are about 18,000 swans in the country and they have started to organize themselves only in certain localities. There are the only areas where they are a problem.

One suggestion advanced was that swans should be collected together and redistributed more evenly across the country.

Because of their size swans are difficult to destroy. The only real way to dispatch them is with a bullet in the neck but this presents difficulties in recovering the bodies. Pricking the eggs is inhumane. The female will sit on them until she starves.

What is also unclear is whether it is legal to kill swans anyway. They are protected generally under the 1954 Protection of Wild Birds Act.

The act states that swans may be killed only if they are damaging private property and adds that if the swans themselves are owned by a person or party, they cannot be killed at all.

The conference concluded that whatever steps are to be taken, the swans should be controlled discreetly and without publicity.

Nothing in animal - conscious England could be more calculated to produce national outrage than the violation of a swan.

BIG KILLING

The biggest known the first printing of any book was the 2,500,000 copies of Mickey Spillane's The Big Kill in 1954.

Hydro Walkout Averted At Last Minute

Arbitrator Appointed Welcomed by Union

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario government has passed legislation forbidding a Hydro strike.

The clock-above the legislature chamber had 37 minutes to tick before the midnight deadline when Lieutenant-Governor J. Keiller Mackay Thursday night signed the bill prohibiting the strike by the province's 8,300 Hydro employees.

The historic legislation was whipped through its three readings and clause-by-clause review in five hours. The House stayed on in the province, but opposition members claimed it was a "black Thursday" in Ontario's history.

The Liberal and New Democratic parties persuaded the government to adopt two minor amendments to the bill, which forces compulsory arbitration on local 1000 of the National Union of Public Service Employees (CLC) and the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission.

MEETS THE COST

One amendment makes the government meet the cost of the arbitration. It was described by Premier Roberts as Canada's No. 1 trouble shooter. The bill had called on both parties to meet their own costs and share the arbitrator's expenses.

The second amendment limits the issues under arbitration. In those not agreed on after the appointment of a conciliation last Aug. 4, unless both parties agree to the submission of new issues.

Both Liberals and Conservatives voted in favor of the bill when a division was called during second reading—approval in principle.

Four New Democratic Party members, who opposed the bill in principle, were overwhelmed in the vote by 67 government seats and 30 Liberals.

It was this matter of principle which dominated the debate. Throughout the day members reverted to a quote by former prime minister Pearson to the effect that "private rights must cease when they become public wrongs."

Premier Roberts followed this lie.

"Much as I question the general principle of compulsory arbitration . . . there comes a time when the public interest

TORONTO (CP) — Premier Roberts promised Thursday to investigate all circumstances behind a telegram which advised supervisory personnel in Ontario Hydro of the government's plan to end a threatened Hydro strike in one hour before the government introduced its legislation.

The Telegram went out Wednesday to Hydro plant managers throughout the province. Energy Resources Minister Macaulay said it was "apparently based on assumption following speculation on radio and in the newspapers," but he did not indicate who sent it.

NDP Leader Donald C. Macdonald said the telegram was filed in Toronto at 3:44 p.m., about two hours before Premier Roberts announced his plans to the legislature.

Replying for Mr. MacDonald, it said: "A bill has been introduced to the House by the premier which, if passed, requiring compulsory arbitration of all issues in dispute. This legislation will outlaw pending strike and nullify strike deadline."

Mr. Roberts said he didn't know of the existence of the telegram until it was raised in the legislature. Neither he nor Mr. Macaulay had sent any such communication, nor did they authorize it.

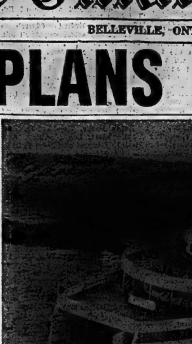
Public Losing Confidence in U.S. Radio News

TORONTO (CP) — Bells, gongs, sirens and other show business sound effects have appeared in radio news broadcasts are causing the public the United States to lose confidence in the medium, a broadcast news executive said Wednesday.

Sig Mickelson, chief of the broadcasting division of Time Incorporated, told the Radio and Television Executives Club that half of many one-minute radio newscasts are given over to noise, causing a carnival atmosphere.

He also criticized radio stations' emphasis in news reporting on foreign and local trivia.



He said that although he was speaking of U.S. practices, his comments might be applicable also to Canadian stations.

COST OF LIVING DOWN SLIGHTLY IN FEBRUARY

Cheap Beef, Lower Car Prices Cause

OTTWA (CP) — Cheaper beef and lower new car prices helped generate a fractional decline in Canadian living costs during February, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported today.

The consumer price index for March 1 dipped to 129.7, down one-tenth of a point from 129.8 a month earlier. The yardstick of urban living costs, based on 1949 prices equalling 100, stood at 129.1 on March 1 last year.

Price cuts were brief, ranging up to seven cents a pound, were the main cause of a decline of three-fifths of a point in the index of food costs, to 134.4 from 135.0.

A larger drop of four-fifths of a point occurred in transportation costs, where the index fell to 129.9 from 140.7 with lower prices for new cars, tires, lubrication, muffler replacement and brake relining jobs.

TOBACCO HIGHER

In other sectors of the consumer budget, clothing, tobacco and shelter prices were higher, but there were no changes in the price indexes for housing, health and personal care, recreation and reading.

Declines in the over-all price index followed an increase in industrial wages during January. The index of average industrial wages and salaries at Feb. 1—latest available—was 184.5 compared with 179.4 a month earlier and 179.2 a year earlier.

The wages index, compiled from a survey of firms employing more than 10 persons and covering a wide range of industries, represents an average of total wages paid.

The fielding price index rose sharply by more than a point, to 152.9 from 151.3, largest as a

Fourth Set of Twins Raises Problem How to Feed Family

HAILEYBURY, Ont. (CP) — Mrs. Roland Mercier, in quintal here with her fourth set of twins in 11 years, says her family needs help.

The 30-year-old woman now has 11 children. The latest twins, both girls, were born Wednesday.

"It's going to be tough trying to raise them," said the mother-of-four of a 40-year-old employed miner who eks out a bare living cutting mine timber and tending a farm 10 miles west of here.

"My husband hopes to get a job in the mines soon," she said Thursday night, "and in time he may be able to make something out of the farm."

The Mercier home is a small frame house on a 100-acre farm in isolated bush country.

Mr. Mercier worked in a mine in nearby Cobalt until last November. Two lumberjacks stay with him on the farm and help care for the children.

Two years ago, when Mrs. Mercier had her third set of twins, she suffered a nervous breakdown that lasted five months.

"I don't feel bad, but it's a lot of work to go back to," she said.

She hasn't chosen names for the latest twins.

"I feel bewildered; I just can't get it straight in my mind that I have two more."

"But they are beautiful babies."

Her family moved to their farm in Firstbrook Township, an unorganized territory from nearby Coleman Township.

Coleman Reeve Douglas McDonald Thursday denied a statement by Mr. Mercier that township officials had blocked welfare assistance for the family.

"They were on 100-per-cent welfare with a housekeeper for two months," the reeve said. "The government would only allow the housekeeper for two months, but they were on relief for some time after that.

"I feel sorry for them, and the township certainly wouldn't try to stop them getting assistance."

Right to Free Movement Restored to U.S. and Reds

BERLIN (AP)—One dispute between the United States and Russia has been settled. As a result, the U.S. liaison mission in East Germany and the Soviet mission at U.S. headquarters in West Germany once again can move about without restriction.

The agreement Thursday between U.S. Gen. Bruce C. Clarke and Soviet Marshal Ivan S. Konev eased the atmosphere somewhat but brought no significant change—or even hope of immediate change — in the general tension hanging over West Berlin.

Clarke, the U.S. Army commander in Europe, and Konev, the Soviet commander in East Germany, met in Potsdam in East Germany, to settle the dispute that developed after East German police shot up a U.S. mission car.

The two commanders agreed their missions at each others headquarters would resume normal activity today. There was no public mention of the shooting incident.

Govt. Worries Over Liaison Between NORAD and SAC

OTTAWA (CP)—Does United States Strategic Air Command act as a lone wolf without consulting Canada, Colo., controls and operates the radars which would provoid warning of any bomber or missile attack on North America.

Strategic Air Command (SAC), a purely U.S. command is the world's chief arm of nuclear retaliation in event of attack on North America. Presumably, SAC would order the bombers airborne only after NORAD had warned it of possible attack.

But in the incident last fall SAC ordered its nuclear bombers to prepare to take off without checking any alert from NORAD. SAC headquarters at Omaha, Neb., confirmed April with Washington Star correspondent Joseph Alsop that a false signal at the height of the Berlin crisis last fall indicated the U.S. might be under attack.

But NORAD and air quarters told The Canadian Press here that there was no false signal in the system and that there was no communications failure of any kind.

NORAD added in a statement: "The loss of a single communications line is not a matter of great importance to NORAD because all systems have backup arrangements, duplicate or multiplex which permit continuance of communications by means of bypass or standby circuits.

The SAC statement about the incident said that during a routine ballistic missile early warning system at Thule, Greenland, and Fylingdales, it was still there and had not been attacked." This system is part of NORAD continental defence.

Officials here are wondering why SAC did not get in touch immediately with NORAD if it thought the Thule radar had been knocked out.

Portable Pension Plan Bill Introduced for Discussion

TORONTO (CP)—A draft bill setting minimum standards for pensions plans in Ontario and tackling the thorny problem of portable pensions was given first reading today in the legislature.

Premier Roberts made it clear he has no intention of letting the bill become law at the current session. Introducing for bill to the legislature, he said ill is "intended at this time only for study and discussion purposes."

It is the second draft bill circulated by the Ontario committee on portable pensions since it was first announced and was formed two years ago.

The first, last August, drew a torrent of comment and criticism. The second was designed to incorporate some of the suggested changes.

Mr. Roberts said the new pension bill has the same intent as its predecessor—to protect older workers unable to find new jobs, because of company pension plans, and younger workers who move frequently among employers

COMMONS FACES CCF BLOCKADE OF DIVORCES

225 Cases Already Passed by Senate

OTTAWA (CP)—The possibility of another CCF blockade of parliamentary divorces this year hange over the Commons. At stake are the divorces of some 225 couples, already approved by the Senate.

Arnold Peters (CCF — Timiskaming) put the ultimatum on the line Thursday as he called on Justice Minister Fulton to accept his private bill which would give Quebec and Newfoundland divorce cases from Parliament to the Exchequer Court.

"If he does not do so, no more divorces will be granted in this Parliament," Mr. Peters said. "No more divorces will be granted this year."

Ferguson Browne (PC—Vancouver Kingsway) interrupted to say "We are not going to be blackmailed."

Mr. Peters' bill was talked out without coming to a vote and without indication of the government's intentions.

The Commons has had experience of how easily divorce bills can be stalled. Last year Mr. Peters and Frank Howard (CCF—Skeena) blockaded about 400 divorce bills by a filibuster lasting a month.

LIFTS BLOCKADE

The blockade was finally lifted after a government undertaking to consider alternative means of handling divorces from Quebec and Newfoundland, which have no divorce courts.

A number of inter-party discussions have been going on this year seeking a constitutional solution, and as a result no attempt has been made to have the Commons pass the 225 such divorce bills which have gone through the Senate so far this session.

Glenn Had Pain-Killing Injector But Real Need Ham Sandwich

WASHINGTON (AP) — It actually developed that astronaut on his space flight, he could have given himself pain-killing injections right through his flying suit.

Biomedical experts of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration reported this today during a symposium on the marine lieutenant colonel's five-hour flight, at last check.

They disclosed that Glenn carried in his survival kit, four newly developed "medication self-injectors" stored in a small package. The injectors contained medications for pain, shock and motion sickness, and a stimulant.

One end of each injector was fitted with a red safety cap, and the other end contained the medications and needle. Upon removal of a safety pin, the injector becomes armed.

The astronaut would have pressed the needle end of the injector into his fire-proof aluminized pressure suit. The needle would have gone through the fabric and into the astronaut's skin, releasing the medication.

Glenn did not use any of the injections before, during or after his flight.

But he told the investigators, he could have used the ham sandwich during his flight. He said his experience indicated there is no need to equip future spacemen to tube-fed foods, Dr. Charles A. Berry reported at the symposium also reported that:

During re - entry into the earth's atmosphere; when the capsule's speed hit 17,500 miles per hour, Glenn's pulse became beating," the temperature of the air cap surrounding the front end capsule rose to 3,000 degrees, almost the same as the temperature on the surface of the sun.

Temperatures within the cabin and in the suit remained "at acceptable levels during all phases of the mission." The cabin air temperature fluctuated between 90 and 104 degrees as the spacecraft passed from darkness into sunlight.

Probe Reveals Reds Infiltrate Civil Service

Papers Agree on Need But Voice Their Regret

LONDON (AP) — Britain's leading newspapers agreed today that the biggest-ever shakeup of the country's anti - spy precautions will result from the government commission's report that Communists have heavily infiltrated the British British civil service.

The entire national press, except for the Communist Daily Worker, accepted with varying degrees of regret the need for tightening up.

The Manchester Guardian struck the keynote of the editorial reactions. It said:

"Because the cold war is more than an old-fashioned conflict of power blocs, ideological commitment can lead honorable men to betray their countries for the sake of what they believe to be a higher good.

"That is why we have had to accept the paradox of a democratic state which finds itself in part by undemocratic methods."

But The Daily Herald, which supports the opposition Labor party, warned:

"An outburst of spy mania would be the worst possible consequence of the Vassall report. Distasteful measures are harsh but can be taken but individual liberties should not be overridden wholesale.

OPPOSES WITCH HUNT

"As the report itself recognizes, total security is impossible. We really do deserve spies who knows the ropes will take care to expose the inept bunglers. A witch hunt would not make us safer."

The Committee warned that Communists have made it "most dangerous penetration" of the civil service. It proposed a wide range of measures to combat "persistent deliberate" massing of Communist effort in the civil service against security.

The judicial investigation into the security services was made by Lord Radcliffe and a committee of political neutrals and experts in intelligence work. Their report, published Thursday, was accepted by Prime Minister Macmillan.

Macmillan told the House of Commons he had not yet reported "disclosed no radical defect in existing security procedures," but that it "contained a number of valuable proposals for further improvement and simplification."

The investigation was ordered after two sensational spy cases last year involving government employes.

The Russians charged today that the British government is preparing to intensify reprisals against the Communist party and the Soviet Union in connection with the spy hysteria in Britain. Moscow radio said the British intended to follow the example of "American witch-hunts."

The Soviet radio, in a home broadcast, said other targets would be the navigation and peace partisans and other progressive organizations."

PRIME MINISTER SAYS ELECTION COMING SOON

Left Indication June to Be Date

STRATHROY, Ont. (CP) — Prime Minister Diefenbaker ended a day-long barnstorming tour of his key southwestern Ontario district Thursday night with a ringing declaration that the government will call an election soon to end and to liberal-party obstruction in the Commons.

He steered away, however, from committing himself to a definite date at the moment. He spoke in terms of "in a few weeks" or "in the near future," and "in the next few days."

When reporters asked him afterwards whether this was really the start of the formal election campaign, he replied "All but." The election will get under way formally when Parliament is dissolved.

The government, he told an estimated 1,400 delegates to the Middlesex West Progressive Conservative nominating con-

Ice Show Will Be Featured At Local Fair

An ice show in August? This may sound impossible to some but not to the directors of the Belleville Fair Board. Yesterday evening at a meeting in the county building they approved the signing of a contract to bring on its feature attraction to the Belleville fair the wild-up grandstand attraction at the Belleville Fair this year.

The show, which is being put on by the Val Campbell agency of Detroit, will take place on an open air sheet of ice immediately before the grandstand and will feature a dozen top ice show stars.

The ice sheet, will be built on the regular stage using a polyethylene base with a number of small refrigeration units providing the cooling necessary to bump up an ice surface from one inch to a half to two inches thick. The compressors are run by electricity and are silent ones.

The show will be the climax to one of the most varied grandstand presentations which the local fair has ever offered city and district fairgoers. It will be held on the final fair night, Thursday, and the Wednesday and Thursday afternoons.

Also scheduled for the grandstand evening shows will be the Ontario dirt track motorcycle race championships on the Monday evening. Tuesday's program will feature a top notch wrestling card and on the Wednesday night there will be harness racing under the lights with betting privileges provided.

The grandstand may also be improved in respect to its seating facilities pending the report of a committee appointed yesterday to investigate the costs and possibility of increasing the existing seats and of providing back for a portion of the seats which would be used as a reserved seat section.

A number of other items of the many details which must be arranged and provided prior to the fair were also handled. Amongst these were the decision to call tenders for the provision of 1,000 bales of straw which will be used for the entertainment of fair-goers during the fair.

It was also decided to raise the entry fee for cattle and horses to 15 per cent of an exhibitor's winnings.

Salesmen, Electronic Grads, Farm Workers, Domestics, Toolmakers in Demand Here

Experienced farm workers, domestics, experienced sales help, toolmakers and electronic graduates are in great demand in the Belleville area and agencies with the above qualifications can readily find themselves a job.

This was stated today by Mr. Cecil Hisser, manager of the Belleville employment office, who said any number of farm workers capable of handling tractors and milking machines could be placed both locally and outside the Belleville area.

Wages offered for farm workers range between $55 and $100 per month, including room and board.

Up to 20 electronics workers could be placed locally, while also needed locally are nurses, dietitians and a physiotherapist.

Less problems

Despite shortages in the above categories, however, there are still 2,241 persons unemployed in Belleville and district at the end of March, according to Mr. Hisser.

This represents a drop of 374 or 14 per cent, from the comparative date figure last year of 2,800.

The peak unemployment period during the past winter was in January while a year ago the peak period for unemployment was the end of March.

"The reason for this is that the employment picture has been a bit spotty, and our orders for work have been up," noted Mr. Hisser.

During the first three months this year, 1,232 work orders were received at the local office as compared with 700 in the same period last year.

The claim load at the Belleville office at the end of March was 2,335, while a year ago it was 3,981.

Construction laborers out of work at the end of the month totalled 125 at the same time there were 277 clerical workers out of a job, 118 steel workers and 218 jobless service workers.

Jobless transport workers numbered 175, carpenters out of work totalled 138 and 153 lumbering personnel were looking for work.

Locally the sanitary sewer installation program was said to have taken up considerable slack during the past winter.

Sewer contractors were said to be using local labor wherever possible, a fact which they were bringing in experienced help.

BISHOP H. R. HUSER

World Council Delegates Will Be Heard Here

With its theme, "Jesus Christ, the Light of the World," 275 delegates and 65 observers from every region of the world met last December at a conference in New Delhi for the Third Assembly of the World Council of Churches. Next Tuesday, April 10th, one of a series of post-Delhi meetings and services will be held in Belleville, sponsored by the Ministerial Association.

The Rt. Rev. H. R. Huser, Anglican Bishop of Toronto and Rev. Kenyin Brown, minister of Northminster-Park Baptist Church, Toronto, both of whom attended the 10 day sessions in New Delhi will give addresses here both afternoon and evening. Both ministers and church members will be welcome to hear the details of this history making event.

At the Conference, three reports were presented: (1) "Service," which showed an awareness of the effect of social changes on the life of the church and which gave strong emphasis to human and political rights; (2) "Witness," which indicated an increasing awareness of laymen in the church's program and (3) "Unity," which presented the most difficult because of the wide diversity of theological background encountered. It will be the topic under discussion at the 2.30 session led by Rev. Emlyn Davies, president of the Canadian Council of Churches and member of the Board of Governors of the CBC.

At the evening meeting Bishop Huser will give an illustrated address using Kodachrome slides. This evening meeting will be open to those unable to attend the afternoon session.

At New Delhi 22 new church bodies were accepted into membership, ranging from the hierarchical churches of Chile to the Russian Orthodox Church which claims from 30 to 40 million adherents. This gives a total membership in the World Council of Churches of 71 million making it an organization unique in its geography, ethnic and racial variety than the government of any nation. As a world organization it is second only to the United Nations.

The World Council of Churches is a fellowship of churches which confess the Lord Jesus Christ as God and Saviour according to the Holy Scriptures and therefore seek to fulfill together their common calling to the glory of one God, Father, Son and Holy Spirit.

The sessions here will be held in St. Thomas' Parish House, 55 Bridge Street East, from 2.30 to 5.30 and in the evening from 8.00 to 9.30. Supper will be served in Tabernacle United Church. Registration for the entire day, including supper, is $2.

Costly Articles Factors in Cancer Research

Unless Canada continues to press forward in the field of cancer research, we will lose ground as one of the most modestly progressive nations, Dr. Murray Dr. A. Cameron Wallace, director of the recently opened Cancer Research Laboratory at the University of Western Ontario, told the convention; but research is expensive.

The cost of equipping his staking and laboratory was illustrated this. The Ontario Division of the Canadian Cancer Society had made a grant of $600,000 to build and equip the new cancer research laboratory which adjoins the School of Nursing on the University campus. Of this $47,000 was to provide for special equipment such as ovens, refrigerators, fridges and sterilizers. Even before the official opening last November, however, $70,000 in addition made a further grant of $60,000 for the equipment.

This is how some of the $107,500 is being spent: three ovens cost $1,000 each; while there are hundreds of cages for mice and rats at $5.50 each; a high-speed centrifuge used to separate cells from their components cost $3,000; an autoclave for sterilizing cost $4,500; a hot air sterilizer and a tissue processor cost $700 each; and $1,000 for a binocular violet microscope, to be used for a special experimental project by Dr. Murray Kennard.

NEED RESEARCH

There were many dozens of vials, pipettes, beakers, flasks and other items of glassware were order costing about $10,000 and still all figure in experiments which will include investigation of a new antibiotic called Bleomycin, which drugs might interfere with nutrition of cancer cells and thereby and how cells become immune to disease, particularly cancer cells; some people have cancer cells in their blood without developing the disease in order.

The cost of building and equipping the laboratory", added Dr. Wallace, "is one reason why more is being spent on cancer research (now) and with without that research, Canada would end up a shorter time utterly medically. Unless a country is engaging in cancer research it will fall behind, eventually in the diagnosis and treatment of cancer.

Dr. Wallace noted that almost half of the $2,510,000 which the Canadian Cancer Society hopes to raise this year will be spent on cancer research.

"Some projects such as the extensive U.S. testing of thousands of chemicals for their value in cancer control against are very expensive", he said, "and we in Canada could not possibly undertake them. But this should not discourage us from many of the best work in many fields of science have come from small, independent workers away from the influences of the very large centres".

Dr. Wallace believes that "Cancer research has need of Canadians, and Canada needs cancer research".

Demorestville Frame House Razed by Fire

A family of seven was left homeless this afternoon when fire razed a frame home on the Demorestville Road. The house was occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Wes Juby and their five children. No one was home at the time.

The house was covered with siding and it is believed that this helped to control the flames from spreading to adjoining homes on the same side of the street.

Firemen from Picton, Bloomfield and Picton army camp, fought against a high wind to keep the fire confined to the Juby residence as a residential block was in danger being wiped out.

The house was filled with dense smoke when the fire was first discovered and smoke soon blanketed the whole village.

Home furnishings were a complete loss with the exception of a washing machine and two chairs, which a neighbor managed to drag from the front porch.

Cause of the fire is as yet unknown. Firemen remained at the scene for nearly two hours. Loss was estimated at approximately $8,000.

The Juby five children were at school when the fire broke out.

Water was pumped from a nearby creek in the village. Salvation Army members were on hand to serve coffee and doughnuts.

It is believed Mr. and Mrs. Juby and their family are staying with relatives in Demorestville.

Collector Discovers Treasure in Attics

Just ask Albert Stapley, Catarine Street carpenter who, over the years has, collected a pile of papers, books and other articles systematically stored by their owners — and then eventually forgotten.

For instance when the north wing of the old Hastings county courthouse was being wrecked last year, Mr. Stapley found old Canada Gazettes dating back well before the turn of the century.

And when old dwellings are being demolished, Mr. Stapley has come across a wide variety of more personal items which had finally been abandoned.

Infringements On Rights Subject of Talk

TRENTON—Belleville solicitor, Robert Temple, enlarging on the theme of an address delivered to members of the Trenton Lions Club last week, told members of the Trenton Kiwanis Club last night of recent infringements on their rights as individuals.

Mr. Temple said that recently, a Belleville electrician was laid off his job and began to collect his unemployment insurance benefits. As the job was forthcoming from the local employment office, he advertised for a job in the newspaper. Then he was cut off from his benefits, because the act of advertising, even though it had not netted him a job, had placed him in a self-employed category.

Speaking of Canada's immigration policy, Mr. Temple cited two recent cases where a non-resident mother had given birth to a baby while in Canada. In both cases, the baby was considered a Canadian citizen and not permitted to go with its mother when she was deported. Mr. Temple questioned the right of any government official to separate a mother from her child.

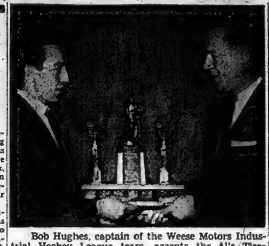
The speaker pointed out that there are 64 Canadian act up in Canada from which there is no right of appeal.Decisions handed down by the Ontario Municipal Board and the Provincial Licensing Board, for instance, are final.

Admitting that the law had come a long way from "trial by fire or boiling water," Mr. Temple urged his audience to examine each piece of new legislation and give some thought about how it would affect them or their neighbors.

Mr. Temple was introduced by the club members by Nick Fraser and thanked by Norm Davis.

In Belleville today, Mr. Cecil Hluser, manager of the Belleville Employment office, said he sent no particular knowledge of any particular case although he admitted the act advertising could make the man appear as a contractor and thus be self-employed.

He noted that under the Act a self employed person cannot draw unemployment benefits.



"It's a question of where to draw the line," he said.

"We try to avoid hardship and to use good judgment but the question of whether a man makes money by being self employed actually has no bearing on the case."

He said if there was any injustice in the particular case, his office would be happy to investigate and see what could be done.

'Hockey Greats' of District Recalled by Art Duncan At Presentation Banquet

TRENTON — Referring to the Trenton district as a "hot bed for good hockey players", Art Duncan, guest speaker at Wednesday night's Trenton and District Industrial Hockey League banquet told the players of Trenton's "hockey greats".

Benny Bowen, the late "Bud" Davis and Bobby Hull.

"Bud" Davis was the greatest centre in eastern Ontario at one time", said Mr. Duncan. "Benny Bowen was another hockey player Trenton can well be proud of. Last year was the first in 50 years that Benny didn't lace his skates on. As for Bobby Hull, I can recall telling his father I wouldn't let that 15-year-old boy on the ice to play hockey with a bunch of men. Bobby got on the ice that day somehow, and held his own. Imagine Art Duncan telling Bobby Hull he couldn't play hockey!"

Mr. Duncan said that his own hockey record had not gone unnoticed. He said that his name was on the Stanley Cup. Of course, the name actually belonged to another, without spelling the game", he said.

Looking about him at the assembled sportsmen, Mr. Duncan said that the young people of today are bigger, stronger, more intelligent — better taught and happier" than at any time in history, and that they would compare favorably in spite of adverse criticism from their elders.

Mr. Duncan presented the Courier-Advocate cup to Austin Scott of the 1961 team. CPR stood first in the year's regular scheduled games.

The Al's Tires trophy was presented to the Weese Motor team by Dick Dossett. Weese's won the playoffs, coming up from third place in the league.

Ed. Slaght, president of the league, named the rookie of the year, Joe Gallo, and the best defenceman, Jim Lamore.

Weese players, Bob Hughes, (captain), Jack Hughes, Kaye Hughes, Jack Casey, (goalie), Wayne Drake, Don Wilman, Pat White, Harvey Gervais, Don Cole, Doug Morrow, Dan Sullivan, Don Scott Howard Cole and John Wilman received individual trophies.

Harry Moore, the former editor of the Courier-Advocate, who donated the trophy won by the CPR team, died in Pembroke, Tuesday night.

Capt. Bowen Starts Season On Great Lakes

TRENTON — On Wednesday, Captain W. M. (Benny) Bowen, of Francis Street, in Trenton, went to Prescott to check out the new refreshment of the "Lecaltte Hall".

Captain Bowen's ship is the largest ship on the Great Lakes. She is named for the wife of the owner of the shipping line, the Hall Corporation of Canada.

Captain Bowen expects to sail on April 18. He will take a cargo to Montreal and then go up to the head of the Great Lakes for grain. Later in the season, the Lecaltte Hall will transport iron ore from Seven Islands to inland ports, as well as carrying out her grain hauling commitments.

Captain Bowen, who has held his master's papers for 20 years, has worked on ships for longer than he cares to remember.

He said that the ice in the upper lakes is very heavy now, but he hopes the new schedule can go into effect right after the 15th of the month.

Prof. D. Ralph Campbell, for ten years head of the department of agricultural economics at the Ontario Agricultural College, has resigned from the college faculty to accept a position with the Ford Foundation in the Near East. He will be working with the Jordon government for one year, assisting in the improvement of economic and agricultural conditions of that country. He will be leaving the college on July 1 to assume his new post. Prof. Campbell is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Campbell of Foxboro.

Time For Some Variety In Homes

Home is where the heart is, but in English-speaking parts of Canada too many people have taken it for granted that hearts come in one standard size.

In Trenton, they are squabbling about a proposal that multi-housing units, termed maisonettes, be erected in a district formerly zoned for single-family dwellings. We have no desire to take sides in this particular case, but we do suggest that the time is overdue when all Ontario communities, from the largest to the smallest, should offer a greater variety of living accommodations.

Today, from Toronto to the smallest hamlet, there is widespread acceptance of the idea that every family needs a home of its own, complete with kitchen, bedrooms, bath, living room, recreation room, garage, driveway, front lawn, back lawn, dishes to wash, clothes to wash, sidewalk to shovel, lawn to water, flowers to tend and, of course, bills to pay.

Not all of these facilities are necessities for every family and not all of the tasks and bills that come with them are unavoidable.

Our standard single-family dwelling units are ideal for those who like privacy and are prepared to pay a price for it, or those who enjoy decorating and gardening.

But there are some who do not find this their cup of tea. We should think that it is reasonable to suppose these misfits in today's single acceptable, ranch-style dwellings are more numerous than one would suppose if one were to judge by the availability of alternative accommodation. Even in Toronto, where apartment dwellers are more numerous, the sprawling suburbs must contain many who would be happier under different circumstances.

One reason why apartment dwelling is not as popular as it might be is because nobody has got around to insisting that these people ought to be provided with as much outdoor living space, if they desire it, as those who live in single-family dwellings. Many apartment dwellers like outdoor living just as much as do suburbanites. The difference is that the accommodations they seek are of another kind—parks in which to walk and playgrounds in which to romp instead of gardens in which to grow flowers and backyards in which to play.

There is no reason why apartments should necessarily involve a higher density of population. It would be quite feasible to insist that land developers deed to municipalities land areas proportionate to the number of dwelling units provided in apartments. Skyscraper-style apartment buildings would then be surrounded by spacious parks and playgrounds, which would be maintained by taxes, which would be paid by the occupants of the apartment buildings, who would obtain the money from the rent they collected from tenants.

There is no certainty that this would necessarily be a more expensive way of providing living space than our present system of every family having its own private living space, and maintaining it. This form of development would add quite a bit of variety to the facilities available for recreation—those who preferred to live in single family homes would also be able to avail themselves of these additional opportunities. The net result would be much more interesting cities, more pleasant to live with and more interesting people, living lives they found more interesting, since they would cater to people with a variety of tastes.

Variety is the spice of life.

Cause For Dismay

The Board of Broadcast Governors is annoyed.

It has ruled that 55 per cent of the programs on Canadian television stations must be of Canadian content.

Many stations are cramming this Canadian content into afternoon hours, reserving prime evening showing time for U.S. programs.

The Board, as we said, is annoyed. Annoyance is perhaps the right reaction insofar as true policy is the result of U.S. programs being preferred because of the advertising revenue which comes attached to the show. Insofar, however, as the U.S. programs are filmed shows with Canadian sponsors, dismay would be the more appropriate reaction. For if Canadian sponsors prefer U.S.-made shows, it can only be because they believed Canadian viewers prefer them. If Canadian viewers prefer them, it can only be because 1—the U.S. shows are better than the Canadian shows; or 2—Canadian viewers think they are. In view of the calibre of many of the U.S. "canned" shows, neither explanation is a compliment to Canadians.

Letter To The Editor

Supports Purchasing Robes for Mayor

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer.

Please print this letter in reply to the person who signed himself Disgusted Citizen.

First I would like to say that the Gaslight was not spending this to the hockey manager, as he stated. Secondly Mr. Denyer brought it to the club as an honor to our city and to many sportsminded people. He will be praised more than he will be blamed, and thirdly I believe Mr. Gallo has had happened too long ago to try to refresh people's minds. It is a subject that has been forgotten.

Then I would say that Mayor Haig is most efficient and that a decision has to be framed per the occasion and therefore should purchase a robe and even if they cost more than $150. Taxes are high, but so is everything else. Mine also get jacked each year. But can be not figure $150 divided among the 30,000 population how many pennies would he have to pay.

To keep a boy of 14 in Grade X high school well dressed costs nearly the $600 yearly and they also eat a small amount. It is something that I have to contend with.

About the debris in Belleville, a great deal of it could be done away with if contractors building homes could have a container to burn empty cement bags, paper, plaster that they use to protect winter projects, also empty coffee containers and cigarette boxes and I am speaking from experience for the contractor building a lovely home can throw everything in his yard.

I saw the wind had carried this over to my yard and I looked at it and I had only but two choice - first to leave it as it was and have my yard as filthy as his or, secondly to round up my children and clean it up. I chose the latter course. But this is a most continuous task.

Now in the United States they have a perfect cure for dead trees. They are later forced by the police to get on a highway and clean up a mile for every mile discarded on the stretch. Why doesn't someone in Belleville get after people who throw litter without consideration for others?

Also if in a time of a fire when everything looks rather dead. Take heart Disgusted—we shall soon have a lovely April rain and we will be into the beautiful month of May before your realize it.

Therefore, let's not take it out on the mayor. Bring him out to meet his guests in robes and chains for dinner.

Mrs. Thelma I. Guay,

Strength for the Day

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

UNDYING

Mercy is a blessing which comes into the life of the world directly from the heart of God Himself.

The natural tendency of man is to be vengeful. If someone injures us, our first impulse is to injure him in return. We will get even. People can't do this to me and get away with it. But God's way is entirely different. We humans, defiant little creatures who disobey the will of God, would really be getting our deserts if we experienced divine retaliation. But God acts from love and not with retaliation, but it would appear that He does this because such a course of action appears to be the only way we can be corrected and made better. God is not interested in getting even with us, or in punishing us for our sins.

The attitude of God's life is mercy. We deserve harsh treatment at His hands, but instead we receive loving treatment. Though waves and storms sweep over my head,
Though strength, and health, and friends be gone,
Though joys be withered all and dead,
Though every comfort be withdrawn,
On this my steadfast soul relies
Father, Thy mercy never dies!

Britain Has New Colony

Manchester Guardian

The United Kingdom has lost so many colonies in the last few decades that it is comforting to hear of a new one coming into being. Cold comfort, alas, for the colony consists of some British holdings in the Antarctic Continent, hitherto ranked as the dependencies of the Falkland Islands.

The new colony has a name, "The British Antarctic Territory—and a High Commissioner. Its boundaries are clearly defined. But as the population of all the territory is reckoned only as 1,300 in the summer, when reinforced for the whaling season, and 21 in winter, it is not a full self-government.

This little vote of something of a political problem. Already Britain is sometimes suspected at UN headquarters of having an eye feet in the race to end colonialism. Is this a new colony coming into being—and the only colony capable of 50. Will the Afro-Asian Bloc have a better say up? Will it expand to become an Afro-Asiatic-Asian bloc? The Antarctic was already showing notable progressive tendencies in its international treaty-nuance agreement; now, it will be the first land to be shared by the revival of colonialism.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

In the wayside restaurant in the table d'hote menu across the table from me suddenly slammed down the newspaper he was reading. His angry eye caught mine, and hesitantly apologized.

"Pardon me," he said. "I for-got where I was."

"Something irritate you?" enquired.

"Yes," said he, "I've just been reading about these kind people erring and robbing and generally acting like human beings. These items in this paper, alone, make it if it was normal news. But it has been so concurred to me that if a Hitler or a Mussolini or a Stalin were to rise up in this country, he could recruit half a million of these young hoodlums in less than a week. It's thirty years now since the formative days of those European fare-ups, fascist and Communist, that set the world on fire. That's long enough for our present governing generation to consist of those who never knew the symptoms of Mussolini and Hitler. And who did those murdering things in the early years? The Hitler Youth, and the Fascist Youth. The violent element among the irresponsible and impatient as well as the adolescent young generation. That's who!

"They could have had a million of them in some of a European town in one week. Right here in this country!"

Cruel, Stupid For Father to Force His Son

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

I fancy myself as being able to understand many different kinds of people, but the one I can't understand is that by the father who wants his son to follow a particular boat, invariably, this is the father's son, and not the dad's.

Of course, it is common for us to try to work out our frustrations through our children — the hideous "stage mother" is the most flagrant example — but there is so much solid evidence of the damage inflicted by this that I am always surprised when I hear of a father who "insists" that his son become this or that.

Some years ago, a study of maladjustment discharged from the U.S. Naval Academy at Annapolis showed that few had wanted to be there in the first place. They did it either as a reluctant means of raising family prestige, or because their fathers desired it.

Incidentally, a similar study showed that suicide attempts in the Naval Academy were more frequent among cadetses than draftees. Among the cadetses, presumably, are many young men who sign up for the "right" reasons. Those who are drafted are resigned to their involuntary fate; the cadetses, however, could not live with the decision they had made.

It seems to me the most cruel and stupid thing a father can do is to force his son, by threat or bribe, to embark upon a career he is not suited for or interested in, whether commercial or professional.

One reason the song of great or powerful or influential men often goes sour is that the dominating aspect of such fathers; being used to making decisions for others, they treat their sons like subordinates or employees, and do not see that helping them when they are little hurting them. Such men often gravitate to their mothers, with disastrous results to their sexuality in later life.

I have seen dozens of young bankers, lawyers and doctors who should not have been in these occupations at all; but their social status, their family background and, most of all, their father's position propelled them into jobs for which they had little aptitude. Most would have been happier and more productive as forest rangers, or fishing guides.

Our society is lacking in good technicians and craftsmen because of the snobbish attitude of many boys who are clever with their hands are diverted to white-collar work by parents who desire status, rather than satisfaction. Many of these would rather have my boys be plumbers than paper pushers or third-rate doctors. Lord Chesterfield, son became a bum precisely because his father was so hard to make him into a gentleman.

A 'Brain Wave Test' Is Harmless But Helpful

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: My son is five years old. On the average of twice a month he wakes up in the middle of the night. He rips quivering and arms and legs and cries. Sometimes he will talk in jungle fashion and I can't understand him. His eyes are open but when I pass my hand over them he doesn't blink and I think he can't see me.

In about 10 minutes the condition passes, and in the morning he doesn't seem to remember that it happened.

Our pediatrician suggested that I have a brain wave test given. I hesitate about having it done. I would appreciate your ideas. — E.B.

This problem has some of the trademarks of a convulsive disorder, but of what type — if, indeed, that is what it proves to be? We need further evidence.

A decade or two ago, we would have done what we could, making the best analysis possible from the history, and then trying this or that medication, hoping that it would help and devoutly wishing that we had some more scientific basis on which to proceed.

But today we have the "brain wave test" or electroencephalogram that gives us some concrete, data indicating whether or not there is a convulsive disorder. Or it's rule, that it might help and not to look elsewhere for the trouble — perhaps overly severe nightmares, or some emotional upset or physical disturbance. Perhaps it is a digestive disorder as low blood sugar or low calcium may be present.

Dr. Robin has probably been reading some of the studies on the brain wave test, which, in objectivity, surpass the kind of press release issued by the government of the United States and Canada.

Hysterical fear of what a large number are now available, often irks for their standard police. Such fear is revived in official declarations that, in the event of nuclear attack, it will only be necessary to spend two weeks in a shelter.

This two-week period has never taken into account the possibility that an attack might be spread over a period of several weeks. The fortnight estimate is based on the government's assumption that 'a nuclear attack involves the dropping of bombs only.

Dr. Maurice Visscher, head of the University of Minnesota's department of physiology, remarks that, after a "real nuclear war" it would be necessary to stay in a shelter for a month or two. Stocks of fall-out are to be avoided.

TODAY'S TALK

SPRING

The year would be like a book of blank leaves even though that book had its attractive title, were it to be robbed of its spring.

Something like human life without its youth.

Then April mornings are when one stands by one's window and watches the return from their fourth home of the birds, finding literally their own nests and very air. And this beauty seems to fill them and to be, during the little strangers as they shed their tight faces to the air praying for the warmth of the spring sun.

Within few weeks the dogwood will flower and the peach and cherry trees will don their bridal gowns. And the elm, the wood where the little stream runs, the hills alive with sage of white. Blue and pink will poke their faces into the world after their long winter's sleep.

The familiar butter-cup, the dandelion, the wild violets, jack-in-the-pulpits, and other old time friends will gather for their grand opening.

Spring is almost here — its bloom and glory. Hardly before we are aware, the gorgeous green tresses of the maple, the elm, the oak, the ash, the spring, the willow and others will spread their arms above a new and fresh green earth. And the air will be filled with fragrant with the odors of spring and all is vibrant hope and health.

What a poor, sad soul is that one who is unable to thrill and glost over the first signs of spring and to fairly dance at the birth of the full-fledged spring.

Spring is always beautiful — in the same way that birth is beautiful, whether it be that of a flower, a blade of grass, a little kitten, or a human being.

Hoig and William Townsend, chairman of the Belleville public school board will be a panel discussion on trustee problems. The panel will include Inspector J. M. Cousins as chairman, with Inspectors C. E. McMullen, H. L. Knight, G. H. Waldron, R. A. Dunsmore and H. E. Langford.

New Sailboats To Be Bought With Revenue

As a part of their program to raise funds to provide new sailboats for their junior sailing program the members of the Bay of Quinte Yacht Club will be sponsoring the first lecture "The Trade Winds Call", by Lt.-Commander Jack Braidwood.

The color motion picture film was taken by Lt.-Commander Braidwood during a "round-the-world cruise aboard the 100-foot ketch "Vanice." Places as the Galapagos Islands, Easter Island, Pitcairn, Tahiti, Bali and Malekula are the more familiar ports of call which the film will show this evening. Lt.-Commander Braidwood will also relate a number of interesting adventures and experiences.

The presentation of this interesting program will be held at the BCIVS auditorium on April 29th.

This is one of the first fund-raising projects of the club, the proceeds of which will be used solely for the junior sailing program which has grown in popularity amongst the youth of the community over the past several years. Club Commodore Ernie Colebourne advised.

This increased interest by students between the ages of 10 and 16 has, likewise, required the purchase of new boats. The original units were acquired second-hand and have seen much use over the past several seasons and now require replacement, he said.

Any parents interested in taking part in the junior sailing program this summer may obtain full information by writing the yacht club at post office box 362, Belleville.

Philip Rebuffs BBC, Will Talk On Private TV

LONDON (AP) — Prince Philip has been banned from South America after refusing to report on his two-month goodwill tour for the BBC.

An April 19 television date for the prince was announced Thursday but before the congress of a commercial TV company.

Later, it transpired the prince had also been invited to give a televised account of his experiences by the BBC.

The prince has made all four of his previous TV appearances on its network.

But he loaded the run after receiving an invitation from the commercial company, Independent Television (ITV).

A Buckingham Palace spokesman explained:

"He accepted because the ITV network is as national as the BBC's and he sees no reason why he should only appear on the BBC."

The prince has made one condition. No advertisements will be shown during his program, nor at the two minutes before and after.

Mary Keeps Gold-Plated Bed, Socialist Hubby's Face Is Red

LONDON (AP) — The wife of Ghana's minister of industry blithely clung to her $8,400 gold-plated bed today despite her socialist husband's command to send it back to the store.

"It's still here," Mrs. Mary Edusei said in an interview at her apartment. "I'm not the type force Mary to do what she not want to do. You can take horse to water, but you can't make him drink."

Mrs. Edusei has been living in London for the last year. Her husband Krobo Alcheamed Edusei—never because he is supposed to be tough—stayed on the job in Ghana.

When word of the princely purchase reached Ghana, Krobo telegraphed his wife to return her purchase to Selridge's department store. He said that sort of capitalist extravagance was a gross violation of the socialist principles he and Ghana President Kwame Nkrumah profess.

"He was talk much," said Mrs. Edusei of her spouse. "Sometime he talks 15, 20 hours no stopping, no asking you water for his throat.

"I know I cause sensation. I do not care. I am happy woman. Let them all talk."

Why does she want the bed?

"Mary want it because no one else ever had one. Mary is the best, we will take it back. But she has never offically asked us to come and get it."

The office of Ghana's high commissioner in London refused to be drawn into the controversy. It said it was a private affair between the Edusels.

that they never obtain pension rights.

Mr. Roberts noted that Prime Minister Diefenbaker said in January he plans to put financial matters for a constitutional amendment that would allow calculating of a federal-country-wide contributory pension plan related to wages.

He said however that Ontario has already indicated it has no objection to the constitutional amendment.

Under first draft, the second bill sets low minimum standards for pension plans but would be compulsory for every employer and employee in Canada where more than 15 persons work.

It would come into effect in January, 1967, as a step in broadening space for industry to develop. Mr. Roberts said Mr. Roberts, private pensions schemes already in operation would be encouraged to come down in the bill.

The main difference between the second and first bills, the premier said, is in the provision for portability which exceed the provincial standard.

Mandatory provisions governing the vesting of pension benefits in the employee and cash withdrawals generally are made to apply only to the minimum benefits under the second draft bill.

Barn and Boat Lost in Fire At Picton

Fire caused heavy loss in the Picton area Thursday night when it completely destroyed a large barn owned by Mrs. Andrew Welbanks, of Queen Street.

It is believed the fire started from a grass fire as the Picton fire department answered the grass-fire alarms in the vicinity.

The barn was situated in a field and away from other buildings in the area. It contained a large quantity of hay and a boat and motor owned by Albert Jamieson, valued at approximately $4000.

The fire was visible for some distance as flames lit the sky like a huge torch. Nearby people watched the barn fall in a glow of red cinders.

The loss, including Mr. Jamieson's boat and motor was estimated at approximately $8,000.

PRIME MINISTER

vention, has been stalemated and frustrated in the Commons by organized opposition debate on supplementary votes for last year's appropriations.

The opposition had spent 19 days on this rehashing of old spending authority this session, and Mr. Diefenbaker compared it to 15 days spent on the same kind of supplementary estimates in the last five years of the former Liberal government; when the Conservatives were in opposition.

"The machinery of government has been held up," he said. "Not even one cannot get ahead with our legislation because the government is deliberately not too long delayed."

He asked voters to study the government's record and implement promises made and carried out.

Others were being carried out "and would have been car, ried out by now if it were not for the opposition that holds up estimates to the end that the legislation cannot be carried through."

Mr. Diefenbaker, spoke for over an hour in the hot, packed Belleville auditorium where he kicked off his 1957 election campaign five years before to the day. The 1957 engagement was made four months ago by Hastings-Frontenac MP for Middlesex West, who was renominated Conservative candidate.

SEES FAST PACE

It was an 18-hour day of rushed, intensive campaigning.

Diefenbaker drove down the 150 miles, taking in five district high schools, at each of which he made an off-the-cuff speech on different subjects.

The Senate reform measure which is to appear on the Commons order paper today calls for the retirement of senators at age 75, on non-contributory pensions of a so-far undisclosed amount. This, he said, is in line with the retirement of judges, and should be a "first step" towards strengthening the Senate as a parliamentary institution.

Liberals Punch Holes in Govt. Tax Statistics

TORONTO (CP)—A Liberal proposal to alter the base of retail sales tax exemptions called on the floor of a legislature committee Thursday, but not before the details had exercised in punching holes in the government's handling.

The standing committee on public accounts split along party lines on a vote of 11 to 9 against legislative voting not to send the Liberal bill back to the legislature for further study, against six Liberals who wanted it carried.

The bill, introduced in committee as a minor war of statistics and would have exempted from all items costing less than $25 from the three-per-cent provincial sales tax.

The Liberals contended the exemption would mean revenue to the province of less than $112,000,000 a year, compared with the government's present estimate of $162,000,000 in revenue from the last of its stands.

Government spokesmen first said the Liberal proposals would mean revenue of only about $50,000,000. They did not explain, however, under questioning.

P. T. Clark, provincial comptroller of revenue, presented figures disclaiming the Liberal proposals.

Million Copies of RCAF Physical Fitness Booklet May Be Printed for U.S. Use

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian membership in the Universal Copyright Convention may rule out a contract for some private Canadian printing firms to produce the United States Air Force with 1,000,000 copies of an RCAF physical fitness booklet.

A government source said he politicians may under way between Queen's Printer Roger Duhamel and the U.S. Air Force to enable large-scale export to the U.S. of Canadian-printed copies of the RCAF's 68-page XBX physical fitness programs for men and women, respectively.

U.S. air chiefs are planning to distribute the RCAF fitness program to every member of the U.S. Air Force and their families.

The booklet was first published by the RCAF's recreational branch in 1956 for service use. In the past, several foreign air forces, including the U.S., had been permitted to reprint a limited number for their own personnel without charge by Canada.

Success of the negotiations is believed to hinge on final parliamentary approval of a Canadian membership in the copyright agreement. The proposed Canadian Copyright Act have been given Senate approvement and now await similar approval from the Commons.

The international agreement would protect the copyright of Canadian books with a country in the United States. At present the U.S. gives copyright protection to Canadian-printed books up to a maximum of 1,500 copies.

If the negotiations are successful, it is understood a private Canadian printer would get the printing contract.

DEAL MADE

Meanwhile, the Queen's Printer—the Crown-owning corporation that prints government publications—has made a bonanza deal with mass-circulation American newspaper publishing syndicate giving it reprint rights of the RCAF booklet at a flat royalty fee.

The booklets, which sold separately in Canada for 35 cents each, now are being marketed by United Newspapers Magazine Corporation of New York in a combined paperback edition for $1 U.S. and deluxe plastic-bound edition for $2 U.S.

Some 156,000 copies were reported to have been sold in the first two weeks, with total sales assured of between 500,000 and 1,000,000 copies. Royalties, estimated at 10¢ cents per copy for the two booklets totalled 500,000.

Until newspapers, which distributes a weekend supplement to U.S. dailies with a combined circulation of 14,100,000, has agreed to pay the Queen's Printer a royalty of 12 cents for each of the first 100,000 copies sold, 10¢ cents each for the next 100,000. It is believed one of the highest royalty fees ever paid by a U.S. publisher for reprint rights to a foreign book.

The Queen's Printer is also negotiating with publishers in Britain, Australia, South Africa, Orlando to give the booklet world-wide distribution.

must be supreme," he said.

The crisis would result in the virtual shutdown of 14,000 factories which employ 800,000 and would disrupt domestic life and place human life in jeopardy."

NDP Leader Donald MacDonald rose to say his government was unfairly changing the rules at the 11th hour to deprive employees of their right to strike.

Liberal Leader Wintermeyer claimed the premier should have met both sides "long before yesterday" when he first tried to mediate the dispute. He should have known at any time during the six months of unionmanagement negotiations that the government would never permit a strike.

Elmer Sopha (L — Sudbury) said earlier government action would have saved us this day of shame."

Energy Resources Minister Macaulay had the last word:

"If the bill had to be dragged at all, then it had to be dragged the 11th hour and 59th minute," he said. Otherwise it would have constituted government interference.

The bill was passed at 8:30 p.m. but the debate raged on in the corridors.

DOUBTS VALUE

Keeley Cummings, the union president, said in an interview he doubted if an arbitrator could be effective in resolving the issues because so many facts are in dispute.

The main section of the bill was supported by Claude Jodoin, president of the Canadian Labor Congress.

In a statement issued from a meeting of the CLC's top council in Vancouver, he said the bill "was a complete negation of the principle of collective bargaining."

Mr. Jodoin said compulsory arbitration has time and again been proved ineffective.

The national conference of the CLC will take up the matter next week, but discussion will by law be confined to the principles involved. The bill provides fines ranging from $10 to $1,000 a day for anyone advocating a strike—as participating in a lockout.

The spotlight now shifts to Mr. Goldenberg, the Montreal lawyer both parties have welcomed as arbitrator.

Two weeks ago Mr. Goldenberg won wide acclaim for his report on the Ontario construction industry.

He is expected to arrive in Toronto today and hopes to arrange preliminary talks early next week.

Union officials say they expect it may be several weeks before formal arbitration proceedings start because they expect to prepare a new submission for Mr. Goldenberg.

NAPANEE — Howard Weese a farmer in Darlington Twp., has been selected as standard bearer of the New Democratic Party in the Prince Edward-Lennox by-election.

Mr. Weese was nominated at the NDP meeting at the Centennial Building here Thursday night, attended by about 50 people.

The candidate accused the Liberal party of drafting policies behind locked doors and said the Conservative administration is inefficient and lacks proper organization.

He said if the present type of government continues, "We are going to hand our children a country so far in debt that they will never be able to mend the hat burden".

Guest speaker for the evening was Walter Pitman, NDP member of parliament for Parkdale.

Mr. Pitman charged that both the Conservative and Liberal parties lack defence policies. "I'm still trying to find out what they are," he said. We know what the Conservative policy is . . . nothing."

Mr. Pitman's comments on divorce bills brought an indignant comment from Senator Arthur Roebuck, Liberal Senate chairman of the Senate committee which acts as a steering body up and abused for ulterior purposes."

Senator Roebuck said it was equally outrageous for the government to let two CCF members "abuse the rules, and process of Parliament" in blocked. Senator Roebuck said in an interview outside the parliamentary chambers.

Unveil Model of 3-Man Ship To Carry Yanks to Moon

DOWNEY, Calif. (AP) — A three - man moonship designed to keep crew members alive two weeks in "shirtsleeve atmosphere" will carry U.S. explorers to land on the moon by 1970.

A 13-foot-tall wooden mockup of the command capsule for the Apollo spacecraft was unveiled Thursday at the space and information systems division of North American Aviation, where it was built.

The cone - shaped compartment is filled with drawers, instruments and gadgets. An instrument panel covering an entire side of the capsule is above the crew as they recline in special seats during liftoff.

The craft will be commanded by the pilot. Others aboard will be the co-pilot and an engineer-scientist. Each can perform all functions.

"The capsule is built to use man as an integral part of the design," engineer J. W. Small of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration said.

MAN OVER MACHINE

"The judgment of the crew is a major factor. We feel man's judgment is the key to performance on machines in many instances."

Details of the Apollo program for manned exploration of the moon were disclosed Wednesday but this was the first showing of the capsule — one of three units of Apollo.

Apollo's manned orbital flights around the earth are tentatively expected from 1964 on, with a manned flight around the moon in late 1967.

The first manned landing on the moon by the United States is scheduled for late 1969.

High enough in the middle for a man to stand erect, the 4,000-pound capsule has three windows and two periscopes. An inner or pressure compartment enables the crew to get outside in space, to transfer to another spacecraft or to walk around on the moon.

Except for periods of acceleration or leaving the capsule, pressure suits will be unnecessary, although one man probably will always have one on.

The space ship is expected to take about 2½ days each way to and from the moon, with a 24-hour layover for exploration of the surface.

Pr. Wales H-S Hears Address On Public Talk

The regular monthly meeting of Prince of Wales Home and School Association was held April 2.

A devotional was led by Mrs. W. A. McElquham. Reports were presented by Mrs. F. M. Teed, convener of the "Fun Fair" and Mrs. Gordon Parkhurst, treasurer.

Room counts were taken, resulting in the attendance flag going to Mrs. Crose's room and Mrs. Slack's for the second time. Mrs. Harrington's room won for the second.

The guest speaker, Mrs. Margaret Bakey, assistant chief operator for the Bell Telephone Company, she was introduced by Mrs. Moyer.

"Her Voice was The Man on My Line," an illustrated talk about bell—telephone talk.

She said, in part, "your voice is you. The person you talk to on the telephone has to figure out the kind of person you are, the mood you are in, if you're hesitating and how you look."

With posters and recorded voices to go with the faces on the posters, they were quite amusing to feel as the "typical. Some of the characters were: Miss Brill, Miss Affected, Miss Operator, Mr. Monotony, Mr. Fumbles, Mr. Curt, Mr. Loud, Shouting Tim, and Mr. Telewolf.

She added that the sound of your voice is important, along with other good telephone habits, such as answering promptly, identify yourself, talk in a pleasant politely, avoid delays, and hang up gently.

Several couples talked on telephones, and found out what they could see, how their voices sound when recorded. The talk and illustrations were much enjoyed.

Mrs. Baker was thanked by Mr. Emerson.

Mrs. Murray Bennett won a beautiful cake as door prize.

Refreshments and a social time were enjoyed after the meeting closed.

ST. ANDREW'S GUILD W.M.S.

FOXBORO — The April meeting of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church Guild and W.M.S. was held at the home of Mrs. Harold Bustard with a good number in attendance.

The Easter service of worship was used, as prepared by Miss Shirley Scott. In the service of the president, Mrs. Bushard opened the meeting with the theme "Who shall roll us away the stone from the door of the sepulchre". Reports of the various committees were given. Thankyou notes were read and hospital and sick calls were planned. Business was discussed pertaining to catering at Scott's Sales Barns.

During the program several readings were given and Mrs. Bushard favored with a vocal solo, "How Great Thou Art".

Next meeting is to be at the home of Mrs. Judge.

Mrs. Bustard served a delicious lunch and a social half hour followed.

Holloway U.C.W. Holds Easter Meeting

The Easter general meeting of the Holloway Street United Church Women was held in the church parlors on Monday evening. There was a good attendance and units, under the leadership of Mrs. L. Knight and Mrs. J. McCorquodale, were in charge.

The president; Mrs. C. Holmes, welcomed all, asking that at Easter the thoughts turn to the Resurrection, and to remember that women were the last to leave the cross and the first to come to the tomb. Easter is a time to meditate and to start living life at its best.

The devotional period was led by Mrs. Knight, bringing an Easter message. Mrs. A. Lucas read the Scripture, taken from Matthew 26:17-30 and Mrs. McCorquodale gave the meditation, saying in part: "No single event in all the history of mankind has so influenced human life as the birth of Christ. Then the Resurrection and the hour of His death. Three days later a group of His followers went to the tomb and found the great rock rolled away — the tomb was empty. An angel said unto them, 'Fear not, He is risen,' and the good news spread rapidly. There is still some doubted, but to dispel all doubts, Jesus agreed to meet his friends and followers in secret and there told them, 'Go ye, and teach all nations'. 'And, lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world.'"

At Easter there is an awakening of life everywhere. A short dark hour came during the Crucifixion, but there was no spiritual blackout, and so, Easter should remain a day of joy and cheer remembering that the light of the world cannot be blocked out and is the symbol of eternal life.

An Easter story, "I, Simon of Cyrene," was read by Mrs. Bill Sills, telling the story of Simon, the man who helped carry the cross to Golgotha, and how Simon, being drawn to help by some strange power, later realized that the love of Christ was free, and had felt the power of forgiveness and friendship.

Mrs. F. A. Downes rendered a beautiful solo, "Magdalene," a story in song of Mary, who stood alone at the tomb, weeping. Mrs. E. Hubbs accompanied her at the piano.

The offering was received by Mrs. L. Alyea and Mrs. J. Canning.

After the business period and the reports from the various committees, tea was served and a social hour spent.

Mrs. J. Beach introduced Mrs. Greer of Trenton, vice-president of the Trenton unit of the Cancer Society who showed colored movie pictures.

A questionnaire followed with Mrs. Greer covered wagons decked with floral wreaths; the sidewalk cafes were well patronized.

OTHER CITIES

Among other cities shows was Toledo, south of Madrid, with its wonderful antiquities. The part of the city is marked by narrow streets and the Jewish quarter, still reminiscent of the castles of Spain were antique and picturesque, situated in the mountains, giving rise to the saying "Castles in the Air." This city remained a stronghold of Roman regime, with its basic language being Latin, and a long drive to Madrid over 4,000 years old.

Going out into the country places, old-time threshing is still done by means of a sort of sled to portray the story of the bliss, which crush the grain from the straw. Here were stone walls, and the countryside was vines and red lily-like flowers, and the castles were of Moorish design. It was here that Columbus returned from his second voyage.

Here, too, were beautiful statues, and little street library stalls, and a fiesta parade.

At Granada, backed by snow-capped mountains, lovely gardens were shown with beautiful shimmering fountains, old harems, a cherry harvest, the Alhambra Alcove with distant fountain and the Cypsies' dance.

FISHING VILLAGES

Following the intermission, Mr. Robinson took the audience to the north coast of Portugal where were many attractive fishing villages. Here the last country of the Basques and the beautiful beaches. The Basque have a language all their own, not like any other. Their idea of beauty is the physical strength shown by lifting rock pillars weighing 200 pounds as many times as possible over the head and laying it down. Log-rolling was also shown. Their dress is the same almost as before in style and color. At Barcelona shipping scenes were interesting, with the Cypsy under the mass of gorgeous color and at Madrid the perfume makers display their art.

A most interesting picture was that of the Cypsy underground homes, many were equipped with gas, water, sewer, cold, and electricity. In Spain there is a shortage of housing establishing the three-room apartment rents for approximately $15. The Spanish parent dearly loves his children, letting them have much of their own way.

BULL RING

A picture that was thrilling was the bull ring where the young bulls were let out into the crowded ring going after first one then another, without actually getting anyone. Their horns are padded to save from injuring any one. It appeared to be fun to those who were being chased, but one of frustration to the little bull.

All in all, a most interesting and educational film, superbly colored and photographed.

SARAH CHURCHILL TO WED — Sarah Churchill, actress daughter of Sir Winston Churchill, former British prime minister, poses with her fiance, Baron Audley, at his home in Mayfair in London.

K. Robinson's 'Story of Spain' Climax of Travelogue Season

"Spain is a dynamic country of sharp contrasts, the old and the new, side by side," said Karl Robinson last evening as he commenced on the beautiful of his interesting topography of his showing of "The Story of Spain" at the Collegiate.

Mr. Robinson, who was introduced by Mr. W. A. Mills, secretary of the Kiwanis Club, is one of the most experienced men in the travelogue field, and has produced approximately 14 films. His trade-mark is the expert manner in which he portrays the people of a country," and feels that when the peoples of other countries know they will be as neighbors, thus making for peace among the inhabitants of the earth.

Spain is noted for its culture, and the great influence on the western hemisphere. It is most accessible due to plane flight; one may leave breakfast in New York and dine in Portugal in the space of a few hours.

GREAT METROPOLIS

Beginning with its capital, Madrid, which is a great metropolis, once the stronghold of the Moors, and rich in history, one views the tallest building in all Europe; the memorial to its kings and the royal palace; the Valley of the Fallen, and the museum of fine arts and beautiful picnic-ing. Here, too, the factory where tapestry is woven is beautiful across the street, paintings, the work being done from the reverse side. When this work is done, it is a perfect reproduction of the original painting.

Other scenes depicted the replica of Columbus' ship, the "Santa Maria's" beautiful flowers in gorgeous colors, and an appetizing scene of the street, restaurant where tender suckling piglets are roasted to perfection, tenderness and enjoyed by the patrons. A curious custom is the closing of the shops from one till five during the afternoons and opening again for the evening customers.

BEAUTIFUL CLOCKS

The home of the "Clocks" was also shown; beautiful examples of precision handicraft, done in rich mahogany and intersiad with mother-of-pearl and gold and silver wires in intricate original design. The clocks was one of a lovely piece of furniture with a sliding panel, which at the hour, would roll up displaying a ball, let in full act, followed by figures in procession; others included the 'horse clock, with moving eyes and opening mouth; and one of a Venetian shaped vase, all of which were perfect time keepers.

The jewellery stores displayed their jewels in single cabinets which does much to enhance the artistic shown, and among these was a necklace of turquoises from the Persian Court.

The promenade was most colorful with the covered wagons decked with floral wreaths; the sidewalk cafes were well patronized.

OTHER CITIES

Among other cities shows was Toledo, south of Madrid, with

Victoria Baptist Dorcas Assoc. Holds Open Night

There was a good attendance at the meeting of the Dorcas Association's "Open Night," at Victoria Ave. Baptist Church.

President, Mrs. G. Campbell, called the meeting to order with the singing of a hymn, this was followed by the opening prayer.

The president expressed a welcome to all, and said she hoped all present had seen that they had come. The Association was favored with a duet, "Joel Knox on Profession," by Mrs. A. Reilly and Miss Mary Haley, with Mrs. F. Hilchon at the piano.

The devotional was taken by Mrs. J. Payne and Miss Flora Hales and was based on the Easter message in keeping with the Easter season, "Where Is There a Better Story Than the Crucifixion?". Marker Billy Hales favored with two selections on his accordion. Billy has been taking lessons and all are proud of his ability with this instrument.

The Rev. Gordon Woodcock introduced the guest speaker, Mr. S. Alec Gordon who had come to show a film on his recent trip to Western Canada.

Before showing the film, Mr. Gordon gave a autobiography talk on his life history in this city.

Mr. Gordon's film covered the trip from Belleville to Vancouver, B.C. and then on to Alaska. The pictures were interesting, educational and beautifully most colorful.

At the conclusion of the film, Mr. Gordon said, "When I first see this kind of beauty all around us in our native land, we can't help but say, "Oh Canada we glorify thee!"

Thanks were given Mr. Campbell, thanked Mr. Gordon for coming and expressed her appreciation for the film he had shown and to all those who had helped to make the evening such a delightful one. Mr. Woodcock closed the meeting with prayer.

Oratorical Winners Give Prize Speeches

CAMPBELLFORD — The first, second and third place winners of the annual oratorical contest of Campbellford Public School, gave their award winning speeches at the regular meeting of the Rotary Club on Monday noon.

John Dafoe, who placed third in the contest, spoke first concerning "Space Missionary." He said that, whereas on earth, space is measured by miles, distance in space is too great for such a yardstick. The unit of measurement is the light year, which is the distance light would travel (at 186,000 miles a second) in one year. Roughly speaking a light year is six trillion miles. The nearest star is four and one half light years away; some stars being as many as 400 light years distant. In other words, light leaving some stars now will be visible in the year 2363.

SPACE RESEARCH

Brian Symonds, second place winner, talked on "Space Research." He said that one of the benefits which will accrue from present day space research. He said "there are no germs in space, no noise, and everything is in perfect order." A hospital would be absolutely sterile, light leaving some stars now will be visible in the year 2363.

Space research has created new materials and it is considered that some day we may de-salt the ocean, giving unlimited water to the earth — a scarcity which may someday overtake us".

SPACE TRAVEL

Sylvia Normington, first place winner, spoke on "Interplanetary Travel — A Space race?" She claimed that TV and the U.S.S.R. are the main factors in the rapid advancement of space research. She said education affects utilized in the school, and a space race is on between many ways. It gives one insight into science, the universe, the world and weather forecasts and enables one to better understand. Interplanetary travel cannot possibly meet personal needs, but "Cosmic" and "Comedy" productions have a useful purpose in this world of "Sputniks" and "Explorers".

The speakers were introduced by Mr. Campbell Rothwell and thanked by Norman Orr.

PROTEST DUMPING

LONDON (Reuters) — Both Labor and Conservative members of Parliament protested Thursday to Prime Minister Macmillan at a decision by Britain's milk marketing board to pour a 250,000 gallons of surplus skimmed milk daily into coal mines. They contended in the House of Commons the skimmed milk should be processed and given to needy people overseas.

U.C.W. Meetings

TAKERMACKLE U.C.W.

Takermacke United Church Women met on Tuesday night in the Church auditorium. Mrs. Garnet May, first vice-president, chaired the meeting due to the absence of the president, Mrs. Lewis Andrews. Mrs. May opened the meeting with prayer and welcomed all members and visitors. The secretary, Mrs. Ted Fenwick called the roll by units and reviewed the proceedings of the previous meeting last month. The treasurer, Mrs. Frank Davidson, gave the financial statement and her motion that $300 be sent to the U.C.W. Presbyterial treasurer and $900 be handed to the Committee of Stewards toward the operation of the local church was unanimously carried.

163 MEMBERS

The following announcements were made: There are 163 members to date in Thomasville U.C.W. Mrs. Percy Kerr has accepted the responsibilities of social convener. July 9th will be the day to visit at the County Home. The regional meeting will be held in Meaford on May 28th.

A most interesting budget, which the organization accepted, was presented by Mrs. Norman of Sicanous, Mrs. W. B. Sexsmith, Mrs. H. C. Bexley, correspondence secretary, acknowledgements of flowers sympathy cards sent during the month.

DEVOTIONAL

Following the business, an Easter devotional was conducted by Unit 1. Mrs. Ray Lockyer, Mrs. Gerald Gorsline, Mrs. Ed Schlievert, Mrs. J. T. Nunn and Mrs. Gordon Hulme, reminding that generousness giving is God's own nature. The gift of God to man was the Savior of the World, proves this. "We become more generous and rich in the measure as we ponder His goodness and outgoing love, and as we give thanks with sincerity".

The parable of the flower described by Mrs. Gerald Gorsline, Mrs. Gerald Gorsline, Mrs. Percy Kerr and Miss Myrtle Johns (a wife, a nurse, a mother and a leper woman) called all women to sanctifying love of God.

"As the sower must sow, so must the giver give. This is not the 'must' of cold duty; but the welcome compulsion a grateful heart of God and a believer's heart and conscience".

The offering was received by Miss Thelma Gilbert, Mrs. Frank Farnell, Mrs. Forbes Hulme and Mrs. Frank Davidson and was dedicated by Mrs. Ray Lockyer.

HONEY BEE GUIDES

"The presentation of two short scenes, one of biblical days, the other of modern times, showed how costly the giving might be. "A Love To Bless All Nations" by members of Unit Y in costume, Mrs. Ronald Manley as Mrs. George Stanton as Milcah and Mrs. John Irvine as Isaac, was based on Abraham's obedience to God — offering his son Isaac — and God's promise All the Nations of the Earth would be Blessed. Among Abraham's descendents were the law givers, the great psalmists and the great prophets who have blessed mankind, but above all Jesus Christ Himself, the Savior of the World, was born of the family of Abraham.

WINNERS OF LIFE

The next scene was based on the challenging words of Jesus "He who loses his life for My sake will find it". Two women, Stella and Marie (Mrs. Earl Grills and Mrs. Morley Graham) are chatting about their son and daughter who are Missionaries in Africa. Stella finds she and her daughter are almost strangers until she (Stella) will accept and share in her daughter's new life and calling — "He that loses his life — shall find it". Mrs. Frank Shane acted as narrator for both scenes.

After the meeting the assembly moved into the parlor and Unit 4 served tea and cookies.

Talks on Re-organization Of Secondary Schools' Curriculum Given at BCIVS

These delegates from Ontario Conference on Education were the guests at B.C.I.V.S. Home and School Association Monday.

The conference brought together people from business; industry; laymen; teachers; principles; unions and the professions, to look at the question and try to bring about equality of educational opportunities for all.

Each of the delegates attended different sessions and it was their purpose to bring some of the highlights of the sessions to this interested audience.

The speakers were introduced by Mr. A. W. Wynne, president of the Home and School Association, and the appreciation of these present was extended by Mr. H. E. Kern, who also brought greetings from Quinte Home and School Association of which he is president.

Mr. L. Reid, principal of Quinte Secondary School, introduced the session on re-organization of Secondary Schools curriculum, and with his well organized in Belleville high school days, Mr. Reid, 1962.

Through self - explanatory charts he pointed out the weaknesses of educational system in Ontario. In this plan there will be both a five-year program and a four-year course, and also there will be a two-year program for students promoted from grade 8 plus a one-year plan for pupils not promoted from grade 8 but who are 15 years or over.

THREE COURSES

The five-year plan offers a choice of three courses depending on pupils desires and would ultimately lead to a University course.

The four-year plan also has choice of three courses not necessarily the same year would it be if a weekend down course but this course will equip a student to seek gainful employment upon graduation.

The second speaker, Mr. W. J. Musgrave, principal of Moira Secondary School had attended sessions of technical education group. It was felt by the group discussions that a good all round basic education with an workable background to ensure a student the opportunity to keep abreast of the times and changes bound to come in the future.

The technical program must provide training for the entire spectrum of all the leading industrial research and related subjects.

In the "Home Economics" course it was felt there should be more emphasis on this part of the program and that there has a change of the courses name would be suitable.

The speaker related how it is essential that a student enter-ing Secondary School have guidance to help him decide and that not only guidance from the school but from the parents and this is why parents need to know something of what the courses are about that are offered to the students in the Belleville area.

In technical education it is essential that guidance personnel and industry and industry establish a close liaison, and that an expansion of the guidance program must be forthcoming to insure a student all opportunity to fit himself for the future.

In the group discussing "Dropouts", they felt not all those who do not finish school should be called "dropouts" but with this statement they tried to define the meaning of a Dropout. "Those who leave school before his potential is reached."

Mr. A. Orr, principal of BCIVS, went on to give reasons for the large percentage of drop-outs, such as: lack of motivation; lack of guidance, both at school and home; lack of opportunity; and lack of financial means.

The session offered at least seven solutions for all to consider, however whether pressure and a close liaison between school and parents, early identification of trouble; a diversified curriculum; keeping in mind interests and abilities of students; improve selection and the training of teachers (this suggestion came from business delegates); increased attention to home study; more emphasis on home work in elementary school; effective public relations for the school, its objectives and a closer liaison between educators and the public; better arrangement between elementary, secondary and university; increase facilities for assistance to students; three bursaries even from elementary to secondary level.

All three speakers placed emphasis on guidance not only in the school but in the home level and closer liaison between parents, teachers and those outside both to guide a student to his ultimate goal a mature useful citizen of a community.

QUESTION:

Can you have a good recipe for garlic bread. Also have you a recipe for a sour cream brown sugar boiled icing? — Rosella M.

ANSWER:

GARLIC BREAD:

Slice one long loaf of crusty French Bread in graham 3-4 to 1" thick, being careful not to cut through bottom crust. Chop or crush 2 cloves of garlic as finely as you can and mix 1-to 1-3 pound (or more) soft butter. Spread as generously as you can between slices on cut surfaces. Keep the loaf compact though, in its original shape, pushing the slices together if they tend to spread. Wrap in foil and heat through in 200 deg. F.oho. for 15 to 20 minutes. The bread should be buttery and moist inside and crusty on the outside.

QUESTION:

Have you a recipe for Potato Pancakes made from mashed potatoes? My son came home the other day and said "Mother, I know what you haven't made for a long time — Potato Pancakes made from mashed potatoes" . . . I've tried my recipe. Can you help? — Mrs. C. L.

ANSWER:

Potato Pancakes are made from grated raw potatoes. Potato cakes are made from mashed potatoes. I think I will give them both.

POTATO CAKES:

3 cups mashed potatoes (they should contain enough milk to keep them soft and fluffy), 1-3 tablespoons butter, 2 eggs, 1 small onion minced, flour, 3 tablespoons butter or salad oil, minced parsley, salt and pepper.

Season the potatoes with nutmeg and when slightly cooled, add the well-beaten eggs and onion. Mix well. Spread on greased pan with a spatula and chill. When cold and firm, cut into 2" or 3" squares or shape into small round patties. Dust with flour. Fry until brown on both sides in a very little butter or oil. Sprinkle with minced parsley. Six servings.

POTATO PANCAKES.

2 cups grated raw potatoes, 1-4 cup milk or cream, 1-2 tablespoons flour, 1 teaspoon salt, 1-8 tsp. pepper, 1 tablespoon diced onion (optional).

Add potatoes to milk at once; add flour, salt, pepper, onion. Drain off milk and discard. Add potatoes to well beaten egg, flour and seasonings and add to potatoes. Drop by tablespoon into hot greased frying pan. Brown on both sides. Serve hot. Often served with pot roast and vegetables.

Macdonald, Belleville and also several scenes of Upper Canada Village giving glimpses of this most historical site.

There were also scenes of Belleville High School, pages of school letter books used in 1866; views of Stirling village; the excursion by train in 1894 to the Stirling Fair and the old local militia.

The last section was devoted to the Hastings Historical Society with scenes of the Belleville collection. The slides included a woven blanket on loan by Mrs. Bessman.

Mrs. Roy Tucker voiced appreciative thanks to the speaker and his interesting commentary and views and made the presentation of a small gift on behalf of the citizenship and education group.

Miss Marlene Blackburn voiced thanks on behalf of the school children for the historical mementos which will be placed on the bulletin board.

The program followed with Miss Marilyn Conley contributing a piano solo and she also accompanied a quartet of school children, Ruth Morrow, Marie Heasman, Jan Morrow and Stanley Morrow, who sang "Lollipop" and "Home on the Range". Mrs. Sheldon Molntosh read two poems and Mrs. Roy Tucker read a humorous poem entitled "The Busy Life of the Busy Wife".

Mrs. Jack Bush gave current events that were right up to date and she congratulated Mrs. E. C. Hay-Ellis on her recent paper which had been accepted by the F. W. I.O. loan library in Toronto.

The president, Mrs. Kenneth Myers made a presentation to a member of the faculty, Mrs. Marion Cameron Sine, the former Mrs. Marion Cameron, who for past year Grace has won Provincial honors in 4-H Club work and the W.I. wished to honor her on this special occasion. Unfortunately Mrs. Sine is unable to be in attendance.

Junior member, George Heasman accepted the gift of a pair of dressmaking scissors for Mrs. Sine on suitable terms and voiced appropriate thanks.

Following the singing of "God Little Shamrock" with her daughter, Mrs. Davis Little of Marmora, Mrs. Blackburn and pupils of the River Valley School as a farewell to the occasion, and will be useful for their history studies.

The speaker showed a series of interesting slides with a running commentary, which were greatly enjoyed. Some of these showed were: an old stage coach; the Trent River before it was dammed and was built at Glen Ross; the covered bridge at Frankford; scenes of the Moira River in Tweed; the Mouth of the Bay of Quinte. Some of the old buildings in the area were shown and these included a log cabin, a brick house with the kitchen still in use, an old frame house at Fairfield which was the original general store and its interior, the interior structure of the Belleville Intelligencer were shown from its origin in 1834 and has enjoyed 127 years of publication; the old mill at Shannonville built in 1790; Rathbun "Saw" mill in down-town Belleville; the wife of Sir John A. Macdonald, Belleville and also several scenes of Upper Canada Village giving glimpses of this most historical site.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

Leon H. — She cleans so often, I think she's getting obsessed. She washes floors, Rita H. — I never heard of anyone getting sick from being too clean.

* * *

Leon H. — Yes, I've heard me complain that their wives weren't neat enough, too sloppy and all. Well, with my wife, cleanliness isn't just next to godliness, it's ahead of it!

* * *

Nothing seems more important to her than dust-chasing. How would you like to come home to a kitchen that smells more from disinfectant than from a good supper? Most of the time I don't even feel I'm home. I feel I'm in a hospital! So much scrubbing. Rita seems to have a mop behind every door.

It's hard enough on me, but when it comes to company I must put my foot down. Just as they're leaving, often right in front of them, Rita starts wiping up their footprints! This must stop.

* * *

Rita H. — If I get for my pains to protect him in his complaints! We've been married a few years and I've found out that time he hasn't had a cold he thinks he's dying even a sty and he used to get them frequently from all the dirt in his eyes!

I know people catch diseases from germs and germs are spread by dirt. I like to see nobody gets sick from cleanliness.

As for company, I'm not as rude as he says. It's only when some of his friends lag along with him. Leon is a construction worker and he complains he brings me his mud, oil and grease on shoes and clothing. If I don't wipe up the tracks fast, the spots are almost impossible to get out. That's his excuse to call me a slob.

* * *

The Council: No, Rita, no one can see sick from cleanliness, but many have developed a complex from cleanliness when it crowds out all comfort. Leon appears good-sized problem.

In his present mood, Leon sees Rita as a slave and his engineer, not a wife and home maker. No use he's trying to be meticulous while the cleanup campaign. He's watching her like a hawk, and in that way the rug shampoo, those mops behind the door, become the evidence of a colleting to prove her an extremist, possibly a neurotic.

As third party here, the Council glimpses Rita's side of the picture, and that is why which do sound rather rabid. How she get that way? Probably because Leon with some-ing of the bohemian in his soul, fought so hard in the other direction! She liked order, he enjoyed disorder. She wanted everything in its place, he made sure to throw his coat on a chair, his scarf across a chandelier. Each has been fighting a silent battle to resist the other's exaggerated behavior.

Now that the issue is joined in words, as well as action, what modification can we propose in the attitudes of these two? You, Rita, sound intelligent enough to realize that in this day and age no housekeeper need keep after dirt like the Dutch lady on the clean-sing. club in a hand. Anyone who is a housewife's job of "hygienating" her home is running away from other duties. Making yourself a better-informed person and diverting some of your energy to outside activities would help to lead a healthier balance within your own personality.

Besides, to have a home as immaculate as you'd like, Rita, it would have to be hermetically sealed, like a time capsule! And you know, it would cease to be a home. It would be merely an exhibit. A home is living, and living is a constant, upheaval, functioning and "disturbance." Dust settles best, not in homes but in cemeteries!

Assuring Leon not to mess up the place just to get her goat, we suggest to Rita that she set about polishing up her mind and affections. These get cobwebby, too!

Fir Plywood Picnic Table For Your Outdoor Eats

Why wait your turn at crowded parkside tables when every little trouble you can build a table of your own!

Here is a handsome fir plywood table which will blend naturally with the gr'ass surroundings of your weekend or vacation retreat. And almost all of it can be cut with ordinary hand tools from 4' x 8' panels of 3-4" plywood.

Smaller pieces should be cut to size as indicated in the diagram. Supporting leg pieces are in three sections. You should assemble these by spiking the legs to the top support and the horizontal support to the legs. The top of the horizontal support should be 17" from the ground.

The supporting pieces are then nailing or screwed to the top, and the braces, which can be of plywood or metal, are fastened in place. When you secure the seats to the horizontal supports, make sure they leave room for the family's big appetites.

Rain or moisture won't affect the bond with which fir plywood is made. Remember, however, that plywood is real wood. A good undercoating followed by several coats of high gloss exterior enamel, will produce a finish that will stand up to all weathers.

Safety-Check Can Prevent Accidents

The average American home is thought to be a pretty safe place, yet recent studies by the National Safety Council show that some 3,500 people die annually from home fires and burns, while approximately four million more are injured in the home.

Doesn't this suggest the wisdom of making a "safety survey" of your home? Here is a check-list of important safety features to look into:

1. Bathroom and key locks. These allow the door to be opened from the outside if a child has locked itself in or if adults have suddenly been stricken with dizzy or fainting spells.

2. Electri-centres which eliminate blown fuses and minimize fire hazards, by automatically cutting off a circuit's power and pinpointing the danger area, whenever a defective appliance is plugged in.

3. Grounded outlets to eliminate electric shock. New appliances, using a three-prong plug, require such outlets usually not found in older homes.

4. Hand-rails on all stairs, to help curb deadly falls.

5. Non-skid mattress built at the head and bottom of stairs so that carpets will be weightlicui ahead of you.

6. Well-constructed masonry fireplaces with strong tile linings to prevent erosion by flames and to prevent bricks from falling down and blocking chimneys off.

7. Lighted medicine cabinets, so that danger warnings on labels can be read easily.

8. Floors that wipe up easily, like vinyl or asbestos tile, to keep floors clear of spilled grease and soapy water, responsible for thousands of broken limbs each year.

9. Storage room to prevent clutter. Large utility cupboards and broom closets, so that mops and pails are not left on stairs. Stairways and halls, including cluttered toys, are responsible for countless falls annually.

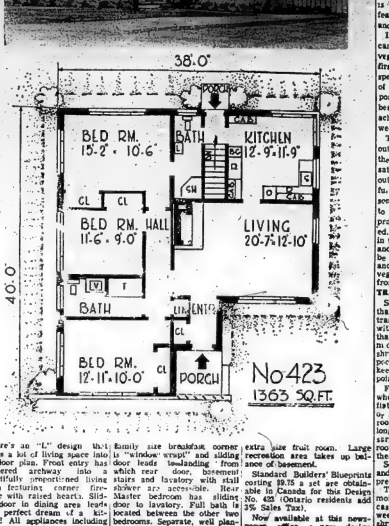
10. Lights in all bedroom closets. An often-neglected safety feature. Some lights prevent groping in the dark, often by blowing balanced precautionally on a chair.

Washable 'Brocade' Is Tops

Be it ever so humble, there's no home these days that can't be given plush beauty with brocade-covered walls.

Unlike the kings and ruling families whose palaces inspired this regal treatment, families today can have their brocade washable. The damaskike pattern is part or a new line of washable plastic coated fabric wall coverings.

Making it even more a newset come to American homes, "Brocade" has an acrylic finish which gives it a rich metallic look and also increases its washability, scuff protection and lasting quality. It is embossed to reflect light in various directions just like real brocade, and comes in gold rose, green, blue and antique white.



All Supersanitas wall coverings are washable and the new luxurious Brocade pattern is no exception. Fingermarks and soil can be wiped off with a sudsy-wrung cloth, commending it for the family dining room. The formal richness it imparts gives an aura of elegance that makes the difficult matter of teaching table manners to children less onerous.

Children react to environment, and a gracious room can be good competition for distractions that make for gulped meals on the part of the young fry.

Another advantage of this lovely wall covering is the do-it-yourself ease which it can be hung. It comes pre-trimmed at 24-inch width that can be handled readily by women as well as men.

It is beautiful but so sturdy too that it can be used appropriately in the living room, halls and stairways, as well as in dining areas and libraries.

HOME OF THE WEEK

Here's an airy design that packs a lot of living space into its floor plan. Front entry has plastered archway into a beautifully proportioned living room featuring corner fireplace with raised hearth. Sliding door in dining area leads to a perfect dream of a kitchen! All appliances including freezer are built-in; all cabinets have natural wood finish; family size breakfast corner has "window wrap" and sliding door leads to rear, basement stairs and lavatory with stall shower are accessible. Rear Master bedroom has sliding door to lavatory. Full bath is located between the other two bedrooms. Separate, well planned laundry room has work tops along wall area and an extra size fruit room. Large recreation area takes up balance of basement.

The Breakfast Nook— Easy Job for Home Builder

A great many variations of the breakfast nook have appeared in house and home magazines in recent years.

The arrangement pictured above, which can easily be duplicated by basement workshop practitioners, is about as simple and functional as you can get.

The counter top is made of the ordinary way, of fir plywood, probably topped with arborite to match the rest of the working surfaces in the kitchen.

Length of the counter, and possibly width, will depend on the dimensions of the kitchen. Tables such as this are usually 30" high.

If the breakfast nook is to adjoin one of the regular kitchen work counters (which are usually 36" high) the nook counter can be raised flush with the rest of the kitchen and the seats of the chairs adjusted upwards to compensate. (Growing children can be accommodated at all ages by similarly adjusting the height of the seat of each chair.)

The supporting measurements are given, because of the great variance in kitchen space. The counter at which you eat will normally be held up by framing. Chairs are therefore dependent upon these posts for their width and number.

The "L" shaped arrangement might make the best unstable. Three-quarter-inch fir plywood should be used throughout as this thickness eliminates the need for framing. Assembly should be by glue and finishing nails, which can be countersunk.

Finishing can be accomplished in several ways to compliment the decor of the kitchen. But by the time you get around to deciding this point, at least you'll have something to sit on while you decide.

Many Practical Ways To Heat Extra Room in Attic

The attic is one of the most flexible areas in the house. It can be remodeled into a bedroom, a den, an upstairs family room, or even an efficiency apartment.

Today there are many ways to heat the attic. The following are some of the methods used:

A space heater can be simply set on the attic floor. Space heaters use either gas, oil, kerosene or electricity. They are frequently the least expensive heating equipment to install, but they are not always economical to operate. Moreover, heat is usually concentrated in one room around the heater.

Electric resistance baseboard units are relatively inexpensive and easy to install and they provide more uniform heating than space heaters. Operating costs, however, usually run three to four times higher with this type of unit except in a few areas where electric rates are extremely low. To maintain heating efficiency with electric units, extra heavy insulation is recommended for attic walls and ceiling. Cost of this extra insulation often offsets the savings in the cost of equipment. Current usually required is 220 volt.

Expanding your existing central heating system is another way to heat the attic. This should be done with the advice of a reliable heating contractor, who can tell whether your heating plant is large enough to handle the extra heating load. Expanding your heating system should provide the finest heating if the heating plant is properly installed.

You will probably have fewer problems expanding your heating system if it is a hydronic (modern hot water heating) system. According to the National Better Heating-Cooling Council, a properly installed hydronic system can be expanded easily without extensive alterations to the system.

A separate heating system can also be installed just to heat the attic. This system uses a small hydronic boiler which is sized for one-room heating jobs. A small, silent pump is used to convey heated water from the boiler through finger-size tubing to hydronic baseboard heating panels.

Many Owners Can Do Jobs Of Paneling

Wood paneling is exceptionally easy to work with standard tools. This makes finishing off a room in the attic or basement for paneling a room elsewhere in the house) a logical do-it-yourself project for many a home handyman.

Here are some helpful hints which should lead to a professional-like job.

Once wood species and pattern have been selected, ordered and delivered, it would be wise to store the paneling for several days in the room in which it is to be installed. Separating slicks between the pieces permit air flow and allow the paneling to adjust to the room's normal humidity conditions.

Horizontal paneling over framing does not require nailing strips; vertical does, however.

When paneling over masonry walls, back paneling and strips should first be coated with a commercial waterproofing material.

NAILING STRIPS

Three nailing strips, fastened to masonry with concrete nails, are all that are necessary for vertical paneling; strips for horizontal paneling should be placed every four feet.

Next on the agenda is precutting paneling to fit, but pre-finishing it as well. Panel finishing assures an even job — no chance for an unwanted two-tone effect or unfinished spots where panels are joined.

The basic steps involved in applying fine finishes to lumber paneling are as follows: First sand carefully with medium grade sandpaper to smooth out rough impressions if necessary. Then use 3/0 paper to achieve a smooth surface.

Staining comes next and can be done either with a good commercial brand or by using pigment and mineral thinner. It is essential to test the stain on a piece of the same wood you are staining to make certain it is what you want.

DURABLE FINISH

Once the stain has completely dried, apply a durable glossy finish as follows: Apply a lacquer sealer and rub with 6/0 sandpaper. Follow with a minimum of two coats of clear varnish or shellac and rub smooth with 3/0 steel wool when the last coat has dried.

The pre-finished paneling is then ready to be installed and it should be blind nailed wherever possible, especially at eye-level. Blind nailing is achieved by nailing into the tongue of the panel so that the groove of the next piece of panelling will hide the nail hole. Number 5 finishing nails should be used and should be countersunk.

At inside corners, trim off the moulded patterns and butt the new wall of paneling tight against the completed one. For outside corners, miter paneling edges or ends.

Canadian Garden Service

NO HURRY

It is impossible to overemphasize the importance of the gardener taking his time when it comes to the actual sowing of seeds and selling out of plants. There is no hurry about this business and the more it is spread out the longer the feast of garden fresh vegetables and the display of bloom.

In most parts of Canada one can go on sowing flowers and vegetables right up to the first of July with excellent prospects of success. And in some of the warmer areas it is quite possible to sow such things as beans, corn, carrots, beets, spinach and lettuce every two weeks well into July.

The main thing is to spread out the planting season so that the harvest and pleasure and satisfaction will also be spread out. So often one sees a beautiful display of bloom in July and some wonderful vegetables only to find a few weeks late, that practically everything is finished. With a bit of help for nature in the way if watering, fertilizer and cultivation, the garden can be made to produce an abundance in colour and top quality vegetables right up to the first frost and later.

TRANSPLANTING

Some people seem to think that there is a mystery about transplanting that only those with a greenhouse, whatever that may be, are successful in moving plants or trees or shrubs. This is a lot of hocus pocus. All that is needed is to keep in mind a few important points.

First, in moving anything whether it is purchased out of a tin or a three year old maple or apple tree, don't expose the roots to the air for a moment longer than absolutely necessary. Sun and wind kill fine root hairs, that's why nature puts them below ground.

Second, spread out the roots and cover with fine soil and press down firmly.

Third, water well and keep moist for a day or two in the case of small plants to several weeks if we are planting a big shrub, vine or tree. And a bit of stimulant in the way of liquid fertilizer will always help a transplanting time.

Also, if possible, do the transplanting in the evening or on a cloudy day and shade from the sun for a little while. Also with big nursery stock like trees, stake and tie firmly so that the wind will not whip around and loosen and let air in around roots.

WANTED OR WEEDS

Most people soon become familiar with the appearance of a new seedling plant. It is rather important that they do so, otherwise they may find it difficult to distinguish from thriving weeds. It is not good practice to wait until seeds have sprouted and the plants wanted have grown up, before thinning and weeding. If we do, we are going to have a jungle and not a garden. Learn to know the flower and vegetable plants from the weeds and get rid of the latter quickly. All seedlings have two sets of leaves, the first are seed leaves, simple affairs that usually have no resemblance to the permanent leaves, that follow. By planting down the vegetable row or at more or less regular clumps with the flower seeds were sown, one will notice that there is soon to be less a pattern of the same kind of plants and those of course are the ones from the seed to be kept and ones we want to protect and grow. With larger seeds, plant for instance which we sow evenly two to four inches apart, the plants grown from them become spaced in this way and we know what is growing. We look for them when we start to weed or cultivate. That is one very good reason for straight rows and careful sowing in the vegetable garden.

Housing Hints

(A new feature by Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation.)

Q. How do you find a reliable builder?

A. A reliable builder is one who can give a firm price quotation and who is prepared to state in writing exactly he can have the house ready for occupancy. When possible, it's a good idea to examine few houses already constructed by the builder in question. If you're favorably impressed with his past work, you can be fairly well assured that he will give you equal satisfaction. It's also important to choose a builder who has his business in the community close to the site. Such a builder will be familiar with local building regulations and the best sources of materials. Also, his labor force will be close at hand and he'll be able to supervise the work better.

Q. Are the services of an architect important?

A. Yes. For instance there are numerous ways something special in the way of design or who feel that stock plans do not completely meet their needs. These people usually hire an architect to draw up a house plan to their own specifications. The house can then be tailored to fit the lot and to incorporate those distinctive features suggested by the owner. In addition, a lot of headaches and repairs can be avoided simply by engaging the services of an architect to oversee the job. In this capacity he's the home-owner's best friend.

Q. Should you hire a lawyer before going ahead with building or buying a house?

A. Definitely. Most of us over-estimate our knowledge and expenditure and this is never more true when we are building or buying a home. A lawyer, who spends years learning all about the intricate details of the sale, will act with much greater prudence than the layman who is often carried away by his enthusiasm and ignorant of the pitfalls that await him. Handling legal formalities should be left to someone experienced in this field. Processing a mortgage, for example is a complicated business and beyond the scope of the untrained person.

Q. Can a realtor help you when considering building or buying a house?

A. He certainly can. For example, even when you're just purchasing a lot, unless you're quite familiar with the value of the property and the procedures involved, you stand to lose more than you gain by ignoring the services of a realtor. His knowledge can save you time, trouble and very often, available properties and money. He has a listing of knows all about the actual market values. In some cases he may also be able to point out why the particular property you had in mind wouldn't be suitable, for your purposes. He may be in a position to advise on impending sales or transactions which could permanently affect the value of the lot you intend to buy.

POPULAR WOOD

"Pecky" wood, which has shown tremendous gains in popularity in recent years, is wood that's been attacked by fungi, birds or insects. It used to be tossed away but is now sought after for a vogue for rustic interior panelling because of its "driftwood" effect.

Sunday School Lesson

The Maturity of Religion

By ROY L. SMITH

There is a rich meaning in the word "mature" as it has been used by the Christian evangelists down through the ages, but there is also a real danger.

It is so easy to believe that it is all over when we come to the place where we can say that we have been converted—that we are saved!

The International Sunday School Lesson for April 8: "Toward A Mature Faith", Acts 16:1-3; 2 Timothy.

Actually, however, this is but the beginning. All of life, including our spiritual experience, was meant as a process of growth. Physically, we come to maturity about the time we are 20 years of age. And it may be and that we come to our intellectual maturity about the time we celebrate our 25th birthday (the psychologists are still debating that point). But, it is never cease to grow, or to degenerate, spiritually.

The two "letters" to Timothy were addressed to a young man who had been reared in a Christian home life. There is no precise information in the New Testament, as to exactly when or how timothy was converted to the Christian faith, but it is plainly stated that his mother and his grandmother were Christians, although his father was a Jew. It can be said, therefore, that he was a third generation Christian.

A young Chinese student, just graduating from the university, set as a dinner guest with an American family with whom he had become a well-to-do friendship. The next day he was to return to his home in China.

When the meal was about half over, the father of the household said, "Dr. Tongs, you have had a chance to observe a good deal of American life. Tell me, what is to you the most impressive thing you have seen among us".

Without the slightest hesitation, the young man pictured to the family seated about the table, and replied, very simply, "Why, I think the thinking he was only trying to be complimentary, missed the question.

"This is exactly what I mean", the young man replied. "There is nothing more wonderful in all the world than the sight of a Christian family, gathered about the table together, dining democratically, respecting the rights of all, and united by a Christian Spirit. I have never seen anything quite like it, and I will never forget it."

The home is the cradle of faith. To fail to train little children in the habit of the use of good religion, is to fail them at the most important point of their lives.

PUT AWAY CHILDISH THINGS

The Apostle Paul, on one occasion, said: "When I was a child I spoke as a child, and I thought as a child, but now I am a man I have put away childish things". This does not mean that he had abandoned childish ideas and ideals, but that he had gone on beyond them.

A university boy, greatly troubled by the fact that he found himself in an atmosphere in the laboratory where some of the answers he had learned as a child did not suffice, appealing to his pastor for help. "Must I give up religion?" he inquired, with a bit suggestion. "Not at all", the good man replied. "All you have to do is to bring your spiritual viewpoints, your religious convictions, and your life's dedication up to the level of your intellectual achievements. The pictures of God, of Christ, of the Church and of Christianity itself, have been those of a child. You must bring them to maturity, just as you bring other ideas to maturity.

"As a boy of six, for example, you had one concept of how life began and how a baby comes to be. As a youth of 16, informed in the laboratory concerning certain biological laws, you know how inadequate those childish concepts were. You have already brought your biological ideas up to your age level, but you have not brought your religious thinking up to the same level. And that it can be done, I assure you with all the honesty of my soul."

It is just a little odd that some very wise people occasionally make the mistake of trying to judge medical science by the standards of 1962, and religion by the standards of 1846. One of the facts we miss is that religion has matured just as medicine has.

Spring Sparks Urge to Paint And Repair

On the day the last snowflake melts and the first bud appears, just about every home-owner starts talking and thinking about what has now become a well-established seasonal custom — "spring cleaning".

Today, "spring cleaning" has come to encompass far more than the old fashioned house cleaning, new lighting fixtures, new floor coverings, window jobs on painting and roofing, and a host of repair and improvement jobs are all a part of a well-integrated program aimed at maintaining a high standard of appearance and livability in the home.

Like any other big and expensive piece of equipment, a home should be inspected periodically if it is to be kept in smooth operating condition. Since the winter months usually do the most damage, spring is the best time for making a seasonal check-up and attending to the necessary repairs and other little jobs about the house that will make it a better place in which to live.

MAKE REPAIRS PROMPTLY

Minor repairs should be made promptly. Failure to do so will often result in more serious breakdowns later on — money even necessitate an expensive major overhaul that might have been avoided.

Here is a convenient guide to a "spring inspection" that will determine how you can step up the appearance and livability of your home.

1. The Outside. This is your home's face to the public. Checks: roofing and siding. Small cracks, peeling, etc. often require little more than minor repairs or repainting. The new latex paints, that cover exterior with a single coat makes it far easier than heretofore to put a fresh, bright sparkle into a weather-worn home.

Moreover; new materials on the market can sometimes make it cheaper to have new roofing or siding installed than to do a patch job.

MONEY-SAVING FEATURES

Among the materials that now include new time and (b) fireproof qualities that protect while they beautify, and (b) sidings that provide insulation, retaining building heat and cutting fuel bills. Fuel savings, over the years, can amortize the cost of the installation.

Then there are rot-resistant shingles and shingles that provide longer life and beauty for the home. Some sidings have multi-colored balloons to the uprights; (c) Christmas time, silver bells and bright red ribbon. The divider could well become the focal point in your interior decoration, and since inherent in its design is a demand for tastefully handled accessories, an exciting challenge as well.

Any one of the three versions could add a touch of elegance to the modern open - planned house, a valuable combination of illusion and convenience to a bachelor apartment.

Two cobliter sharing a room? of this sort to give them at least Why not a fit plywood divider a feeling of "this is all mine" and an unencumbered psyche?

Consider the juxtaposition of those ones, and you begin to realize that in indulging in the dividers you accomplish two results, both exceedingly worthy. You increase your own material worth, add to the beauty of your living quarters and at the same time indulge in something supremely akin to playing with building blocks. And all in a socially acceptable way.

The exact plans are up to you, and your local lumber dealer can help solve the details.

Using fir plywood, the man of the house will be able to rush your ideas into action without a moment's delay.

Mind you, with three fir plywood boxes, some doweling, and enough imagination, a fellow could come up with anything from the pole-vault championship to the greatest unsolved triple murder in history.

But the suggestions above are nice, too.

At party time you could tie baked-on decorator colors that never need repainting.

2. Inside the House. A change in the family's size and needs may call for a room addition or interior remodelling. Consider converting the basement to a finished recreation room, or add a finished bedroom or den to the attic to meet expanded family needs.

Effect a "change of scene" in any or all rooms via a new paint job or wallpaper — or a combination of both. Consider new floor coverings, too!

3. The Grounds. Even a small backyard can become a happy modern outdoor living area. New patio awnings and shelters can convert a small corner near the house into a suitable area for summer relaxation and barbecue fun.

Embarrassed In-Law Looks the Other Way

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS:—My wife's sister, who is 15, makes such a fuss over me that it embarrasses me. She sits on my lap, kisses me—long, lingering ones—is continually touching me.

When she stays overnight she parades around in a nightgown which leaves little to the imagination. I look the other way.

I don't want to hurt her feelings, or my wife's, but I sure feel like telling her to behave herself. Am I just being silly? —JOHNNIE.

DEAR JOHNNIE—I suspect you are the first man to come into the family. She is a peppy, normal adolescent, reacting to a male.

Could you and your wife help her with her social life? If she had a boy friend of her own, of her own age, she would be less desperate for physical contact and male admiration from you.

Perhaps her sister or her mother would talk to her. She has no idea how cheap she looks.

DEAR DORIS:—I am a widow with three children. Recently a widower has been coming to see me. We have much in common and I have grown to love him. He has proposed marriage.

But now he feels he should have the opportunity of playing the field before he settles down again. Should I stay at home and wait while he is seeking out the companionship of a divorcee with two children?

He is living with his older married sister and she still thinks he is her little brother that needs a mother's care and protection, as well as helping him pick his companions.

I am beginning to wonder if men ever grow up or do they have to hide behind t-shirt all their lives.—PERPLEXED.

DEAR PERPLEXED—Free him, but keep your bat in the ring.

With two older pampering women in the picture, a little wholesome neglect from you may take him aback. You may be sure he won't choose the other woman either.

And be there to catch him when he does make up his mind.

Cross-Canada Survey

More Foreign Students Are Attending Centres of Higher Education Than Ever Before

By NAT COLE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Significant changes have taken place in the last decade in the makeup of foreign student groups attending Canadian universities and colleges.

A Cross - Canada Survey by The Canadian Press shows more foreign students from more countries are attending centres of higher education in Canada than ever before.

Foreign students now number about 7,000, more than five per cent of the total university-level enrolment of 130,000. The number is increasing by 600 to 700 annually.

The proportion of foreign students to Canadian students has increased only slightly — less than one per cent — since the Second World War. However, there have been major changes in the composition of the foreign group.

FROM COMMONWEALTH

Before the war, more than 80 per cent of Canada's foreign students came from the United States. By 1951, only 53 per cent were Americans, and this year they account for only 33 per cent.

Students from more than 100 countries make up the remainder with the biggest groups—17 per cent coming from the Commonwealth and British dependencies.

Another seven per cent are from Western Europe, five from Central and South America, five from Far East countries outside the Commonwealth and the remaining three per cent from the Middle East, Eastern Europe and non-Commonwealth African states.

McGill University, Montreal, has by far the largest number of foreign students at 1,400, an increase of more than 200 from last year. The University of Toronto has 912, University of British Columbia 547, University of Manitoba 508 and University of Montreal 456. The others have fewer, than 400 each.

SCHOLARSHIPS HELP

Records are not kept by many of the 36 institutions surveyed, but an estimated 10 per cent of the foreign students are studying on scholarships. One-third are either supported by family, back home, working their own way through graduate and post-graduate courses.

Some two-thirds of those on scholarships are financed by Canadians through the Colombo Plan, Commonwealth scholarships, other international agencies, Canadian foundations, provincial governments or the individual universities. The others are supported by their home countries with scholarships or subsidies.

Most of the foreign students are in post - graduate studies. The most popular courses are divided equally between arts and science faculties with technical sciences such as engineering, medicine and dentistry a close third. Other popular faculties include social studies, education, economics and political science.

The biggest change in the character of the foreign student body has been the great increase in the number of non-white students.

In the last 10 years, the proportion of coloured students in the group has almost tripled to 47 per cent of the total.

Students from the Commonwealth comprise 70 per cent of the non-white group, with the largest contingent coming from the West Indies, South - East Asia and Hong Kong, and India, Pakistan and Ceylon. A smaller group comes from African Commonwealth countries.

Despite the high proportion of coloured students, however, cases of open discrimination against them are rare.

In almost all major universities they are admitted freely to fraternities and student societies and are often elected to positions of responsibility.

An exception is McGill, where foreign students are excluded, generally by agreement, from almost all fraternities. However, they take full part in other activities and the exclusion is not based on racial grounds.

OFF-CAMPUS PROBLEMS

At UBC in Vancouver, discrimination was stamped out this year after a senate investigation, prompted by a 1,500-signature student petition, revealed that three fraternities had constitutions allowing exclusion from membership because of racial origin.

These cases were not representative, however, and UBC has an International House student especially for foreign students — where Canadians and foreigners meet for informal activities. Most other universities also have international students clubs.

Little or no incidence of discrimination by Canadian students against their visitors is reported in any portion of the country, there are no known cases of foreign students having because of discrimination on the campus.

More problems are encountered by coloured students in their off-campus relations with Canadians.

Non - white students at most universities and colleges, on occasion, have been refused private accommodation or the use of local services.

"You can't always—pin this down to color," says Don Bracken, past president of the International Students' Club at the University of Western Ontario, London. "Each person has a right to decide the boarders he will accept. Canadians have the same trouble."

HELP WITH HOUSING

Mrs. C. W. Hooper, foreign student advisor at the University of Alberta, feels the housing problem is often not one of discrimination but one of "people not knowing what the student's conditions are and not wanting to take a chance and make a mistake."

McGill and Manitoba officials spare colored student, the embarrassment of approaching landlords by finding suitable accommodation by arranging it in advance.

Clifford Knowles, student chaplain and guidance officer, at Dalhousie says landlords are asked if they want student boarders, of a certain nationality.

Mrs. Vivien Sharp, foreign student adviser at Winnipeg, places advertisements for lodging in the local newspapers, drawing attention to the race of the student seeking accommodation.

While there is little open discrimination, some coloured students say it is there just the same—even on the campus.

Fina Sanchez, student Mordecai Bulma of Uganda, on a Commonwealth scholarship at Mount Allison University, Sackville, N.B. says resentment of foreign students is often only implicit, but noticeable enough to discourage initiative or active participation in campus activities."

Other foreign students say this is a matter of the individual's outlook. "A great deal depends on one's, attitude and understanding," says Patrick Sylvester of St. Lucia, West Indies, a post-graduate arts students at the University of New Brunswick, Fredericton.

Some white students feel foreign students sometimes don't enter into the spirit of things perhaps because of a feeling of inferiority or because, more than Canadian students, they need time to adjust to their surroundings.

Sidney Astor, a third year Canadian arts student at McGill, says foreign students "tend to feel equal in every respect."

One of the biggest problems faced by foreign students is summer employment. Many do not have enough money to support themselves during the summer and immigration officials are often against issuing work permits to foreign students when Canadians are out of work.

A University of New Brunswick spokesman said foreign students there sometimes obtain employment when the employer is sympathetic and immigration officials obligingly look the other way. Otherwise, he says, the situation is "impossible."

Lack of social life is also a problem for the foreigners.

There is no open discrimination but it is nevertheless very prevalent, especially in social life," says Mount Allison's Bulma. "While students treat us well generally in their casual relations, but girls often shoot down hospitality."

Elton Georges of the Virgin Islands, also at Mount Allison, says it is similar.

"There has not so far been any sign of animosity towards me account my skin color. However, it is difficult—if not impossible—to obtain dates with Canadian girls."

Say $75,000 to $125,000 Paid for Highway Work Not Done at New Liskeard

TORONTO (CP) — Financial irregularities in the highways department's New Liskeard district have resulted in the suspension of a district official and, the lodging of criminal charges, Highways Minister W. A. Goodfellow told the legislature Thursday.

Mr. Goodfellow gave few details but it was reported at New Liskeard that between $75,000 and $125,000 is involved in work paid for but not done.

The minister announced the department's district municipal engineer, in the northern area, in charge of provincial subsidies to municipalities for highway work, is under suspension as the result of what he described as "discrepancies" in the records of the district office.

LAY CHARGES

Mr. Goodfellow told the House that "certain criminal charges" have been laid but did not say who was charged.

It was learned at New Liskeard that a fraud charge was laid Thursday against A. Harris, a foreman with the O'Leary Construction Company, and Leland Lake, which is in the New Liskeard district and has been doing highway work.

After Mr. Goodfellow made his statement in the legislature, CCF Leader Donald C. MacDonald said that a check with the O'Hearn Construction Company was "owned by the suspended engineer."

The minister, who had not mentioned the company, replied: "Not to my knowledge."

He also said he does not know of Mr. Moffett's career in the highways department.

Mr. Goodfellow told the house that the records of the district office at New Liskeard "could not be reconciled with the physical work that had been carried out."

He said he wished to assure the House that "any monies which have been expended to any person or companies will not be repaid on the department but will such action as is necessary to ensure recovery as soon as possible after the facts have been completed."

He said Charles L. Dobie, Toronto lawyer, has been appointed special crown prosecutor to handle the case.

There was no official indication of how long the continuing investigation stretches, but it was learned at New Liskeard that the district office going back to 1935 have been taken to Toronto.

Seamen's Fight Seen as Far From Finished

TORONTO (CP) — The burdening Canadian Maritime Union threw a healthy right cross at the ring-wise Seafarers' International Union Thursday in the battle for Great Lakes ship, ping labor dominance.

Observers were confident the fight was far from finished.

The CMU, formed last year by the Canadian Labor Congress to drive the SIU out of Canada, announced it has signed a contract with Upper Lakes Shipping Limited, representing 25 ships and more than 600 men.

Before the end of the day, the CMU transported 22 seamen to Sarnia, from Montreal and the item boarded Upper Lakes' Provwing which sailed 32 minutes later for Toledo, Ohio.

The Red Wing and the other Upper Lakes vessels were formerly manned by the SIU, an independent union expelled from the CLC a month ago for raiding the old National Association of Marine Engineers.

GUARD GATES

The cavalcade of station wagons carrying the CMU members escorted by police, passed through the gates of the Sarnia Elevator Company, at which dock the Red Wing spent the winter, at 7 p.m. Thursday night. The dock is immediately manned by company guards.

Outside the gates a picket line formed, with SIU members calling insults at the boarding CMU seamen. An SIU official was heard reiterating that they were throwing stones or starting violence.

The CMU coup in signing with Upper Lakes came a week after the SIU contract with the shipping company expired.

Contract negotiations with the SIU and Upper Lakes, together with a federal conciliation board, had been going on for weeks. The federal board gave up its conciliation attempts last week and the expiration of the contract gave the CMU the legal go-ahead to move in.

President Mike Sheenan of the CMU said the one-year contract with Upper Lakes provides for wages ranging between $312 and $314 a month and "a significant improvement" in working conditions.

Jim Todd, CLC secretary here, said the financial terms are the same as in the previous contract with the SIU.

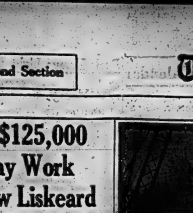
Hal Banks, head of the still-powerful SIU, with estimated membership at 2,500, could not be reached for comment.

CMU WILL APPLY

Todd said the CMU, which has 700 members on the inland waters and another 750 who have applied for membership, intends to apply to the Canadian National Labor Relations Board for certification of the contract. The SIU failed to take this step with its Upper Lakes contract.

Two of the ships covered by the CMU-Upper Lakes contract are the Norcliffe Ventura and the Wheat King. Both ran into trouble with SIU pickets a year when the CMU grabbed them from the SIU, including being tied up at dock overnight at United States lake ports.

The Norcliffe Ventura, Venture loaded without delay at Toledo Thursday, despite four unidentified pickets, and sailed for Hamilton, marking a victory for the CMU.



Should Control Gambling Says Allan Lampart

TORONTO (CP)—Allan Lampart, former Toronto mayor, Thursday said a provincial body similar to the Ontario Control Board should be established to control gambling in Ontario.

Mr. Lampart made the remark during panel discussion at the Metropolitan Club with Philip Kelly, former mines minister of Ontario; Rev. A. W. Downer, Presbyterian minister; five member in the provincial legislature for Dufferin-Simcoe; and real estate, oil and publishing magnate Percy Bishop.

"On the one hand the government is licensing gambling, and on the other, the Criminal Code prohibits it," said Mr. Lampart.

"Surely it's no crime to have a sweepstakes ticket. Other countries use them to raise hospital funds."

"Jest a Second"

"They're lovely flowers Jack — Take your hair-oil over there so I can smell them."

OUT OF THE ASHES—Roof trusses of new $40,000 Deseronto Canadian Legion hall are seen going on as construction nears completion. Building 45 by 100 feet, with main auditorium and basement, will be "half" paid for upon completion early in May.

SUPERVISORS — Legion past president Andrew Hrytzak, Indian agent at Deseronto, and executive member Bill McGregor, check plans for new Legion hall as workmen in the background install steel roof trusses.

New Deseronto Legion Hall Will Be Completed in May And Nearly Half Paid For

Being named 1961 president of the Deseronto branch of the Canadian Legion was a big thrill 15 months ago for local Indian Agent Andrew Hrytzak.

But the thrill was suddenly dimmed when on January 1st, 1961, the day he officially took over the Legion reins, the Deseronto Legion hall burned to the ground and his members were without an official home.

"The day I took over as president our hall was nothing but a pile of rubble," Mr. Hrytzak recalled yesterday.

He can afford to be optimistic now as within another month the Deseronto Legion will be the proud "part" owners of a new $40,000 hall.

After a belated start last October, the new hall is scheduled to be completed in early May and even before the building is completed the new hall has been half-paid for.

SIGN PELSONAL NOTES

For the remaining $20,000 approximately 40 Legion members have signed personal notes and the required money has been borrowed from a Belleville loan company.

The new hall will not be merely a meeting place for Legion members, however, but will serve as a community hall for use by the Deseronto organizations—the only such meeting place in the town.

Already, even before the building is completed, the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Legion has half a dozen bangettes lined up. Efforts of the Legion auxiliary in catering to banquets will go along way toward writing off the Deseronto branch indebtedness on the building.

The new concrete block structure is on Deseronto's main business street, directly across the street from the post office. It is 45 by 100 feet, the main floor containing the auditorium and stage, while in the basement will be a fully equipped kitchen and dining room facilities as well as quarters for bolding Legion meetings.

MODERN EQUIPMENT

The Ladies' Auxiliary are taking the responsibility of seeing that the kitchen equipment, such as stove and refrigerators, is the most modern available.

While just under $40,000 will pay for the building as it will be completed next month, another $8,000 or $7,000 is expected to be spent on completion of interior trim — when the Legion members can afford it.

Burning of the old hall on Mill Street a year ago appeared to be a major catastrophe for the Deseronto Legion and its just over 100 members.

The old hall, a former Union Church was over 100 years old but had just been extensively renovated. New hardwood floors and a new furnace had just been installed.

The insurance money received following the blaze went to get construction of the new hall started.

Decision to go ahead with the new building was not made until last July after the current Legion president Earl Brent, had drafted preliminary plans. Then detailed plans were finalized by the executive and the go-ahead signal was given in October.

NO CONTRACT GIVEN

In spite of expenses no general contract was awarded with Legion members deciding to supervise construction themselves and sub contract individual trades.

To further cut expenses Legion members are donating considerable volunteer work and weekends are up to a dozen or 15 men wheeling cement and doing other jobs not requiring skilled tradesmen. Mr. Hrytzak estimates that volunteer labor will save the Legion at least $2,000.

Along with Mr. Earl Brent as president, the Deseronto Legion executive this year consists of Andrew Hrytzak as past president and executive members Zig Thompson, Ed. Gordanner, Ross Neal, Dr. D. E. McVicker and Jack Sperse. Mrs. Carol Reid is president of the energetic Legion Ladies' Auxiliary.

278 River Pilots Walk Off Jobs At Midnight

MONTREAL (CP)—About 278 St. Lawrence River pilots walked off their jobs shortly after midnight today to discuss methods of accelerating action on their demands for improved working conditions.

The pilots, who plan to hold a series of general meetings in several shipping centres during the week, say the delays have charged that the federal department of transport and the Canadian Shipping Federation are using delaying tactics in negotiations.

Pilots' Federation President Andre Bedard said Thursday in reply to a statement in the House of Commons by Transport Minister Balcer that the pilots have been negotiating since February and are receiving an answer to their demands.

The walkout, which affects shipping from Les Escoumains, Que., 160 miles downriver from Quebec harbors, including the passenger liner Empress of Britain.

WILL MOOR SHIPS

However, a federation spokesman said the ships anchored on the river at the time of the walkout would be taken to safe mooring before being deserted by their pilots.

The major grievance behind the walkout concerns the method used to calculate the pilots' pay.

In his Commons speech, Mr. Balcer said pilots between Quebec City and Montreal average a gross income of $16,300 with an average working day of 10½ hours.

Mr. Bedard immediately decided the figures which he called "grossly distorted."

"The department of transport allots a certain amount of active pilots."

The federation also opposes a transport department proposal that the pilots' pension be part of their earnings toward upkeep of the boats and maintenance of service.

"We are willing to negotiate at any time," said Mr. Bedard said. "But we haven't been approached by the Shipping Federation yet."

CBC Assailed For Ignoring Alberta Censor

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

The Alberta legislature wound up its session Thursday night with a slam at the CBC and a temporary split in government ranks.

Criticism of the CBC came during consideration of a provincial subsidy, a resolution asking the Board of Broadcast Governors to require television stations to comply with provincial film censorship.

Although Premier Manning (SC—Edmonton Centre) proposed the resolution, Lands and Forests Minister Hugill (SC—Edmonton Norwood) said the CBC has become "a huge Frankenstein, beyond the control of any authorities." It had flouted the will of the people and legislature, reflected the Communist line; disregarded Christian morality, and had caused many unnecessary moans of mass communication.

The split came in a vote on an opposition motion urging government grants and tax relief for private schools. Two Social Credit cabinet ministers and four government backbenchers supported the motion, but it was defeated 44-16 in the chamber dominated by government supporters.

It was the second time in the session that Social Credit backbenchers had supported opposition in a standing vote. But it was the first split in cabinet ranks.

Premier Manning pointed out while the long-range prospect is bright for the industry there will be a period of active mines another 15 or 17 months.

Main objective of government policy, the report says, is that the uranium industry be kept alive and functioning even on a limited scale. This would ensure that Canada would be ready and able to compete for new markets when they develop in the early 1970s.

Canadian Steelworkers Lay Down General Demands for Collective Bargaining in 62

VANCOUVER (CP) — The pace-setting Steelworkers Union has laid down its general demands for collective bargaining for 1962.

The 83,000-member union will set its economic sights on:

1. Higher wages, shorter hours, longer vacations and elimination of a geographical wage differentials in the Canadian steel industry.

2. A new general plan to protect workers displaced by technological change, with a greater voice for the union in how big business introduces automation.

The policy objectives were outlined at the opening session Thursday of the annual conference of Canadian Steelworkers.

Although the union reached agreement with the Steel Company of Canada and Algoma Steel Corporation last year, it still faces a new contract talk later this year with the Dominion Steel and Coal Corporation, the Sidco and Algoma agreements called for a 21-cent pay boost spread over a three-year contract ending in 1964.

Indications are the union will press for pay increases for workers in Sydney, N.S., Toronto and Windsor as well as to close the wage gap separating them from Algoma and Sidco workers.

EXPECT TOUGH FIGHT

There will also likely be heavy emphasis on contract provisions to protect workers against layoffs, including supplementary unemployment benefits. A tough fight is expected.

The union also spelled out a detailed plan for meeting automation-era problems.

It called for management-labor consultation on technological innovations, training opportunities for displaced workers, moving allowances for workers transferred to other plants, supplementary unemployment benefits for workers on prolonged layoffs and severance pay for those who lose their jobs permanently.

"Unless most seek a more equitable distribution of productivity gains, including lower prices for consumers as well as general wage increases and improved fringe benefits," said the collective bargaining declaration.

"A negotiated reduction in annual hours of work without loss in pay for each employee can help to maintain employment and purchasing power in an economy with rapidly increasing productive efficiency."

The statement on collective bargaining came as conference speakers called for more action to meet the problems created by technological change—that governments also have a role in meeting automation-era difficulties.

HAS FOOD TROUBLE

VIENNA (AP) — Communist Bulgaria Thursday admitted difficulties in feed supplies and announced a large-scale campaign to increase livestock and meat production. Similar difficulties recently have been acknowledged by Soviet Premier Khrushchev and Communist Czechoslovakia.

Steelworkers Reject Motion Against Raiding

VANCOUVER (CP)—A veiled invitation was issued Thursday to the employees of Atlas Steel of Welland to join up with the United Steelworkers of America (CLC).

The national policy conference of the 83,000-member union voted to invite all unorganized workers in Steel's jurisdiction into the union.

The invitation was aimed specifically at "workers in such weak and unprincipled organizations as the National Council of Canadian Labor and other bodies outside the Canadian Labor Congress."

William Mahoney, national Steel union chief, said the employees of Atlas Steel, whose president is George De Young, chairman of the National Productivity Council, are represented by a "company union," affiliated with the NCCL.

He said this fact makes Mr. De Young "not the easiest man to deal with on the Productivity Council, which was denounced as a show-window farce. The union recently snubbed a council seminar at Kingston.

REFUSES TO CONDEMN

The policy conference turned down a resolution from the Sydney, N.S., local of the union, condemning the "stupid and unprincipled practice of union raiding."

In its place, the delegates endorsed an invitation "to all workers in our jurisdiction who are now members of our union to join with us in building a strong and unified union in mines and mills of the metal-working industry of this country."

A special welcome was expressed to Sudbury nickel workers who recently voted on an Ontario Labor Relations Board ballot on their choice between Steel or the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers.

The ballots have not yet been counted, but the Steel conference praised the Sudbury workers for their "decision to join the United Steelworkers of America." Steel has been fighting to take over the 17,000 Sudbury nickel workers from Mine-Mill, which was expelled from organized labor more than 10 years ago.

In the Dressing Rooms

By BRUCE STOVEL

TORONTO (CP) — Coach Punch Imlach of Toronto Maple Leafs praised New York Rangers goaltender Gump Worsley to the sky and credited him with keeping the Leafs from whitewashing Thursday night's Stanley Cup semi-finals, before it was shot into overtime.

"Worsley played a fantastic game," he said after Toronto's 3-2 victory. "I've seen a lot of good goaltending before, but nothing like this."

Imlach was also lavish in his praise of Leafs.

"I've never seen this club up as much for a game as it was tonight. They had a lot of chances, but we had better ones. But we couldn't get past Worsley."

Worsley played a fantastic game," he said after Thursday's 3-2 victory. "I've seen a lot of good goaltending before, but nothing like this."

Imlach was also lavish in his praise of Leafs.

"I've never seen this club up as much for a game as it was tonight. They had a lot of chances, but we had better ones. But we couldn't get past Worsley."

Veteran Red Kelly, the quiet-spoken coutse who scored the winning goal at 4:38 of the second overtime period, called it "quite a thrill." Kelly also assisted on Leafs other two goals.

LAUDS LINEMATE

He praised the play of left winger Frank Mahovlich, who scored his first goal in nine games and assisted on Kelly's winner.

"Frank was really skating and had a lot of life."

Mahovlich countered with praise for Kelly, who "played real good hockey—of course he always does."

Thursday night's performance was Mahovlich's best by far in the best-of-seven series in which the Leafs now lead 3-2.

New York coach Dicky Hardy figured the play which resulted in overtime goal should have been stopped before the goal was scored. As he dressed quietly, Harvey said in a voice that he figured referee Eddie Powers should have stopped the play after Worsley sprawled on the puck.

QUOTES POWERS

"I couldn't see the puck and I don't know whether Powers saw it or not," said Harvey. "Powers told me he saw some of it. But the rules say the referee must be in view for the play to continue."

Worsley didn't know whether the play should have been stopped "because I didn't know where the puck was." He added that Kelly told him after the game that he almost skated away from the New York goal because he couldn't see the puck.

Every Ranger thought Worsley was the whole reason why the New Yorkers got into overtime. They all agreed he played a great game. The Gumper himself couldn't say whether it was the best game he had played but reminded reporters that "Bower played a great game, too."

Rangers right-winger Andy Bathgate partially blamed himself for the winning goal. He said that he tried to "fire a pass" to the ice from behind the Rangers net to Camille Henry. "But the puck hit Kelly's skate, bounced high in the air and landed in front of Mahovlich."

Harvey was asked whether he is contemplating key changes for Saturday's game, said: "You can't mess around with changes after forcing overtime in the other team's rink. One thing, for sure though, our guys certainly won't let down. We've been counted out before but came back."

Hotspurs Defeat Portugal

LONDON (Reuters)—Benfica of Lisbon, Portuguese holder of the European Soccer Cup, was beaten by English champions Tottenham Hotspur 2-1 Thursday night but still qualified for this year's cup final because of its 4-3 goal aggregate.

The Spurs were beaten 3-1 by Benfica in Lisbon last month.

Benfica meets either Real Madrid of Spain or Standard Liege of Belgium in the final in Amsterdam May 3.

The Spurs now can concentrate on retaining the English Football Association Cup, the final of which will be played here May 3.

SLUM CLEARANCE

Municipal authorities in Britain demolished or closed 301,843 unfit houses in the first five years of a 1956-65 slum clearance program.

CBC Enters Bid

Networks Spar For Cup TV

TORONTO (CP) — With the Grey Cup game eight months away, CBC-TV yesterday began to develop today concerning broadcasting rights to Canada's football classic.

The CBC released a telegram from its general manager, M. G. Wallace, to Sydney Walker, Canadian Football League commissioner, advising it will enter a bid for the Dec. 1 game but is willing to share the rights with rival bidders.

Walker's telegram said the CBC will tell the league to consider sharing the rights available on a non-exclusive basis to more than one bidder; the second CBC bid will be for rights to exclusive coverage.

John Bassett, chairman and president of CFTO-TV, Toronto, which holds Eastern Conference television rights and, with the Canadian Television Network (CTV), has first refusal on Grey Cup rights, said in a statement that station will match the CBC bid and "in no circumstances will CBC personnel broadcast the game. We have anything to do with it."

WON'T PERMIT CARRYING

Bassett said league regulations should be based on the need to decrease waterfowl kill by 30 per cent in the Atlantic flyway, 50 per cent in the central and Mississippi flyways and 25 per cent on the west coast.

Will Curtail Kill of Waterfowl

FREDERICTON (CP) — Last year's drought in the Prairie provinces and adjoining United States created a need for drastic curtailment in the permissible kill of waterfowl next fall, the federal - provincial wildlife conference was told Thursday.

Lansing A. Parker, assistant director of the Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife in Washington, D.C., said fall flight forecasts indicate a major decrease in the central and Mississippi flyways and moderate decreases in the Atlantic and Pacific flyways.

No production survey was carried out in the Maritimes but the 1960 winter survey indicated a 14-per-cent decline in the number of black ducks.

Parker said hunting regulations should be based on the need to decrease waterfowl kill by 30 per cent in the Atlantic flyway, 50 per cent in the central and Mississippi flyways and 25 per cent on the west coast.

Will Bury Paret In Miami

NEW YORK (AP)—The body of boxer Benny (Kid) Paret was flown to Miami Thursday for burial. A total of 30,000 persons filed part the casket of the former welterweight champion in two days at a Bronx funeral home before it was taken by hearse to Idlewild Airport.

Mrs. Lucy Paret, 31-year-old pregnant wife of the fighter who died early Tuesday 10 days after he was beaten into a coma by Emile Griffith in a Madison Square Garden title fight, arrived in Miami earlier Thursday to make funeral arrangements. She was carrying a wreath labeled "Champ," which will go atop Paret's casket.

The dead fighter's son, Benny Jr., 2½, is left behind with an aunt in New York.

Paret's mother, brother, and the godmother of Benny Jr. accompanied Mrs. Paret on the flight to Miami. Mrs. Paret expects a second child in August.

WANTS FUNERAL SUNDAY

"I want to have the funeral Sunday," Mrs. Paret said on arrival in Miami. She added she has no bitterness toward Griffith.

A seven-man committee of the New York state legislature opens a hearing today on whether to abolish boxing in this state. The group has $25,000 to conduct the investigation and will report to the 1961 legislature which convenes in January.

In Fort Lauderdale, Fla., meanwhile, city commissioner William Mason prepared legislation either to ban or place stringent controls on professional boxing and said Paret's death prompted the move.

Mason said: "I can see no use for a sport that reverts man to his stone age ancestry and calls for the cultivation of man's cruelest instincts for success."

Griffith Boxer of The Month

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP)—Emile Griffith of New York, who regained the world welterweight championship by toppling the late Benny (Kid) Paret of Cuba in their ill-fated bout March 24, was named boxer-of-the-month Thursday by the National Boxing Association.

Archie Moore of San Diego advanced from 10th to fourth in the NBA's heavyweight rankings as a result of his decisive triumph over Alejandro Lavorante of Argentina. Lavorante dropped from fourth to ninth.

Montreal's Bob Cleroux is sixth among heavyweights.

Other rankings include:

Light heavyweight: Champion—Harold Johnson, Philadelphia. 1, Doug Jones, New York. 2, Eddie Cotton, Seattle. 3, Eric Schoepner, Germany.

Red Wings St. Mikes Tonight

HAMILTON (CP)—Hamilton Red Wings put a home-game playoff unbeaten streak on the line tonight when they open the best-of-seven semi-final series of the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A hockey final against Toronto St. Michael's College Majors.

Wings, first-place finishers to Montreal Junior Canadiens in the OHA Junior A loop, ousted St. Catharines Teepees in the league semi-final and eliminated Niagara Falls Flyers in four straight in the final.

The Wings have been idle for 10 days. The Majors, won the Metropolitan Toronto League crown Thursday night, edging Toronto Marlboros in the seventh game of their series.

Dark Versus Light Blues

Sunday's 'The Race' Day

LONDON (CP) — Sixteen lowpath in good weather on Sunday when 16 husky young men in sleeveless jerseys and shorts row their undergraduate hearts out Sunday in differentiated blue, between two shades of blue.

It's the Oxford and Cambridge boat race, an annual sporting event that is at once fiendishly Victorianistic, outrageously amateur and irresistibly English.

It is a manner calculated to convulse even the least impressionable tourist, is encrusted with tradition sufficiently irrelevant to be irreplacable. To talk a few examples:

Every morning a bouquet of fresh violets is delivered to the Oxford crew, but nobody knows who sends them.

Crews have three sets of clothes—one for rowing, one for evening wear, one for just walking around.

The last few weeks before big-race day are strictly regimented, practically on a 24-hour-a-day basis.

It's big another boat race, this yearly battle between the light blue of Cambridge and the dark blue of Oxford. After the big bulldup, it's all over in 20 minutes, and seems to be less exciting than the Head-of-the-River Race which doesn't get a line in the papers.

But somehow it's, THE race, as beloved an entry in the sporting diary as the Grand National Steeplechase, a recurring reminder that spring is at least a ritual moment for middle-aged men on the Thames towpath recalling how they nearly made the team in their time. It's a world papers, for men, a three-month break from studies and initiation into a training program that is suddenly all over in a flash after that six-mile, about-10 sprint along the horse-shoe-shaped river-run from Putney to Mortlake.

About 100,000 persons will line

Says Woodcock May Be Unfit For Consumption

FREDERICTON (CP)—Bruce S. Wright, director of the northeast wildlife station here, told the annual federal - provincial conference on wildlife management Thursday that the woodcock is in danger of becoming unfit for human consumption.

He said this game species is being hit by pesticides both in its wintering grounds in Louisiana and in New Brunswick, part of its summer range.

"As a result," he said, "60 per-cent of the woodcock population shows traces of either heptachlor - epoxide, or DDT."

Heptachlor is used in Louisiana for control of fire ants, and DDT is sprayed on New Brunswick forests to control the spruce budworm.

Mr. Wright said human tolerance of heptachlor is 0.1 ppm, a much more dangerous poison than DDT. But between the two woodcock may be rendered unfit for human use.

The annual kill of woodcock is about 500,000 90-per-cent of which is in the United States.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

Word from Ottawa that Roach Riders coach Frank Clair had stated that he "would trade both Ron Stewart and Gary Schreider if a good trade was available" came as something of a shock to Rider fans here, especially those who have followed the football career of the popular Gary who learned the game's fundamentals in this city.

Clair's statement arose from the prospect of the Riders having Stewart and Schreider commute to Toronto for educational purposes. Stewart commuted last year, and from a football view and from an educational standpoint, both were failures.

Stewart failed in his law examinations and will not be called to the bar. This year Schreider, the defensive captain of the Riders will go to Osgoode Hall, Toronto.

Last year Stewart attended classes all week in Toronto and was to come to Ottawa in practice as soon as possible each week. It did not work out, according to Clair. The news that Stewart had failed in his examinations stunned the Ottawa faithful, coming as it did on the heels, so to speak, of the communication difficulty.

Admitting he would trade both players "if a good trade was available," Clair said "it would have to be a good one. We want a good football player in return or there will be no trade."

And I know three coaches in the Big Four who would more or less give almost anything to have the famous pair on their rosters.

At the same time Clair cannot be faulted. He is coaching a professional football team and cannot be expected to sacrifice anything that might interfere with the squad's potential. After all there is little room for sentiment in sport.

Clair, an Ottawa story says, will be in the capital this Friday and will learn more about the situation. He will sit down with Stewart, then Schreider, and try to work out the problem.

But, the story says, this much is established in Clair's mind: If both Stewart and Schreider go to Toronto to study this fall, which appears likely, they won't be fulltime regulars with the Riders. And if a good trade can be negotiated with either Hamilton or Toronto, they'll be traded.

Unlike a lot of professional athletes, Stewart and Schreider realize the importance of security and the training necessary for success when they back the game of life on the universal gridiron. Too many fine athletes have come to the traffic and with little or nothing guaranteed for the future.

The more strenuous sports, such as football, hockey and boxing take a heavy toll in a few brief years. The wise athlete realizes himself for the day when no contract is offered. At the best, sport is but a temporary career.

Every fair-minded fan will hope that Stewart will be given another chance to crown seven years of study with success. No one, I believe, would blame Gary Schreider if he took a year out of football in order to be called to the bar. And I think he would make it.

The year the Riders won the Grey Cup I talked with Sister Mary Avita of St. Michael's Academy, Gary's teacher when he was learning the game and playing for the Academy team under Coach Jack Dorum. Sister Avita was one of the proudest "Schreider fans" in this city.

Sister Avita told me that during Gary's secondary days there came a time when he was lax in his studies. She called him aside and told him "No more football until you improve your studies." Gary played in the next game.

As an Ottawa writer said of Stewart, I will say of Gary. "Law is his career. We'd like to see him play some more football. We'd rather see him called to the bar."

'We Lost On Stupid Mistakes'-Blake

Hawks Poised For Repeat

By LAURENT CHIASSON

MONTREAL (CP) — Chicago Black Hawks, are poised for a repeat performance of last spring's humiliating upset of Montreal Canadiens in the Stanley Cup semi-finals.

The stage was set Thursday night when the Hawks capitalized on Montreal's defensive lapses for a 4-3 win and a 3-2 lead in games in their best-of-seven series.

The sixth game will be played in Chicago Sunday night and the Hawks ha e optimistic they can win it to advance to the cup finals.

"I think we can do it," exclaimed coach Rudy Pilous. The players agreed.

The Canadiens, who took the first two games here last week, now have their backs to the wall, but coach Toe Blake said "We're not out yet."

"We outplayed them by far," barked Blake. "But we lost on four, stupid mistakes. We gave them four goals."

CANADIENS LOSE EDGE

The Canadiens had a fair edge in play during the first period, yet skated off tied 2-2. The Hawks went ahead 3-2 in the second, but took a 4-3 lead early in the third and held on.

Bobby Hull, Eronco Horvath, Ken Wharram and Bill (Red) Hay got the Chicago goals, and all came as a result of glaring miscues by usually reliable goalie Jacques Plante and his Montreal defence mates.

Phil Goyette, Claude Provost and rookie Gordon Berenson tallied for Canadiens.

Plante got off on the wrong foot when he elected to stop Hull instead of the puck early in the first period. Hull lost control of the puck as he swept through the defence of J. C. Tremblay and Jean Guy Talbot. Plante, coming out to meet Hull, swept the puck aside, but it bounced off Hull's skate into the net for a 1-0 Chicago lead at 2:55.

Fontinato was the goat on Horvath's goal which tied the score 2-2 at 17:27 of the first. He was trying to pass behind the Montreal net when Reggie Fleming intercepted and slipped the puck to Horvath standing uncovered about 20 feet in front of Plante. Horvath let go a low shot and Plante had no chance.

The marked goalie was trapped at the side of the net when Ab McDonald whipped a short pass in front of the crease and Wharram just had to dump the puck in the open net for the go-ahead tally at 19:14 of the second.

HEM PLANTE IN

Plante was hemmed in by his defence crew of Jean-Guy Talbot and Tom Johnson when Hay scored Chicago's fourth goal at 1:30 of the third. Chicago's Pierre Pilote had carried from his own blue line when Montreal's defencemen backed right into Plante, leaving a corner of the net wide open.

Blake was boiling about the Canadiens' mistakes.

"What was Plante doing out of his net on that third goal, anyway," he asked. "You can say this—I've seen Jacques play a lot better than he did Tuesday night."

With the exception of Berenson's goal with less than 10 minutes to go, Chicago goalie Glenn Hall and the Hawks' relentless checking foiled them.

Berenson's goal, on a high shot to the upper right hand corner of Hall's net, brought the crowd of 14,950—largest for a playoff game here this year—new hopes.

Said Blake: "He's a good prospect for next year—another one. That's all we seem to be doing in this series—looking forward to next year."

Plante was pulled out of the net with about one minute to go, but with the exception of a close-in shot by Dickie Moore, Chandler and Hall had no real chances for the equalizer.

Plante faced only 20 shots during the game while Hall had to handle 36.

Gary Player Tops Masters Field

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP)—South Africa's Gary Player wants to win the Masters golf tournament for two reasons—prestige and honeichmes.

He took a big step Thursday when he blazed over the tough 6,900 - yard Augusta National course with a five-under-par 67 for the two-stroke lead after the first round.

The personable 26 - year - old star, who hasn't captured a tournament on the United States money trail since he won the Masters last year, is eager to hit the victory column again. He also wants to spend more time in Johannesburg with his pregnant wife and two children.

"If I win I can go back to my family. I'm homesick. I don't mind admitting it. But I don't want to go home if I'm not doing well."

Despite his status as defending champion, Player was almost overlooked in pre-tournament talk when favorites were mentioned for the 72-hole event. His putting had been sour and no Masters winner has been able to repeat the next year.

PUTTING GOOD

"I've been hitting the ball far better than last year," Player said. "But I've had a complete lapse of putting. I decided to go back to the putting style I used here last year."

What style is that?

"I'll tell you Sunday night," he said with a grin.

Whatever it is, it worked. Player had eight one - putt greens and used only 28 putts during his round.

In second place at 69 after a fine five-under-par 67 round was brawny Jodius Boroso of Mid Pines, N.C.

Arnold Palmer, playing out of Miami, Fla., and the most feared man in the game, matched player's 33 on the back nine and closed with a 70, good for a four-way tie for third spot with Mike Souchak of Grosslin-

Red Kelly Main Cog In Leafs' Win

By BILL MacDOUGALL

TORONTO (CP) — Veteran centre Red Kelly put grittiness much on a great performance Thursday night by scoring the winning goal in overtime as Toronto Maple Leafs defeated New York Rangers 3-2 in the 62th game of their Stanley Cup semi-final series.

But New York playing coach Doug Harvey claimed referee Eddie Powers should have stopped play before Kelly poked the puck in at 4:43 of the second overtime period to give Toronto a 3-2 lead in the best-of-seven set.

The sixth engagement is here Sunday night. If a seventh is needed it will be Tuesday night in New York, where the Leafs have suffered their series losses.

The goal was Kelly's windup to two earlier goals by his linemates, neither of which would have been scored without the centre's hard work.

"I couldn't see the puck and don't know whether Powers saw it or not," Harvey said. "Powers told me he saw some of it. But the rules say the entire puck must be in view for play to continue."

"Of course, it wouldn't do me any good to argue. Two thousand angels could swear it was right but it wouldn't change the decision."

SAYS GUMP 'FANTASTIC'

Toronto coach Punch Imlach described Gump Worsley's 42-save performance as "fantastic."

"I've seen a lot of good goaltending before, but nothing like this."

Every Ranger agreed Worsley's work kept New York in the game and sent it into overtime. The game, lasted 34 minutes and 23 seconds. Toronto goaltender Johnny Bower stopped 30 shots.

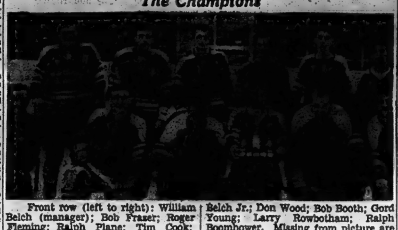
Stewart opening the scoring at 7:46 of the first period on an eight-foot shot that he flipped past Worsley after taking Kelly's pass from behind the New York net.

TIES GAME UP

On Mahovlich's goal, the redhead dug the puck away from the boards and got away a 40-foot shot that the left-winger tipped in at 12:21 of the second period.

A minute and 20 seconds later left-winger Gendron beat Bower with a 25-foot knee-high blast. Ingarfield tied it up at 12:31 of the third period. The centre tipped in a knee shot that defenceman Junior Langlois had fired from the Leaf blueline.

Defenceman Carl Brewer returned to action after a 3½-week layoff with a leg injury and played every shift, turning in a job that Imlach called "brewed as good as considering he was out so long."



Brewer said his leg—he had a severe charleyhorse that required an operation to relieve—is "100 per cent."

Centre Dave Keon suffered a bruised left knee when he fell late in the second period and was replaced for the rest of the game by Billy Harris. The injury isn't expected to keep Keon out of action.

SPORTS WRITER DIES

MONTREAL (CP)—Bill Gray, 65, the first to spot talent in many a sports big leaguer, died in hospital Thursday after a three-month illness. For almost 20 years Gray covered minor league sports in Montreal for The Gazette, first on a part-time basis, and later full-time.

This Is The Big One!

The Central Ontario Junior "B" hockey champions, the Marlow Siskins, will provide the opposition against Eastern champs, the Belleville McFarlands, in OHA Ontario round-robin playdowns tonight.

The Macs and Siskins came up with a thrilling battle before 1,400 fans in Kitchener last Sunday, Waterloo won that game 5-3, scoring three times in the third to do it.

But the picture has changed since then. The Macs have 14 players rather than 11 in Woodbridge Wednesday and they impressive 5-3 win there showed the benefit of three forward units. The Macs were skating as strongly in the third period as in the first two and went at full credit for the win.

Coach Gordie Bell feels that the Macs can take the Siskins here, with an all-out, 60-minute effort. The task won't be easy but a strong checking effort, as on Wednesday, might turn the trick.

The Siskins, like the Macs, have one strong forward line, composed of Terry Oliver, Wayne Clairmont and Larry Dietrich. Oliver scored three goals and Dietrich one in last Sunday's victory. Clairmont drew three assists.

But the locals have their own answer to this problem in the Weston, Hunter, and Smith combination. Dave Smith, with two goals in Kitchener and three in Woodbridge, has been flying lately. Moe Hunter had a goal in each game and Weston has drawn four assists.

Tonight's game, slated for nine o'clock, could well be a preview of an all-Ontario Junior "B" semi-finals.

Russ Soule Heads Minor Baseball

Well known sportsman, especially in minor circles, Russ Soule was named convener of the baseball branch of the Belleville Minor Sports Association at a well-attended meeting last night.

Mr. Soule will be in charge of all minor baseball activity in the city this summer. Assisting him is Cliff Belch Jr., recently named commissioner of softball here.

Bill Beecher was appointed secretary.

The Minor Baseball Association is a branch of the Belleville Minor Sports Association which also embraces softball, hockey and soccer.

Opening activity of the minor baseball body was the organization of peewee and bantam leagues. Eight peewee and four bantam teams were organized last night. Later midget teams and possibly juvenile clubs will be organized.

Convener Soule said this morning that he has coaches for all peewee and bantam teams but would like to see more offer their services. "It would be a fine thing if the coaches could have assistants," he said.

It was suggested that a midget team be placed in the South Hastings Baseball League. This depends of course on the stand the league takes in the matter.

Mr. Soule said he will bring up the matter of using the Alexite Field for all minor baseball activities. This will have to be arranged through the executive of the Minor Sports Association.

He said he expects minor baseball to get under way on or about May 24th.

Meanwhile anyone interested in helping out with the coaching duties is requested to contact Mr. Soule.

Yanks Stafford Goes Nine

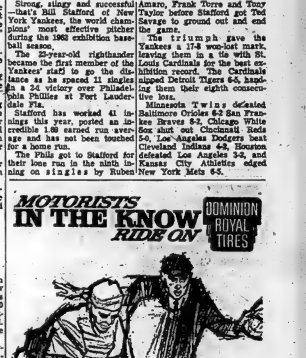
By MIKE RATHET
Associated Press Staff Writer

Strong, stingy and successful—that's Bill Stafford of New York Yankees, the world champions' most effective pitcher during the 1961 exhibition baseball season.

It was suggested that a midget team be placed in the South Hastings Baseball League. This depends of course on the stand the league takes in the matter.

Mr. Soule said he will bring up the matter of using the Alexite Field for all minor baseball activities. This will have to be arranged through the executive of the Minor Sports Association.

He said he expects minor baseball to get under way on or about May 24th.



Meanwhile anyone interested in helping out with the coaching duties is requested to contact Mr. Soule.

Amaro, Frank Torre and Tony Taylor before Stafford got Ted Savage to ground out and end the game.

The triumph gave the Yankees a 17-6 won-lost mark, leaving them in a tie with St. Louis Cardinals for the best exhibition record. The Cardinals nipped Detroit Tigers 6-5, handing them their eighth consecutive loss.

Minnesota Twins defeated Baltimore Orioles 6-2 San Francisco Braves 8-2, Chicago White Sox shut out Cincinnati Reds 5-0, Los Angeles Dodgers beat Cleveland Indians 4-2, Houston defeated Los Angeles 3-2 and Kansas City Athletics edged Boston New York Mets 6-5.

Nasser Opposed to Revival Of Tight Ties With Syria

CAIRO (AP) — Whatever the outcome of the upheaval in Syria, there is no sign of a revival of close ties with Egyptian marriage.

Sources in position to know said today President Nasser opposes any tight merger, such as the one that ended in bitterness and mutual distrust last September.

While the Egyptian president evidently would like to see Syria and Syria back in the same political family, he is working for some looser relationship in which each nation will retain its identity.

That also seems to be the idea of the military group currently in power in Damascus. Damascus radio announced the formation of a new ruling military command and said Thursday it already was working toward unity with "other liberated Arab powers." But the official statement said this unity must be on a sound and realistic basis and with conditions designed to ensure Syria's dignity and avoid errors of the past.

DRAWS FIRE ALREADY

Official and unofficial quarters in Cairo still are not sure where Syria is going. Air force Gen. Mowafak Azzawi already was working toward unity with "other liberated Arab powers." But the official statement said this unity must be on a sound and realistic basis and with conditions designed to ensure Syria's dignity and avoid errors of the past.

Although there still is a tendency to wait and see which way he will jump, there already are press hints he is leading a combined "sinister conspiracy" to sabotage the agreement reached early this week that ended the revolt in Aleppo of officers demanding reunion with Nasser's United Arab Republic. Syria's provisional government promised to hold a plebiscite on the question of future ties with the U.A.R.

Although opposed to union with Syria, Nasser definitely wants a plebiscite held to demonstrate just how much strength he retains in Syria. Until such a vote, he is reported unwilling to discuss political ties. He also wants the plebiscite delayed until the atmosphere calms down so the Syrians can genuinely express themselves.

Behind this is the determination not to get burned a second time. Cairo circles view the recent events in Syria as promise of eventual success for Nasser, and he consequently is unwilling to jeopardize his chances through hasty action.

While unwilling to discuss political ties with the Syrians, Nasser has insisted on being consulted on the wording of any plebiscite motion.

"It's like a marriage contract," said one source. "We must be consulted if anyone expects us eventually to sign the document. We do not wish the wording doctored in such a way that we would have no choice but unpleasant alternatives."

Dirty Walls, Floors, Sinks Painstakingly Constructed

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — Women television viewers must wonder where the makers of television commercials learn their skills with those incredible dirty walls and floors and those filthy, stained sinks that turn miraculously pristine and sparkling with a sweep of a sponge or a rub with a cloth.

The "before" part of the cleaner and scouring powder commercials appear to be poor reflections of the homemaker, but the truth is that dirty walls, floors and sinks are painstakingly constructed by dirt experts in film studios, and it is often a difficult job.

There are a number of techniques by which grubby walls are achieved. The easiest is to smear hands with jelly, peanut butter and other dark, sticky substances and then rub them off against light walls.

If no overall pattern of soil is needed, fine dirt is sprayed evenly on a wall treated with some grease to make sure it will stick.

USE A DOG

Soiled floors get get the same dirt-and-grease treatment and sometimes the producer uses a dog with deliberately muddied feet to put the proper imprint on the vinyl.

Sink stains are tougher. One expert said that to get a good photographable stain on a porcelain sink it is necessary to smear debris like peach skins and pits, vegetable peelings and coffee grounds for a couple of days. Good quick results are often achieved with cold bacon grease colored with soy sauce or gravy.

To make one series of "stain" commercials, a producer had to dirty up several sinkfuls with tannic acid and slide them, one after the other, before the camera to achieve the desired effect.

Oscar Awards Night Will Be Kept Within Two Hours

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Elizabeth Taylor won't be able to make it, but most of the other invited guests are expected to attend the 33rd Academy Awards Monday night.

Miss Taylor is making movies in Europe and hence will be unable to hand out the best-actor award, as is customary for the previous year's best-actress winner. Her place will be taken by another former winner, Joan Crawford (Mildred Pierce, 1945).

Burt Lancaster, who won last year for Elmer Gantry, will go on hand to present the best-actress Oscar. Most of the nominees are expected to be in the expectant audience at the Santa Monica Civic Auditorium.

Host Jerry Lewis and Greer Garson, nominated for best supporting actor in The Hustler, won't flip and dash to Europe for a journey from the east by rail. George C. Scott, same category same picture, pulls a no-show for a different reason. He is the only actor to be barred from the race on the charge it was too commercial.

HEADS SHOW

Commercial or not, Hollywood's biggest blaze will be televised, taken live at 7:30 p.m., PST over the ABC network. The man in charge of festivities the only time he's not award-heavy Arthur Freed (An American in Paris, Gigi).

"The show will be the same as in previous years—maybe a little faster," the producer said in his MGM office. "After all, there's not much you can do with it.

"The Academy Awards is a news event, like the world series. The main thing people want to see is: Who's going to win? The rest is unimportant.

"We may be 10 or 15 minutes shorter than last year's two hours. I had Danny Kaye do a number, and Jack Lemmone sang an Oscar Hammerstein medley last year, but we don't have anything y'a'll like this time. There's no point in trying to make a vaudeville show out of it."

Teen-Age Canada

Teen Girls Adopt Child

By JACK HUTTON

Three teen-age girls in Toronto have a basic purpose behind their baby-sitting and occasional chores-for-pay this spring—they're adopting a child.

Thanks to their savings all winter, some Korean child will have food, clothing and warmth for the next year—and all for $60.

This week I had my eyes opened about the significant part Canadian teen-agers are playing in helping underprivileged youngsters through the Save The Children Fund.

NO THANKS NEEDED

Said K. B. Marshall, national director for the STC: "We've got Boy Scout, Girl Guide and school groups helping us all across this country. And they rarely seem to want any public thanks."

The trio I first heard of (who modestly went no personal publicity) have been blitzing their block all winter, washing dishes, peeling potatoes, baby-sitting or any other chores that will get them closer to the goal of $60.

"The money," said Mr. Marshall, "will go to supplement a family's income in an underprivileged country. We take care of orphans through other programs, but this $60.

"The average income of the families we help through this adoption program ranges from zero to $400. Just add $60 to that and you'll find it is very significant. It probably means the difference between going to school and not doing so.

"I spent two years in Korea and saw cases where mothers were literally starving themselves to raise the school fees for their children. Education is literally an obsession there."

How have teen-agers been raising their money to help? Some, said Mr. Marshall, have saved money through group efforts like the three Toronto teen-age girls.

SCHOOL PLAY

A Western Canada school raised the money to "adopt" a child through a school play. An East Coast Scout group kept a little cobbiner in its meeting hall all winter where Scouts deposited their loose change.

What is the origin of the Save The Children Fund?

The movement was started 41 years ago by Miss Eglantyne Jebo, an English relief worker in Vienna who was filled with compassion for innocent victims of World War I—the homeless, hungry, sick and ill-clothed children of Austria.

Since her original efforts, STC has worked in more than 50 lands wherever governments have asked for help in caring for their needy children. No one will ever know how many lives it has saved.

How can teen-agers help?

"It would probably make an excellent summer project for teen-agers interested in something like this," said Mr. Marshall. "We can give them all the information they need if they would care to write to the fund, care of 96 Bayer Street, Toronto."

MRS. ROOSEVELT

When the project first started, one of the first people in the world to lend a hand was Mrs. Franklin Roosevelt who promptly adopted four children in different parts of the world.

Bill Boss, former war correspondent for Canadian Press in Korea (now public relations director for Carleton University in Ottawa), adopted three or four children when he returned from overseas.

If you're wondering how you and your friends can contribute to society, look no farther. I'd suggest joining the many other Canadian teen-agers who are helping STC project.

RECORD BOOM

Watch for the larger record companies to come out with enticing gimmicks in the near future aimed at getting you to buy more LP records.

RCA Victor will shortly be offering a free sampler stereo album with each stereo album bought at the regular price during March and April.

The gift disc is entitled "Stereo Action Unlimited"—and of course, plugs other discs.

London Records are following not far behind. Watch for two sampler albums entitled "The Best of Julie London" and "The Best of Martin Danny" at unusually low prices in your local record store.

HIT PARADE BLUES

Just found an ally in John McCrucken, 17, of Vancouver. "Don't pay any attention to your readers who want you to stop criticizing the Hit Parade," he wrote.

"I couldn't agree with you more that Midnight in Moscow is the best thing to hit the Hit Parade in months. And the more you can shake the idea that rock and roll is real music the more you'll find sensible teen-agers agreeing with you."

End Royal York Hotel Strike Seems Assured

Premier Robarts Says Pact Has Been Signed

TORONTO (CP)—An end to the Royal York hotel strike, now in its 30th week, seemed assured.

In a surprise announcement to a hastily-called press conference, Premier Robarts declared terms of agreement were signed Friday by labor and management representatives.

He said this agreement will go before a membership meeting of the striking Hotel and Club Employees Union (CLC) at noon Sunday. The union's negotiating committee will recommend acceptance, he added.

The proposed settlement, terms of which were not disclosed, came after weeks of secret negotiations by Premier Robarts and special mediator H. Carl Goldenberg, Montreal lawyer and labor relations specialist.

The premier said Mr. Goldenberg accepted the final Royal York assignment on condition that no publicity be attached to his appointment.

"I don't think negotiating greetings carried out in a gold-bath bowl achieves results," said Mr. Goldenberg.

'RESULTS SPEAK'

"The premier acted without publicity and I proposed that I act in the same way. The results speak for themselves."

He said the key Friday meeting in the Park Plaza Hotel went non-stop from 10 a.m. to 8:30 p.m. with none of the negotiators being allowed out of the room over the whole time.

"I fed them in the room at the expense of the government," he said.

The strike at the 1,600-room hotel, biggest in the Commonwealth, has cost local 290 of the union nearly $800,000.

The Canadian Pacific Railway Company's annual report said of its hotel operations across Canada: "Losses."

It is believed that settlement terms call for the return of a specified number of strikers.

Although unconfirmed, this number would be well below the number of those still listed as striking. However, many have since found employment elsewhere, so that virtually no one will be left on the street.

The union had long maintained it would accept no settlement that discriminated against any of the strikers when it came to re-employment.

Of the 1,179 employees who went on strike April 24, 1961, 531 returned to work. The union claimed 485 remained on strike, while management put the figure at 403. The rest found other jobs.

After 10 months of fruitless negotiations, the strike began as a matter of routine. But pay issues faded into the background as conciliation machinery seemed away at each basic questions as the right to strike and management rights.

Virtually no violence flared during the strike. However, considerable bitterness arose in municipal and provincial government circles, and many prominent Torontonians were divided on the question of cross-

FINANCIAL BILL CLEARS HURDLE IN PARLIAMENT

Forces Companies, Unions Bare Secrets

OTTAWA (CP) — After five days of almost continuous debate the Commons has completed its main study of the government's controversial bill compelling corporations and unions in Canada to bare their innermost financial secrets.

The clause-by-clause scrutiny finally ended Friday and with all that remains is for the MPs to give it third and final reading — usually only a formality — before sending it on to the Senate.

This will be done Monday before the Commons tackles Prime Minister Diefenbaker's resolution calling for an independent commission to establish new constituency boundaries on the basis of the 1961 census.

Veterans Minister Churchill gave the House a long list of government bills that will be put before the Commons at the start of the week.

The financial disclosures bill will require companies and unions to report to the government financial statistics and other details of their Canadian operations.

CALLS FOR PENALTIES

Federal employees will be sworn not to reveal certain confidential information contained in the reports and the bill calls for stiff penalties for those who ignore their oaths.

Small firms and a few large ones which already report certain information to the government through agencies such as the federal board of transport commissioners would be exempt.

Justice Minister Fulton said the information will give the government a clear picture of the extent of foreign control in the Canadian economy.

Parliament At a Glance

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

FRIDAY, April 6, 1962

The government's financial disclosures bill finally emerged from committee study stage after five days of debate.

Finance Minister Fleming announced that he will present his budget on Tuesday.

Prime Minister Diefenbaker said a Sept. 10 date for a Commonwealth Prime Ministers meeting is "satisfactory" to Canada.

Mr. Diefenbaker announced introduction of his bill on Canada's reform, details of which still haven't been revealed.

J. W. Pickersgill (Liberal—Bonavista-Twillingate) accused the government of "haste and bungling" in the Columbia power treaty negotiations.

MONDAY, April 9

The Commons meets at 2:30 p.m. Monday to debate government legislation. The Senate stands adjourned until Tuesday at 8 p.m.

BRANTFORD (CP)—A mother and two of her daughters died late Friday night when fire partially destroyed their home here.

Dead are Mrs. Pauline Krall, 47, Michele, 5, and Linda, 5. The father, Michael Krall, and a third child, Marianne Andrea were not at home when the fire broke out. A fourth daughter who lives next door, Mrs. Hank Wagenaar, was also out.

Gen. McNaughton Digs In For Columbia River Battle

OTTAWA (CP)—Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, an old soldier with more than one controversy on public career, dug in for another Friday night on the Columbia River front.

His age and 65 unspecified "dictator" prompted the announcement Tuesday by Prime Minister Diefenbaker that he was retiring as Canada's chief man of the International Joint Commission, said Gen. McNaughton, 75.

Two governments—again unspecified—had said Canada "down the river" in the 60-year Columbia treaty signed between Canada and the United States in January, 1961. British Columbia was party to the preceding negotiations.

"I wouldn't know," Gen. McNaughton told reporters who asked whether he plans to run for Parliament in the coming general election. But he had informed the government "I'd do what I thought was in the interests of Canada and that's what I'm going to do."

The whole Columbia issue needs to be aired before a Commons committee, said the man whose tenacious bargaining netted father the Columbia treaty.

"I certainly do," he told reporters, who asked whether he thought his opinions had been ignored in the treaty.

"I dissociated myself from the treaty right at the start," he said in reply to a statement by Justice Minister Fulton. They said the general apparently had had second thoughts and that "at no time did he advise against the signature of the treaty as finally worked out."

The clash of views forecast another episode comparable to the care of governor, governor James Coyne of the Bank of Canada, who last year fought unsuccessfully against a government decision to increase the bank rate.

The government's effort to fire him, Mr. Coyne resigned after obtaining a Senate committee hearing, a process he was unable to obtain from the Commons.

The general, making plain he doesn't plan to fade away in his latest campaign, spoke out on his return from Washington on his role as chairman of the International Joint Commission.

A body handling Canada-U.S. problems with water problems.

He was appointed in 1950, had had two previous tours of Canadian negotiations on the long-drawn-out Columbia questions up to the point where Justice Minister Fulton, other federal authorities and B.C. representatives sat down in 1960 to work out the hard terms for a treaty with the U.S.

The U.S. quickly ratified it last year while a Canada-British Columbia dispute, involving alter the treaty signing, held delay, similar action in the country despite U.S. impatience.

The treaty envisaged three

Think Detergents and Fertilizers Promote Growth of Algae in Lakes

OTTAWA (CP) — Household chemical detergents, plus chemical fertilizers may be contributing to the serious growth of sea-weed in the Great Lakes, a prominent oceanographer suggested Friday.

Dr. G. S. Landford, director of the Fisheries Research Institute, said scientists strongly suspect that certain detergents and fertilizers are to blame for the growth of algae.

In recent years the smelly lake seaweed has become an increasingly aggravating problem to thousands of residents along the densely - populated western shores of Lake Erie, and near Erieau on the north shore of Lake Erie.

The University of Toronto oceanographer said detergents and fertilizers with phosphate bases are believed to be the chief culprits. Apparently some detergents, after passing through the kitchen sink, do not respond to sewage treatment processes.

Dr. Langford was interviewed following a closed session of the Canadian Committee on Oceanography, dealing with water studies, in the Great Lakes. The committee, a co-ordinating body of federal agencies and universities interested in the study of the ocean, ended its annual meeting Friday.

Dr. Langford said sewage and industrial pollution in the Lakes continued to be one of the chief problems for the institute's expanding research activities. A Canadian - United States Great Lakes research conference was scheduled to begin in Toronto Monday.

Dr. Langford feels that the over-all quality of water in the Great Lakes is in danger of being polluted.

"The lakes, generally, are not becoming cess pools and we have the data to prove it," he said. "Away from the shore the quality of the water is good. There is a kind of self-cleansing action."

BEGIN NEW PHASE

His knowledge, he said, has enabled scientists to begin a new phase of investigation. Routine general sampling all over the lakes would be discontinued in favor of concentrated pollution studies, in the worst-affected areas.

RYNDAM TO SAIL DESPITE STRIKE OF RIVER PILOTS

Men Leave Jobs To Hold Meeting

MONTREAL (CP) — The 18,000-ton passenger liner Ryndam is scheduled to sail into Quebec City today despite a walkout by some 200 river pilots which threatens to tie up almost all shipping between Les Escoumins, Que., 140 miles north-east of Quebec, and Kingston, Ont.

A spokesman for the Holland-America Line said Friday night the Ryndam, carrying 890 passengers from Rotterdam, will leave Les Escoumains at 10 a.m. with or without a pilot.

The pilots, represented by the Federation of St. Lawrence River Pilots, left their jobs Friday morning to discuss methods of accelerating action on their demands for improved working conditions.

They plan to hold a series of general meetings in several shipping centres during the work stoppage and have charged that the federal department of transport and the Canadian Shipping Federation are using delaying tactics in the negotiations.

PROMISES HELP

Friday, Transport Minister Balcer promised to help mediate the disagreement if the pilots return to work immediately and urged them to allow the Trinity Brethren of Britain to move downstream to provide real immediately as a gesture of good will.

In a telegram to pilots and federation lawyer Marc Lalonde, Mr. Balcer said all passengers are already aboard the liner, originally scheduled to leave Montreal early Friday, and any further delays could result in severe hardship.

"If before this would be a matter left on your part to consider what may otherwise be unfair public opinion," Mr. Balcer said.

In a telegram to Mr. Balcer Friday, Mr. Lalonde said pilots proposed that pilotage fees be frozen for two years while "a system aimed at simplifying pilots' revenues" is being studied.

KEY ISSUE

The revenues are a key issue behind the walkout. The pilots claim the transport department's methods of calculating their pay are "complex and distorted" and result in inflated figures.

The pilots also have rejected a transport department suggestion that they consider the upkeep of small boats they use for ship-to-shore transfer and to maintain other services.

Meanwhile, some 23 vessels were idle in the port of Quebec harbors and a general meeting of pilots was scheduled to be held today in Trois-Rivieres, Que., 80 miles east of here.

The only ship to leave without a pilot so far has been the Polish liner Batory which sailed from Quebec Friday with 200 passengers bound for Copenhagen and Gdynia, Poland.

Fleming Will Present Budget Tuesday Night

All Members Expect Election Coming Soon

OTTAWA (CP)—Finance Minister Fleming's 1962 budget will be presented Tuesday night probably the last major move by the government before it calls a June election.

The budget is expected to forecast another sizable deficit for the sixth year in a row.

But whether it contains a pre-election announcement of tax cuts for the voters won't be known until after Mr. Fleming rises in the Commons Tuesday at 8 p.m. EST to deliver the budget speech.

There have also been reports of a possible boost in family-allowance payments.

With a record peacetime deficit in the fiscal year just ended, any major new benefits which the 56-year-old minister announces would virtually ensure another heavy dose of red ink in government accounts for the 1962-63 fiscal year which begins April 1.

Mr. Fleming dropped his surprise announcement of the budget date during a quiet Commons debate on government legislation.

MEMBERS APPLAUD

It was greeted with deafening applause by all parties, and also by a delighted anticipation about when Prime Minister Diefenbaker will set the election date.

Recent statements by the prime minister have made a June election almost a certainty. The Monday sitting is expected to be either June 11 or June 18, requiring dissolution of Parliament before Easter.

It appears likely that Mr. Diefenbaker will travel to Quebec City to obtain dissolution by Governor-General Vanier, as he did Feb. 5, rather than the March 31 election that year.

The prime minister also plans to travel to Quebec City next Saturday to remain at the Citadel, his official home, until after Easter.

Tuesday's budget speech will

Lack Clues In Slaying Of Millionaire

HASTINGS - ON - HUDSON, N.Y. (AP) — Investigators apparently lack clues in the slaying of a millionaire financial wizard, although the district attorney said a gun only a short distance from his temple.

Investigators said he was a graduate of McGill University in Montreal and had once been an economics professor there. His mother is reported to live in Montreal.

Brenbouse, with a variety of business interests, that included a string of foreclosures, had been involved in drops in court actions growing out of his financial operations.

Business associates were questioned by investigators, as was Brenbouse's estranged wife, Nora, 50, who lived next door to him with their four children after being separated in 1954.

Brenbouse leased money, administered real estate, conducted construction business, owned a bowling alley and a cabinet factory and served as a director of more than a dozen corporations.

Another Sputnik Put in Space By Russians

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union announced Friday night that it has put another Sputnik into space—the second in three weeks—and that the satellite is orbiting the earth close to its calculated path.

An announcement by the official news agency Tass listed the tasks of instruments aboard, but disclosed nothing about a cosmonaut, indicating the new satellite is unmanned.

The rocket, named Cosmos II, followed Cosmos I, launched March 25, and apparently was used in a similar fashion. The launchings followed a long period of silence in Soviet space, so far as it is known.

Cosmos I and Cosmos II mining an orbit every 102.5 minutes. It is circling the earth at speeds of 17.75 miles at its apogee, or greatest distance, and 17.5 miles at its perigee, or nearest distance.

Its shortwave transmitter, the announcement said, is operating on 20.005 and 90.0225 megacycles.

Order Gamblers To Testify Before Board

TORONTO (CP)—Joseph McDermott and Vincent Feeley, Toronto gamblers, have been ordered to testify at Ontario's royal commission on gambling, their counsel announced Friday.

Counsel for the pair and his clients may take action to postpone their appearance before the commission and the Ontario Court of Appeal has reserved decision against a conviction to obtain information illegally from a police officer.

Convicted on that and other charge was former provincial police officer Robert J. Wright.

Mr. Rose said appearance before the commission might be prejudicial to his clients if the cases until their appeal is heard. No appeal date has yet been set.

McDermott and Feeley are free on $50,000 bail each and Wright's bail has been set at $15,000.

California Student Found Hanged His Birthite Father Blames Reds

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — A week ago 19-year-old Newton K. Armstrong Jr. was found hanged in his bedroom.

It was the beginning of a series of strange claims and weird threats — made, amid a background of right-wing politics.

John Love, 22, vice-president of the group, said a caller told him the same thing Thursday night.

One member of the group reported finding a small hangman's noose on the seat of his car.

The San Diego Evening Tribune said Friday it was told by an anonymous caller: "I'm going to see if the Birch Society can protect Gary Riggs before I do."

A Gary Riggs, doing graduate work at the college told police he received a telephone call Wednesday night from a man who identified himself as a Birch Society member.

He said he thought the boy was killed by Communists.

Parkdale Residents to Hold Fireworks Display May 21

The Parkdale Ratepayers' Association voted to hold its time-honored Victoria Day Fireworks display again this year, at a last meeting April 2nd held in the Consumers' Gas Hall, Wednesday evening.

The meeting was held with President Harold Leech presiding and with Mrs. Kelly, Public School Board Chairman Wm. Townsend and Public School Trustee Mrs. Ross Kelly attending the monthly meeting of May 2nd, to discuss the new Parkdale school.

A letter from Mr. Townsend was read, advising that three gentlemen could not attend the April meeting because of Mr. Kelly's illness, and suggesting the May postponement. This met with the approval of the meeting, and an expression of sympathy to Mr. Kelly was made.

The president read a City Transit Commission letter replying to the Association request for late-evening bus service in Parkdale. It was advised that additional service cannot yet be provided since ridership on this route is only 25c-40c. However, the Commission will keep this matter under review.

NAME COMMITTEE

"I think", said Mr. Leech, "that a committee of one should be elected to carry on with this matter". The meeting agreed and Mr. Derek Riordan accepted the assignment.

Mr. Leech then read a letter from the City Clerk, replying to an Association request that the Parkdale Public Residents be allowed to vote in Ward 2?, on which the poll is held at the Community Hall.

"We don't get all we asked for", smiled Mr. Leech, "but people living on the east side of Lennoine St., on Gilbert St., and on the east side of Bleecker Dr., are now in a new Ward, namely 2?, and will vote at some location in that area."

The previous Ward 2B has been divided into two, Wards 2?, and 2?X", he stated.

The president, expressing appreciation for the efforts and courtesy of the City Clerk, added that the present Ward 2? must be reserved for coming residential development in the area to the west of Bleecker St. The members expressed general satisfaction with this solution.

A question, was asked about Association request to the city for an access from Gilbert to Lennoine Streets. It was agreed that nothing to the new school property be done in this regard and had asked the City Engineer to report and learned that no road allowance exists at this city. It was decided to approach the Public School Board for advice and aid in the matter.

100 MEMBERSHIP

Committee reports showed that well over 100 residents had already subscribed dues for the 1962-63 membership year. It was also noted that a bulletin outlining Parkdale organization in 1962 had been written and circulated to all homes in the area.

Mr. Alec Gilmer was named chairman of a fireworks committee for the annual Victoria Day celebration, and it was decided that a voluntary fund drive should be organized by the committee at an early date.

The annual election of new executive officers occurred following the business meeting. The new president, Mr. J. F. Morgan, spoke briefly in praise of the retiring executive and the exemplary job they had done. He noted the many years of community service by Mr. Ed. McGuigan as president, the many active years of President Harold Leech, Vice-President Derek Riordan, Secretary Mrs. Joan Reddick.

A motion of sincere appreciation was approved, and many members added their personal words of thanks.

The new president then reminded the meeting about the Public School Board personnel scheduled to attend the next meeting on May 2nd, and suggested that as many as possible attend.

Adjournment followed at 10:00 p.m.

FLEMING WILL

be Mr. Fleming's sixth—or seventh if one counts the "baby budget" of December, 1957, after the Progressive Conservatives took office.

CAN BE HIGHER

There has been a series of budget deficits starting in 1957-58, and the $650,000,000 deficit forecast for 1961-62, in Mr. Fleming's June 20 "Budget" last year would be higher, even in peacetime. It would push the five-year total of deficits over $2,000,000,000.

The budget's tax - change measures are a closely-guarded secret.

However, some form of tax incentive is promised in the area of industrial production is seen as a probability. Informants say such a plan has been under close study in recent weeks.

Mr. Diefenbaker also announced, last January, there would be tariff measures to reduce the flow of Canadian advertising expenditures to imported American magazines.

Girl Guides And Brownies Plan Rally

TRENTON — The Northumberland Division Girl Guides and Brownies are planning a rally for May 15. Starting time 7.30 p.m.

Brownies and Guides from Frankford, Batawa, Brighton, Bayside, Middleton, Percy and Trenton, east and west, will gather in the Trenton Community Centre to take part in a march past. Division Commissioner Helen Ferguson will take the salute.

The girls have been promised a camp-fire to round off the evening's activity.

In connection with the rally, all Brownies and Guides have been invited to take part in a poster contest. Prize winning posters will be displayed in downtown stores in the various centres.

As there is a small registration fee for the rally, it is hoped that money for the Guide camp at Wasgone may be raised in this way.

Marine Co. Obtains Permit For Addition

TRENTON — On Friday, building inspector William Andreachuk received a request for a building permit from the Eastwood Construction Company of Scarborough, for the now addition to the Outboard Marine Company plant on West Street. Estimated value was set by the general contractor at $300,000. A cheque for $200 for the permit accompanied the formal request.

Mr. Andreachuk said that the work on the addition should start very soon as the contractor hopes to complete the job by July 15.

NEW DEMONSTRATION

On Thursday, Fire Chief Geoff Hall, Mayor Jamed Donald, Councillor C. W. Graham, Councillor Rose Bartz, and town engineer Eric Allen say witnessed the demonstration of a new type of nozzle at the Trenton fire hall. The demonstration was attended by a considerable number of non-official spectators, who gathered to watch a firemen representative Cliff Moore put the big red machine through its paces.

Asked whether the town would consider buying the new piece of fire fighting equipment, Councillor Burtt told a reporter, "You were at the budget meeting; what do you think?"

In other words — no comment!

WILL SHOW FILMS

On Tuesday, April 10, the Trenton Film Council will hold a "Festival of Films" in Prince Charles School on Dufferin Ave.

Five films, products of the National Film Board, will be shown. Those attending will have a good chance to judge the excellence of the films which may be routed for free to council as a nominal charge.

President of the local group is Mrs. Lorne Green.

HIGH ATTENDANCE

V. F. Carswell, supervising principal of Trenton public schools, reports that 3064 elementary students attended classes in the town's six public schools in March. The enrolment shows a drop of 30 from February. Attendance stood at 93.53 per cent.

Expert Opinion To Be Obtained On Conditions

TRENTON — H. S. Pace, chairman of the Trenton Board of Health said yesterday that he had contacted the Ontario Water Resources Commission in Toronto about the condition existing in the basement of a house at 118 Leopold St. in Trenton. The house is owned by Frank Archer.

For the past three weeks, two pumps have worked day and night to keep the cellar rid of water; and a third pump has been set so that it cuts in from time to time, should the level of the water warrant it.

Where all this water is coming from, no one seems to know. Public utilities workmen have checked the area and say that no water mains have been broken or cracked.

Mixed with the water is a blackish looking substance, thought to be creosote. But the source of the creosote, if it is creosote, is another mystery, as a sump, where creosote might conceivably come from, is located a quarter of a mile away from the Archer home.

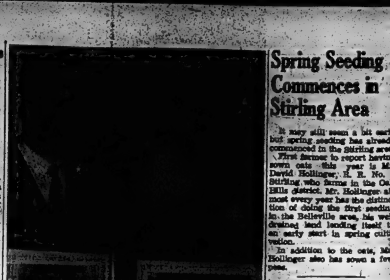
On Thursday, Mrs. Frank Archer and her father-in-law both suffered "blackouts" and the attending physician stated that their condition might have been caused from fumes coming from the cellar", according to Mr. Pace.

In all events, Mr. Pace said that a representative of the water resources commission would be in town the first or last week to look into the matter, and Mr. Pace said that he would be glad to get an expert opinion.

Three Men Die As Toronto Car Rams Into Bus

TORONTO (CP) — Three Toronto men died early today when their car went out of control on a curve on Lakeshore Boulevard and careened into the path of a chartered bus. The bus driver and several passengers were injured.

Dead are: driver Ted Rindress, 26, Gerry Smith, 24, and Peter, 24, and John W. Fotheringham, 32. Police said their car was being driven at 80 m.p.h. on the six-lane highway in front of the Canadian National Exhibition grounds when it was in collision with the eastbound bus.



The Gray Coach Lines bus, driven by James Burns of Toronto, was returning from Buffalo, N.Y., where the passengers had attended a music service.

Mr. Burns and two passengers, Elmer Walkon and William Kirk, were treated in hospital. Their condition was not considered serious. Several other passengers were shaken up but did not require hospital treatment.

The three deaths brought Metropolitan Toronto's traffic toll for 1962 to 26, compared with 30 at the same time last year.

THE GOLDEN YEARS

Letters Prove That It Takes All Kinds in Retirement Too

By THOMAS COLLINS

It takes all kinds, when retirement comes — . . .

"Why don't you stop writing so much about the retirement glories of Arizona, California and Florida? Haven't you ever heard of Louisiana? Ruston, Louisiana, for instance?

"We have all the advantages the other three states have, and more the disadvantages. We have just enough cold weather to kill bothersome insects and plant diseases. We have such fine climate that there is no season when we want to leave. We don't have earthquakes, deserts or tropical storms. We do have fishing, boating and year-around golf and gardening. We have plenty of room, too. . . .

"Those wives who don't enjoy having their husbands home on retirement simply aren't well adjusted.

"My retired husband collects old clocks. He has them all over the house. And they are working and setting all the time. But that's all right.

"I cook and he eats, for pity sake he likes them. They have muddy feet, and shed hairs all over the furniture. I don't do this. My husband never reminds me of this. . . .

"It is becoming increasingly clear to me that we need a new word for 'retirement.' The word retirement has come to mean 'to quit,' 'to sit down,' or 'to do nothing.' . . .

"People are not constructed to do nothing . . .

"Why should I be a moocy, grabbing lawyer take care of my estate? I have two sons. Each has a key to my house. When I die they can come and get as they please until they dispose of my belongings. Moocy I have in the bank has been put in the joint names of myself and my two sons. Real estate I own can be rented or sold by my two sons, with the benefits equally shared. What debts I have will be taken care of by my two boys. . . .

(Whew! What a field day the lawyers will have with this one.)

"If the time of the modern retirement wives, I work. For the last 13 years I have worked, and have built up pensions, insurance and such. So what happens? My husband informs me that I shall finance my own retirement when I retire at the age of 62 this summer . . . while he finances his own. If he insists on this, instead of saying that we pool our retirement resources for a good life together, I will leave him. So help me, I will!

"New situations are coming into the retirement picture in this modern age of working wives. Husbands who let their wives work had better face the fact they are going to be looking for companionship in the neighborhood saloon . . .

"Why don't we stop writing so much about the retirement glories of Arizona, California and Florida? Haven't you ever heard of Louisiana? Ruston, Louisiana, for instance?

Spring Seeding Commences in Stirling Area

It may still seem a bit early but spring seeding has already commenced in the Stirling area.

First farmer to report having sown oats this year is Mr. David Hollinger, R. E. No. 6 Stirling, who farms in the Oak Hills district. Mr. Hollinger almost every year has the distinction of doing the first planting in the Belleville area, his well drained land lending itself to an early start in the spring operation.

In addition to the oats, Mr. Hollinger also has sown a few peas.

FINANCIAL BILL

Opposition MPs had hammered at the bill all week, contending it is election bait, gives the government too much power to pry into corporate affairs and cannot possibly fill the role described for it.

CRITICISES SECTION ONE

John R. Matheson (L—Leeds) said one section would lay the foundation for a Fascist or Communist government.

The "catch - all" section gave the cabinet the right to do anything else that it likes to drive into corporations' private affairs.

Mr. Fulton said the Liberal MP was only seeking newspaper headlines.

The section gave the government additional control only over those companies of the sort covering annual financial statements inspection fees, and the decision on what companies need not report under the act.

FROM: ONE VIMY VETERAN TO ANOTHER...
Mr. Everett Liddle, of this city, received a special badge from Ontario Poppy Chairman, Mr. Maurice Searle, in recognition of his ten-years with work on the Belleville Poppy committee. The presentation was made at the Legion's Annual Vimy Banquet last night.

Provincial Poppy Chairman, M. A. Searle, Addresses Vimy Banquet at Legion Hall

"Vimy has been anonymously with Canada for years," said Maurice Searle, Provincial Poppy Chairman as he addressed the annual Vimy Banquet of Branch 99 of the Royal Canadian Legion, held last night at the Legion Hall, with nearly 100 members and guests present.

Mr. Searle reminded many instances which took place that day on "Vimy Ridge" and how many, many Canadian soldiers made the supreme sacrifice.

The guest speaker remarked that Canada's war is not a branch of the Canadian Legion remembering such a victorious occasion with a dinner, such as was held on Friday night.

Mr. Searle recalled many in-"Vimy" wasn't the greatest battle, "but I feel it is the opinion of us all that it was an occasion when Canada fought a battle with great courage and gained something that never would have been gained." One can realize the importance of "Vimy" for those who visited "Vimy" itself. We must remember that there had been a few attempts to capture Vimy by the French who sacrificed nearly 100,000 men, but Vimy could not be captured. So many of us here tonight, remember Vimy very well, said the speaker.

"The battle of Vimy was so great, the greatest of all battles because it was the commencement of what was to be the end. In those days this was a tremendous battle. There are 11,500 names of Canadian men who made the supreme sacrifice, on the walls of the great Vimy Memorial, the names of men who have no known graves.

"While I was on the Vimy pilgrimage a couple of years ago, I met the sculptor who made the Vimy memorial. He asked me what the finished carving was that flashed through my mind when I first saw it. I told him, what it was, that the master who created it tried to portray and tell the world that there would be no more war, and he replied that that was what he had tried to do. So many people in Canada are forgetting what a great heritage has been gained by a great price. In closing the speaker remarked that "how many people ask me what the great benefit for a Canadian Legion is", and I soon give them a good answer. I pray that you have continued success in this branch of the Canadian Legion."

The guest speaker was introduced by Everett Liddle and thanked by Norman Spencer.

Mayor A. M. Haig brought greetings on behalf of the City of Belleville and Lee Grills, M.P., on behalf of Parliament Hill.

Silence was observed as Armand Duffy flew "Last Post" and the "Reveille" before which a salute was given to those who had fallen, by Tom Hookings, who quoted from the 132nd Psalm.

Entertainment was provided by George McLean, Bill Gee, Harry Eaton and Clive Schmidt.

A vote of thanks was extended to the ladies auxiliary by Dick Kirby for the meal which was prepared for this occasion.

'Chalk Garden' Poor Choice For Theatre Guild -- Critic

By Harold Beahler

There are times when a reasonably conscientious man is torn between the attractions of nostalgia and the harsh call of duty. There is always a tendency to act as a friendly publicist for a well-meaning group of amateur players, more especially when one has pleasant memories of complicity in their productions in former years. On the other hand, even an amateur critic has a duty to his publisher and to the public which may lend him, on occasion, to cry havoc and let loose the dogs of war.

The Belleville Theatre Guild's production at the B.C.I. last night of Enid Bagnold's "The Chalk Garden" was during its opening scenes, something of a punishment. I found myself wondering whether this was a mediocre vehicle, poorly produced and dismally acted, or whether it was an execrable farce which foiled the quite capable talents of the local thespians. The enigma was compounded by a redoubtable collection of British accents which might have been more intelligible if presented in a village hall in the depths of the Yorkshire Moors. Nicky Thomas, in particular as Mrs. St. Maughan, had very effective visually, became so unconvincingly obscure in her utterances that their import could only be gathered by frantic grasping at the context.

Flo Yanover, as Miss Madrigal, presented a performance worthy of more sympathetic material. His efforts at preventing daughter Laurel from reliving her own tragedy were touching and effective. Beryl Statler, as Laurel, gave a lively account of herself, but she was such a healthy, happy little neurotic that it was hard to take her problems seriously.

Garth Allen, as Maitland, the butler, gave a convincing portrayal of a most improbable character. Elizabeth Hamilton, as the Judge, was capable, as always, and Helen Sulman quite surpassed herself as the little old lady. Lynne Brown, star of the Quinte Secondary School players, was pleasantly cast as a nurse.

In conclusion, I feel that the fault lies in the choice of the play, and that the Theatre Guild is still capable of much better things. One is tempted to suggest that they place less emphasis on their Workshop Division and their Theatre Parties Division and concentrate on a really strong play selection division.

The production will be repeated tonight.

Mr. Archer said it might take some time before organized labor dines at a Royal York table, but this attitude will change. Speaking of the strikers he said:

"Their union leaders are going to recommend acceptance and I think the members will continue to have confidence in these leaders and accept the settlement."

Good Decision—But Late

Most Ontario residents—and certainly the vast majority of people in the Quinte district throughout which there is a high regard for the wonders of Algonquin Park—will welcome the announcement of Premier John Roberts that the present ban on prospecting and claim staking in provincial parks will continue unchanged.

Premier Roberts is to be congratulated on his ultimate decision—but we are not so sure that he and the members of his Cabinet are entitled to equal acclaim for what preceded this announcement and made it necessary.

Some time ago Hon. George Wardrope, Ontario Minister of Mines, said in the Legislature that he could see no reason why mining and recreation could not exist side by side in provincial parks.

Now this was either a case of a minister of the Crown expressing his own personal view—to which, of course, he is entitled—without having given consideration to the weight which would be given it because of his official position, or it was a case of one member of the Cabinet having been given the task of "flying a kite" to ascertain public reaction to a proposal to drop the existing ban.

If the first alternative is the true explanation, Mr. Wardrope would be well advised to think more carefully—and to consult his colleagues—before he speaks out in the future. There is, however, circumstantial evidence to support the contention that Mr. Wardrope was kite-flying. The interval which elapsed between his remark and Premier Roberts' official announcement that no change was planned was much longer than would have been necessary—or even defensible, had such a change never been mentioned in the Cabinet. In the interval there was widespread public reaction, an overwhelming number of the opinions expressed objecting to the mines and mines establish themselves in provincial parks.

If this was indeed kite-flying, Premier Roberts and the Government are still entitled to congratulations for listening to the voice of public opinion and heeding it. Those who cherish our provincial parks, and regard them, in Mr. Roberts' words, as a "priceless heritage"—a heritage which it is not only our good fortune to have had handed down to us from our forefathers but also our duty to hand on unimpaired to our descendants—would have been happier if the Premier had been so vigorously espoused by the Government that it would have been attended to elapse between the Mines Minister's suggestion and the Premier's disavowal of any such policy.

Echoes From Little Rock

There is a relativity about time which has no connection with Albert Einstein's theory. Any given period may seem long or short, varying not only with the individual making the judgment but varying also, with the same individual, with the nature of the event to which he is looking back. Nor does there seem to be any simple system of classifying events, of grouping them into the kind that seem to have occurred long ago and those which remain so fresh in our memory that we are surprised when we learn that "ancient history" has elapsed.

These reflections spring from the announcement that Orval Faubus will not seek another term as Governor of Arkansas. It is little more than four years ago that Governor Faubus had his name in headlines throughout the U.S. and Canada, because of his defiance of a Federal court order for integration of a high school at Little Rock. Yet, for some reason, this tri-dent seems to have faded into the distant past.

It would be pleasant if we could attribute this to the vast progress which has since been achieved in school integration in the U.S. We are not at all sure, though, that this would be accurate. True, there have been many areas in which segregation of white and Negro students has ended, and ended quietly without any repetition of the violence which brought notoriety to Little Rock. Yet it is still true that, in relation to the total number of segregated schools four years ago, those in which segregation has ended is disappointingly small.

Perhaps the reason why the heyday of Governor Faubus seems so distant is not the material progress made in the interval so much as a change in public attitude. In 1957 there was doubt as to whether the southern states would be forced to grant the Negro equal rights. Today most people outside of the Deep South would agree that what will happen is no longer in doubt, only when it will happen. The tide is flowing, slowly it is true but nonetheless irresistibly, towards the eventual elimination of all discriminations based on color or race. In that sense, Little Rock is indeed far in the past.

Ottawa Office Is 'M. J.' the Old Warhorse Sniffing His Election Wind

BY RICHARD JACKSON
(From The Ontario Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau)

OTTAWA — With his former Commons team-mate, ex-CCF Whip and House-Leader Rupert Stanley Knowles back in campaign organization, political watchers M. J. Coldwell is eagerly sniffing the rising election wind.

In retirement, but never quite completely, since the Conservative landslide of 1957, "M.J." is keeping on the old harness.

Lake Centre was carved up and divided between Moose Jaw and Assiniboia, a couple of mid-Canada ridings, and there is no "Mr. Coldwell" constituency and no election coming up.

While the size of the reasons the Prime Minister has been so set on getting the current "Redistribution" of Parliamentary representation in the hands of a non-partisan commission . . . he knows what large representation in the politics can play.)

Exhibit out of Lake Centre after an epic but losing battle to the Liberal majority in the 1957 Parliamentary Redistribution Committee, John Diefenbaker decided to try his luck in Prince Albert.

He had long practised law there, his home was in the city, but it had a solid Liberal-sometime-CCF record . . . the town had elected a Liberal Prime Minister Mackenzie King to Parliament.

"I'M FOR JOHN".

But Dief would take his chances, and as the result has suspected they weren't particularly good.

Mid-campaign M. J. Coldwell arrived back on Parliament Hill to direct operations from headquarters and pick up his mail in the Centre Block.

As News things happened, he ran into "Ottawa Offbeat" in the shadow of the Peace Tower one sunny morning.

How were things going in Prince Albert, for John Gordon Diefenbaker doing?

"Well," said honest, straightwalking "M. J." right off the top of his head, "if we can't make it, and I don't think we will, I hope Dief wins".

And that was the way it got into "Ottawa Offbeat" in "Hometown Ontario".

John Diefenbaker had a few thousand copies printed and distributed through Prince Albert, and "M. J." stated last he had unwittingly betrayed his own CCF candidate's interest but went to the constituency to "clear" he had ever said such a thing. Which is one of those "denials" that are not meant to be and never are believed, and so John Diefenbaker went through the campaign with what the Prince Albert Citizens were M. J. Coldwell's good wishes.

Why did M. J." even attempt an empty unconvincing "denial"?

Because the old Warhorse of John Diefenbaker was armed with a wire from "Offbeat" attesting that everyword of Mr. Coldwell endorsation was true?

What else could it be? He explained "M. J." after it was all over, "I was leader and could hardly not support the Party candidate. But it didn't matter, for everybody knew how I felt about Dief".

Welcome back, "M. J." on the old campaign trail.

STRENGTH FOR THE DAY

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

THE DOOR

Jesus described himself and his mission by a number of vivid figures. "I am the way," he said, "the truth and the life." "I am the light of the world." "I am the good shepherd." "I am the bread." "I am the vine." "I am the door." "I am the resurrection." "I am the way, the truth and the life." "I shall be saved."

Let us look for a moment on that latter statement. "I am the door: by me, if any man enter in, he shall be saved." The experience of getting to know Jesus Christ means entrance into real life. We start going places spiritually when we come, even in small measure, to appreciate who this Man Jesus was and is, and what he can do for us and for the world. There is no better way of describing Jesus and his influence than describing him as a door.

Strictly religion is dead religion. True religion has reference to life. It is a procession and a triumphal procession. We start out to achieve certain ends. There are many pathways, but the great pathway leads to Jesus Christ. And when our lives pass through his mind, through his compassion, through his love, and through his spiritual discernment, then we come out on the other side and find ourselves looking upon a heavenly landscape.

We have only learned the significance of life when we have learned to direct its energies toward Jesus Christ as the Object, the Way — the Door. "By me, if any man enter in, he shall be saved."

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

April 7th 1912

Belleville and district were visited by the season's first electrical storm early this morning. Loud rolling peals of thunder were heard, but only mild flashes of lightning were seen followed by rain of short duration. Oddities prognosticators contend that thunder in the spring of the year indicates colder weather in the offing.

Navigation opened in the port of Belleville over the weekend when the Hall-Corbett American Britannetta steamed into harbor with a cargo of gasoline. Owing to the early opening of navigation the tanker was put rapidly into service. Her sister tanker entered the Bay of Quinte through the Murray Canal and proceeded to Belleville harbor to open navigation, the earliest in years.

Although registrations have only been taken for about two days this week, reports today regarding the registrations had been accomplished by the Belleville brigade secretary at the Court House. Of those registered, eight were women.

Spring-like weather was instrumental in the local produce market being attended by the largest number of vendors seen this season. With the maple syrup season completed for another year, prices eased to $2.50 per gallon.

Letter To The Editor

Explains Meaning Of Report on PKU

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer:

I wish to reply concerning the question of phenylketonuria (PKU), which was discussed editorially in The Ontario Intelligencer. The condition is very rare, the incidence being in the range of 1 in 20,000 to 40,000 live births. The Province case is, of course, not the first to be discovered in Canada, nor is it the first in Ontario. It is, however, the first case to be discovered in Belleville, using the test kits sent out by the College of General Practice. According to Dr. Michael Peterkin, an authority on PKU at Toronto University, there are 20 PKU children in Ontario alone, from one to six years of age, who were detected in the early months of life and are now on the special low-phenylalanine diet.

I trust this explains the apparent discrepancy in the last Monday's report, and wish to thank you for taking an interest in this phase of mental deficiency.

Dr. Charles D. Dondale,
Chairman Research Comm.,
Belleville & District Association to Retarded Children.

It Is Impossible to Humor A Potential Suicide

By JOSEPH C. MOLMER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molmer: My husband has threatened suicide, for the last three months. Recently he said he "will end it for both of our breaks, call." Then he screams that he can't take it any more and runs into the bedroom, remaining there for hours. He is 40 and holds a responsible position. I have tried to humor him but I am now at my wit's end. Any suggestion that he go to a doctor is futile. — G.W.

"Humoring" isn't going to help such a serious situation. To be sure, some people use threats to get their own way, but too often, especially in mature people, such threats are not idle ones. Tell your husband to see a doctor, and let him help arrange such measures as may be needed to see that your husband gets immediate examination and treatment.

• • •

Dear Dr. Molmer: I am a girl, 14, I have been told I am fat. Now it is starting to clear up, but I have a cut on my face, two largest pores. They look terrible. What can I do to get rid of them? — G.M.

Nothing. You can expect the pores to become prominent as oiliness obvious as time passes. You are, of course, fortunate that the acne is clearing.

In some skins the pimples leave small scars. These also tend to shrink and become much less conspicuous. If, after the end of adolescence, the scars are a cosmetic problem, consult a dermatologist or a plastic surgeon about smoothing the scars. But I'd certainly wait a while before doing so.

• • •

Dear Dr. Molmer: My husband is 55 and of average weight. He now has an awful lot of gas on his stomach and around his heart. He has always drunk about 2 qts. of milk a day. Could that be the cause? If this could be causing it. — Mrs. W.

It could be that the coffee finally is catching up with him. Many people say coffee drinking. If he'd cut out coffee for a few weeks, it ought to give us a clear picture whether that's the trouble. (Drinking on. A caffein-removed types of coffee might help him. If the trouble still persists, I'd have the end of adolescence, the scars are a cosmetic problem.

Disassociate Selves From Earlier Letter

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer.

This letter is with reference to the letter which appeared on your editorial page of April 3rd under the caption, "Transit Committee Member Protests."

We, the undersigned members of the Belleville Transit Commission, are most sincerely interested in the successful operation of the bus lines, and must therefore also upset at seeing a main city artery blocked off and bus terminals removed, with a possible loss of revenue to the Commission, as pointed out at our last meeting, the commission took what action it felt should be taken in protecting the interests of the taxpayer in this city, the attitude taken by the writer of the letter of a letter to the mayor and council, protesting the attitude taken and asking for something to be done.

Neither at this meeting nor at any other time was there discussed or mentioned a "return to the editor" and the two undersigned members of the commission had no prior knowledge of this letter. Our first awareness of it was when we read it in your newspaper. We feel, in fact, that some clarification is necessary and we would ask you to please give space to this letter.

While we uphold the right of any individual to express his opinions and sentiments in any way he may please to do so, we would emphasize that the letter you published on April 3rd was just that. The tone of the letter, its statements and opinions were those of an individual exercising his right as a private citizen and taxpayer. The tone, the statements and the opinions expressed in that letter were not necessarily those of the Belleville Transit Commission in its official capacity, nor those of the two other commissioners individually.

Driver Sues Man He Hit

Hamilton, Spectator

In Hickville, N.Y., recently the driver of a car which struck a pedestrian and broke his leg, sued the victim. The driver claims the accident caused his insurance rate to go up.

This is a new twist in the law; the Hickville courts apparently seeks to establish a legal principle that bears watching. Under this ruling, the pedestrian so far has been absolved from responsibility for an accident. If he gets hit, he finds out what grounds he has for a legal action. If the driver or the pedestrian has no grounds, the driver may collect from the pedestrian he runs down in relief and is content to forget the whole thing.

The law may come when pedestrians may find themselves in court to face charges of "dangerous walking," "walking while impaired", or "running away (on foot) from the scene of an accident." The law, as it now stands, means they are tested, required to show tail lights and subject to prosecution for acting while their licences have been suspended.

STORIES OF FAMOUS HYMNS

By HORACE B. POWELL

'God of Our Fathers, Known of Old"

God of our fathers, known of old,
Lord of our far flung battle line,
Beneath whose awful hand we hold
Dominion over palm and pine:
Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet,
Lest we forget, lest we forget!

The tumult and the shouting dies;
The captains and the kings depart:
Still stands thine ancient sacrifice,
An humble and a contrite heart.
Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet,
Lest we forget, lest we forget!

Far called, our navies melt away,
On dune and headland sinks the fire;
Lo, all our pomp of yesterday
Is one with Nineveh and Tyre;
Judge of the nations, spare us yet,
Lest we forget, lest we forget!

England always will be proud of its great poet, Rudyard Kipling, and the world will be forever grateful for the magnificent verses of "The Recessional", his greatest poem. They have found their way into many hymnals since the turn of the century.

Mr. Kipling wrote "The Recessional" in 1897 in celebration of the Diamond Jubilee of Queen Victoria. It was first published in the London Times on July 17, 1897, and a year later was included in a collection of hymns published by the American Baptist Publication Society.

The author once wrote of the circumstances under which his greatest verses were written. He said:

"That poem gave me more trouble than anything I ever wrote. I had promised The Times a poem on the Jubilee and when it became due I had written nothing that satisfied me.

The Times began to want that poem badly, and sent letter after letter asking for it. I made many more attempts, but to no further progress. Finally, The Times began sending telegrams. So I shut myself in a room with the determination to stay there until I had written a Jubilee poem.

Sitting down with all my previous attempts before me, I searched through those dozens of sketches till, at last, I found just one line I liked. That was "Lest we forget". Round these words, "The Recessional" was written.

Booklet Gives Many Hints To Wives

By EDNA KEARLEY

OTTAWA (CP)— When the wife of a man in the external affairs department finds they've been posted abroad, she can consult a booklet compiled by the wives of others in the department.

The booklet gives dozens of hints for foreign postings, not included in the department's official guide. It's the product of the External Affairs Wives Association formed three years ago.

"Our purpose is to exchange information, to help each other and to get to know each other," said Mrs. George Ignatieff, association president.

When the group was formed, the husbands were worried that it might become a lobbying group "but we don't discuss departmental business."

The association meets about three times a year and this year held a series of informal soup and sandwich luncheons at members' homes.

This gives the newcomers a chance to meet the veterans and the half-hour coffee period after each meeting becomes a forum for discussion of mutual problems.

TRAIN AT SCHOOLS

Those with children inevitably get around to the problems of education. Mrs. Ignatieff said one of her two sons had attended seven schools before he was 11.

The booklet's chapters produced contains a bibliography of children's books by Canadian authors, including an essay dealing with Canadian history, a subject not taught in many foreign schools.

The booklet also deals with informal affairs etiquette, from dining, clothing, climate, food problems and social customs.

"If you are going to a warm climate where dry cleaning is not available, be sure to remember that you have a cotton evening dress that can be washed," said Mrs. Arthur J. Andrew, a committee member.

The introduction to the booklet explains that the wife of an external affairs officer has a unique opportunity to help her husband in his chosen field. "One of the main assets of the wife of a diplomat is to be a friendly and interested host her contacts abroad as she would be at home."

Mr., Mrs. G. Bradshaw Happily Wed 60 Years

Monday, March 26 was a memorable day for Mr. and Mrs. Geddes Bradshaw of R.R. 4 Belleville, on the occasion of their 60th wedding anniversary.

It was just 60 years ago that Emma Martha Jones became the bride of Charles Geddes Bradshaw. They were married at the Methodist Parsonage, Roblin, by the Rev. Prospect Neville.

Although, Mr. Bradshaw does very little farming now they still live on the farm which they have worked for 48 years.

On Saturday evening a turkey dinner was held at the Orange Hall in Belleville for the immediate family including the sisters and brothers of Mr. Bradshaw, Mr. and Mrs. Percy Hunt of Whitby, Mr. Harvey Bradshaw of Brighton, Ont. and Mrs. Donald Bradshaw of R.R. 4 Belleville, Mr. Roe Bradshaw and Mrs. Clara Bradshaw of Belleville, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Jones of Tyendinaga (first cousin of Mrs. Bradshaw).

The hall was tastefully decorated for the occasion with pink and white streamers. A three-tiered anniversary cake centred the guest of honor table with pink and white candles on either side. In front of the head table stood a large basket of pink gladioli and white mums. Bouquets of spring flowers adorned the tables of the guests.

A toast was proposed to the bride and bridegroom of sixty years by their son Glenn to which the bridegroom responded. A toast was also proposed by Mr. Sam Jones on behalf of the grandchildren to the grandparents.

PRESENTS MADE

On Sunday morning the congregation of Front Road United Church of which Mr. and Mrs. Bradshaw are members presented them with two lovely easy chairs. The Christian United Church Women presented Mrs. Bradshaw with a life membership pin and Mr. Bradshaw with a tie clip.

"MUSICALLY INCLINED"

"Who knows his trade is a journeyman; a master is he that invents the plan; an apprentice, each and every man."—Motto of C. F. Vanderpoel Conservatory.

The joy found in musical endeavor and achievement as expressed by the girls and boys in the Belleville Collegiate Band impressed the listener. One feels a special gratitude and appreciation for the aesthetic guidance of these fine young people, through the Board of Education, by their leader and Instructor, Mr. Clifford Tremblett, A.T.C.M., L.Mus.

Surprisingly enough, nearly as many girls as boys play in the band. When approached about this matter, Mr. Tremblett explained:

"During my student days, a feminine performer on any musical instrument other than the piano and violin was not tolerated. Yet, when I studied at the Royal College of Music in London, England, a brilliant flautist in our group commanded outstanding praise for her performance. You've guessed it, a girl. This left a mark in my mind: women could play as well as men and often better. By the time I early Belleville so pursue a musical career, I proceeded to insist upon insisting . . . that the 100 women on the present Steinway (they cost around $5,000) for visiting artists, by courtesy of the Steinway Piano Company.

"The history of each Steinway may be traced through its serial number, where the records are kept in New York. Every Belleville lady learned exactly where and when the family's Steinway grand was bought, in a distant American city. Another discovered by a visiting pianist within six weeks after her birth. Each Steinway will have a life partner." Some have become owners through inheritance, some by good fortune (one was picked up at an auction for much less than a thousand dollars.)

But for yearly all owners prides of possession may perhaps be well summed up by the experience of Belleville's well-known teacher of music, Mr. William Connor, 240 Pinnacle Street. As a school boy he acquired his music teacher's Steinway grand piano that he resolved he would own one day, and finally fulfilled his dream.

Golf and Year-Round Sunshine Draw People to Palm Springs

By SHIRLEY and BOB SLOANE

Palm Springs, Calif. — As swimming pool for every four the Indians looked on, the Indians took an awful scalping in that $26 real estate deal for Manhattan Island a hundred years ago. But for those palefaces whose ancestors' properties may be bothering them, you can rest easy now.

Right here in Palm Springs, home of the world's richest Indians, you can get it back several million times over. This is the land of the Agua Caliente Indians, who have made it back water mineral springs after which the municipality palm was named. They've been keeping the poor palefaces in hot water for nearly the century now. One of the tribe has a pink limousine.

Others began across the road from Jerry Lewis which makes the comedian's place look like one of his jokes.

It all began after the Civil War when Uncle Sam decided to make things up to the poor redskin by parceling out land to him. In his infinite wisdom, he doled out sand in this barren desert which makes Israel's famed Negev look like the Garden of Eden.

Both tribal lands and individual lots were distributed in a checkerboard pattern, alternating with the territory already reserved the railroad for its right of way. The railroad didn't have long since fallen under the bulldozers of the subdividers. But until 1955 the Indians were prohibited from leasing their lands for more than five years, effectively holding back development and insuring a skyrocketing property values once the law was changed. After all, by 1955 even, so, the poor Indian knew he'd have more than 10 Hollywood personalities, ranging from Bogart to Zanuck, had bought homes here.

POETIC JUSTICE

The checkerboard pattern is beginning to fill in now. With a kind of poetic justice, the Indians hired out their historic mineral springs for the Palm Springs Spa, unabashedly advertised it as the most beautiful bathhouse in the world." They're also cleaning up by keeping the white man in hot water.

Today Palm Springs is a kind of cross between a less contrived Monte Carlo, a mini-Scottsdale and a less lavish Las Vegas.

What gambling is to Las Vegas, golf is to Palm Springs. For 23,000 residents there are 15 golf courses with velvet fairways and suede greens, two more planned, and enough driving ranges to drive an avid golfer crazy. (Apropos of nothing, there is also nearly one

Chi Rho Club Discusses Play

Last Wednesday evening was no reception so far as recreation was concerned, at the regular meeting of the Chi Rho Club. Everyone took an energetic part in the usual line of games. Here again competition among the four groups encouraged some good point scoring.

During the business period the president Allan Gardiner brought up for discussion, a discussion that had been made previously as to a bonus of five points be given to one who brings a new member to the club.

The Rev. Michael Caswell expressed thanks and appreciation for the splendid work presented pertaining to the play "Token Time" (Good Death). This particular play was put on by Christ Church last Sunday evening and proved to be a success in every aspect. The play will be restored at St. George's Church in Trenton this Sunday evening instead of the usual worship service. A discussion then followed as to future arrangements for the play and it was felt by the majority of members that a decision could be made after its showing at St. George's.

Following the business a queening game was conducted "Who's Who" which was a contest where baby and childhood photos were posted for careful observance. Joanne Cavalier was the winner when she guessed 16 out of the 23 pictures.

Everyone adjourned downstairs for refreshments. During this time all members introduced themselves and the newcomers were. Mary Evans, Dick MacLean, Nancy Darbey, Janet Griffin and Diana Dunn.

The membership secretary reported 34 present.

Lunch consisting of cakes, squares and cookies was prepared and served by Leslie Belrose, Kay Ingraham and Catherine Butcher.

Chi Rho chaplain Mr. Caswell closed the evening with prayer.

CULLEN — GIBSON

Pink magnifiques and white carnations adorned the altar and white satin bows the guest pews in Avonlea-on-the-Lake United Church for a recent lovely evening wedding, when Carol Gibson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Gibson, of Avonlea-on-the-Lake, became the bride of Douglas Cullen, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Cullen, of Allston, Ontario. The Rev. T. F. Townsend performed the ceremony, assisted by Mr. L. Neddow.

Mrs. M. Sills presided at the organ for the wedding music, accompanying the congregation in the singing of the hymns, "O Father, All Creating," and "Perfect Love."

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was radiantly lovely in her floor-length bridal gown of peau de soie accentuated by a beaque bodice edged with re-embroidered Alencon lace at the neckline. The long sleeves ended in slim points over the wrists, and the fully bouffant skirt, worn over many crinolines, was accented with rows of matching lace around the hem with bows. She wore a circular queen-like crown of crystals and seed pearls, with finger-tip veil of silk illusion tulle, and carried a bouquet of red roses.

Mrs. Linda Bennett, of Belleville, was matron of honor. The bride's three sisters, the Misses Katherine, Cecelia and Valerie Gibson, were her bridesmaids. All were identically gowned in copper blue organza over taffeta, fashioned with strapless lace bodice on empire lines, enhanced with a dainty bolero and matching mitts. Their headdresses were tiny petals of matching lace shade with over-the-face veils, and they carried nosegays of white 'mums and pink carnations, tied with pink streamers.

The little flower girls, the Misses Barbara and Linda Bellow, nieces of the bridegroom, were matching frocks of blue organza over taffeta featuring rounded necklines and puffed sleeves. They carried nosegays of pink and white carnations, tied with blue streamers.

Mr. Ralph (Archie) Kerr of Allston, attended the bridegroom, with Messrs. Harold Fritz, of Ameliasburg and Wayne Schaffner, of Allston, were ushers.

The reception was held in the hall at Ameliasburg, where the bride's table was appointed with pink damask and centred by a three-tier wedding cake flanked by silver candelabra with pink candles. The U.C.W. catered for the turkey dinner served to 100 guests.

The bride's mother, gowned in a beige sheath with corsage of red and white variegated carnations, received the guests.

Guests were present from Allaston; Brighton; Toronto; Oshawa; Campbellford; Trenton; Consecon and Belleville.

The happy couple will reside at Belleville R.R. 3.

Mrs. G.L. — My son is in 11 sophomore in college. One of his friends is rounding up volunteers to take part in a sit-in protest this summer down in Alabama. Peter's hell-bent to sign up and he has us all scared stiff.

This segregation fuss is none of his business. We don't segregate up here and that's all that really concerns him. What goes on down there is a local matter, and the Southerners can handle it. And if the law is being violated, the Federal Government can step in and straighten things out.

Getting a 100-year-old rebuke isn't up to a bunch of young students who aren't dry behind the ears yet. He should forget it.

• • •

Peter L. — I've learned that nothing good just happens by itself. Sitting around and talking about what's wrong never got wages raised, prices down or the British away from the first colonists. Somebody had to start something.

I'm surprised at my parents' surprise. They brought me up to know right from wrong, to care for religious instruction, and always to help others. And the colored people down South still have a long struggle ahead for their ordinary civil rights. What's the use of knowing the right thing to do, and then being a do-nothing?

As an American this concerns me. I'm against discrimination goes off peacefully. If not, and I'm arrested, my parents should back me up.

The Council: No responsible group, and The Council tries to be such, will say to an 18-year-old firebrand, "Go ahead. With faith in the justice of your cause, jump into the fray and get your head bashed!" But, we will say, as did Hamlet of a "sea of troubles," that opposing them will end them. We commend Peter for his intention to plunge into the thick of a battle he believes necessary. We bid him only, on the edge a bit longer, however, to make certain his precious young energy is being spent where it will bring the greatest return toward reform.

Obviously a "cold" Civil War in the South still dragging on, young enthusiasts like Peter are torn by pressures. Shall they join dramatic marches, grimaces, non-violent protests? Or should they achieve justice by prodding the state and the Federal Government to reach down and help the colored people? Or, again, should boys like Peter work on the grass-roots level of local politics, working for the election of "enlightened" Southerners who hail the long overdue righting of shameful wrongs to fellow men?

Mrs. L., has the right to ask Peter to pause long enough to ask himself: "Which course can be most effective in support

A Lift for Living

A Purpose for Which to Live

By Dr. RALPH W. SOCKMAN

Buried at the heart of Our Lord's Prayer is this petition: "Give us this day our daily bread." What do we think of when we say these words? This petition must mean, for one thing, enough to live on physically. Jesus knew what it was like to be hungry.

Some 30 years ago Sholem Asch wrote a book entitled "Three Cities," in which he pictured a wealthy young man going into a Warsaw ghetto to share the lot of the poor Jews. He cut himself off from his family circle. He refused to draw the full allowance available for him. The poor people had been from him. Finally one shouted to him, "Have you ever been hungry?" In his heart he thought he had. But when some time later he was actually without food, he discovered that it is one thing to see how little a person can live on; it is another thing to be able to see even that little.

Few, if any of us, have ever known actual abject physical hunger. But we must not forget the multitudes of God's children who do live close to the edge of famine. And with our warehouses bulging with surplus food, when we pray "Give us this day our daily bread," we should be praying for the nations to have the wisdom and good will to make the world's good go around the world's table."

A man may have enough to eat and yet not have enough to live on, in the sense that Jesus considered living.

Zacchaeus, the well-to-do publican, had plenty of food in his house, but when Jesus dined with him, he was awakened to a hunger for his own self-respect and for the welfare of his countrymen.

HUNGER FOR FREEDOM

When the Pilgrim Fathers left the security of Holland to risk their lives on the stormy Atlantic, they were driven by a hunger for freedom to think and worship and live.

If we could give ample food to all the earth's underprivileged, there would still remain to be satisfied all those hungers of the spirit for love and honor, for life and immortality.

In prayer we hold our desires up to God in order to sift them in His light. One purpose of prayer, is to teach us what we should pray for, that is what we are, doing when we pray, "Give us this day our daily bread." We are asking to be given the essential food that is good for our souls.

And when we ask for enough to live on both physically, and spiritually, we are led to the further consideration of what is enough to live for.

The late Katherine Mansfield, brilliant and sensitive English author, wrote before her death of a purpose in life. "I can control nothing if one isn't conscious of a purpose; it's like a journey without a goal. This is me in a very terrible state of affairs, because it is the cause of all the secret, profound unhappiness, in life."

We do not really have enough to live on until we have a purpose for which to live.

NATIONAL GOALS

There is a revived study of goals in our whole culture. A symposium on our national purpose was conducted by certain papers in 1960. Also, President Eisenhower appointed a distinguished commission to redefine our national goals.

Stanley Jones, the eminent missionary, returned from India some years ago to say that the most serious lack in the American youth were physically and mentally the finest our country has produced, but he said they lacked one thing and that is a sense of mission. He asked a company of college students, "What is your mission in life?" There was a painful silence. Finally, one spoke up and said, "I guess I've got ahead in the world, isn't it?"

Dr. Jones went on to say that he would not be ashamed to be company of buffoons men and women who were clear about their goals and were strong with the answer. If the ministers who can get before our young people and say, "Christ is just to get ahead in the world, meaning thereby to get a larger salary and have a finer house, then we may keep up with the Joneses, but we will not keep up with the Khrushchevs. America will lose out in the race with other nations if that is what is more, she will lose her own soul.

Successful Living

(A Canadian Social Worker Helps with Human Problems)

Wants Custody of Son

DEAR DORIS:—I am living with a wonderful man I am not married to, and we wish to get things straightened out over my son. I have a husband who won't give me a divorce. We are afraid if he finds us he will try to get the boy away. I do not have legal custody as there was no legal separation.

We would like to know if there is somewhere where we can get some help. We cannot afford to go to a lawyer as we just don't have the money.—HOPEFUL.

DORIS CLARK

DEAR HOPEFUL—Small boys need their mothers. Most courts hold out for this, but will not condone your living arrangements.

Doubtless the story behind it all will explain a lot. Your confidences are safe with the social worker in your own family agency, at little or no charge. There you will get the guidance you need.

The address in Belleville is the Children's Aid Society, 69 West Moira Street, which counsels on family problems as well as when children are involved.

DEAR DORIS:—I have a boy friend but my father doesn't know about him. If he ever finds out I don't know what I will do.

He keeps asking me to go out with him in his car. I told him that I like him very much and he likes me very much too. Would you give me some advice on what I should do? I am 16 going on 17 and he is 21 going on 22 years old.—16 GOING ON 17.

DEAR 16—Avoid him like the plague.

A car ride is a hazard at any age, but with a man five years your senior it spells double trouble—even without a father who objects. Make friends with somebody your own age.

• • •

DEAR DORIS:—A certain boy I know has a birthday coming up. This boy is really jolly well-with my boy friend. His girl friend and I are really jolly well too. We all get along fine. I was wondering should I get his pal a present.

He says he is only inviting me and his girl friend and my boy friend. I don't know what we're going to do. I am quite young; this is why I am asking.

My sister says I shouldn't be worried about boys. She doesn't know what it's like. I can't help it. Neither can my girl friend. What should I do? Get him a present or go empty handed? Please help me.—WONDERING.

DEAR WONDERING:—As long as you have the gumption to write a letter, you'll do all right about your worries! Would you like to read about dating, too? If so, write again.

Since the "certain boy" is giving the party, he hardly expects you to bring gifts. A birthday card sent through the mail will show your friendship. Or you could offer to bake cookies or candy for the party, especially if his cash is limited.

Anything expensive would be wrong.

• • •

DEAR DORIS:—Bill is 21 and I am 16. I feel like I love Bill. How can I tell if this is the real thing, Doris?

Bill has told me practically everything I know about sex and marriage. He has asked me to marry him this summer. However, if I marry Bill, I will not be able to graduate from grade 12 next year, then take a secretarial course and work for a few years.

I think my parents are trying to get us to break up again because he doesn't have anything for the future and he's not working. (He only finished Grade 10). Bill says he will not wait any longer than this summer for me. Is this true love, Doris?

When I am alone with Bill, I feel he is the only one and that I love him very much, but as soon as we are among other boys, I find myself flirting with them and wanting to be with them.—DESPERATE AND TROUBLED.

DEAR D. & T.—True love? No! Unpaid debts, no job—and won't wait to marry you. Is this any approach to love?

You are too far apart in age, education and point of view right now to make a go of marriage. Stay with your education and send him packing until he makes something of himself.

VIEWS CONFLICT

MOSCOW (AP)—The government newspaper Izvestia Wednesday night published a Communist Chinese editorial supporting Soviet proposals for general and complete disarmament but also calling for agreement on partial disarmament. Western observers said the Chinese statement, published in the People's Daily, appeared to conflict with the Soviet all-or-nothing stand on disarmament.

Folk-Singing Quartet Will Make Concert Tour of Russia

TORONTO (CP)—The Travellers, a Canadian Toronto-based folk-singing quartet with a repertoire of songs from 20 countries, will make a concert tour of the Soviet Union and other parts of Europe this summer.

The group, whose cross-Canada tours, television appearances and recordings have won them international recognition, will leave July 15 for a tour that will include TV shows in London and Paris.

Arrangements were made by Martin Bockner of Toronto, president of the newly formed Concert Arrangements Limited and executive of the Guild of Canadian Folk Artists.

Before embarking, the guild will bring Ukrainian tenor D. Hnatiuk to Canada for a concert series in October.

THREE MEN AND GIRL

The Travellers, formed eight years ago, comprise three men and a girl—Simone Johnston, 30-year-old native of Port Colborne, Ont., who has come a long way since the time she was dropped from her school rhythm band at the age of six because she couldn't beat time.

Simone comes from a singing family—her father began teaching her folk songs when she was a two—and is a product of music festivals and concerts in Port Colborne and Welland, Ont.

Sid Dolgoy, 28, of Winnipeg, at one time was a fifth member of the group, working as an accompanist on the mandocello, a unusual instrument that combines features of the mandolin and cello. Now he sings and plays as well.

Jerry Gray, 29, is the only Torontonian with The Travellers. He's a dentist and a self-taught banjoist.

Ray Woodley, 27, from Copperclift, Ont., is a linotype operator whose interest in folk singing began when he made the acquaintance of a girl who liked folk songs.

An original Traveller was Jerry Goodis who left the group to launch fulltime bass of a family advertising agency in Toronto.

CANADIAN FIRST

Bockner said the tour will be the first time a "group of artists will appear in Russia presenting a repertoire of songs representative of Canada's cultural mosaic."

Among songs they sing are I'se the Byo, Vive la Canadiennes, Making Hay, Jerry's Rock, The Strawberry Roan and Black Fly of Northern Ontario."

Black Fly is also a favorite of the noted folk singer Pete Seeger but The Travellers claim "we had it first."

They say they got it in 1958 from an Ontario Hydro engineer who spent a summer building dams in Northern Ontario swatting black flies and composing a song about them.

SPEAKING of MANNERS

PATRICIA LEWIS

WHAT'S YOUR E.Q.?

Question: On the infrequent occasions when I drive into the city, I leave my car in a public garage for which I am charged by the hour. By the time I leave, the bill usually is around $2. Yesterday, I noticed that a woman tipped the attendant when he brought her car down in the elevator. I felt I was expected to do the same when he delivered my car and I had paid the bill. I never thought before that I had to tip in a transient garage, and wonder if this actually is the custom. — Mrs. McD., Peshkill, N.Y.

Answer: A tip usually is given for some special service. If the attendant put air in a tire or gave the windshield a good washing, then a tip would be justified. In a public garage, the service of parking and unparking a car is covered by the fee you pay. A tip, in addition, actually, is unnecessary.

Question: In a restaurant, is it permissible to sample food on that's on the plate of a dinner companion? If so, would that be done properly by the one attracting attention? — Mrs. C.L., Chicago, Ill.

Answer: You can take a taste of another person's food as long as you don't eat it from his fork. It's also rather clumsy to reach over with your own fork and eat directly from another's plate. To make the sampling unobtrusive, the person who's offering it should cut off a small portion, then transfer it to the other's plate with his own fork or spoon.

Question: When meeting my father-in-law in the back yard I usually say "Hello" or "Good morning." My husband says this is very rude, and that I should say "Hello, Pop," or "Good morning, Pop." Is he correct about this? — Mrs. P.W., Belleville, N.J.

Answer: It's always more gracious to greet a person by name, even if it's just a casual acquaintance. A member of the family certainly should receive the same courtesy. It would seem that your husband is correct in this instance.

Care Answer To Top Car Performance

By EUGENE B. MILMOE

Car "A" and car "B" — same year, same model — have rolled up approximately 19,000 miles, and have a little difference of the shelf general mechanical condition. Both cars are normally driven at approximately the same speeds over similar terrain. Car "A" runs well and economy is good . . . but car "B" runs hot and, of course, gas and oil mileage is poor. How come?

Well, it may be that car "B" is usually well loaded with passengers or cargo. Sometimes, this makes a big difference — tires are kept too low. In one case, the car "B" owner was trying to get by on regular gas, although a higher octane was needed. The resulting pre-ignition knock and engine laboring should have kept him off immediately. Carelessness plays a big role, too. Let transmission fluid, crankcase oil, grease or water run low and it's bound to hurt engine efficiency.

• • •

J.S. asks: "In using a booster battery to start, how should I connect it to my car battery?"

(A) Positive to positive, negative to negative.

• • •

From H.C.: "My car starts up promptly in the morning, no matter how cold it is. But sometimes it stalls, cut after a minute or so, and it's really very hard to restart.

(A) A faulty automatic choke can do this. Here's how. The choke valve doesn't open as it should, and so over-rich mixture soon smothers the engine. Then, you often have to crank out the excess fuel before the engine will fire.

• • •

T.E. writes: "My car cooked out on the road, and a state trooper cured the trouble in less than 10 seconds by just tapping the side of the carburetor, several times. The float needle valve must have been stuck by grit or gum. A little trick like this might prove valuable to many motorists.

(A) Most mechanics will try this tapping routine — and, as your experience proves, it can be a lifesaver.

• • •

N.R. asks: "When did tubeless tires first become standard on all U.S. — made cars? Someone in our office said it was 1955 — I say it was later than that."

(A) It was 1955 — I believe — when all car makers adopted them.

• • •

T.Y. asks: "Some years ago there were cars which had heaters under the seats for back-seat passengers. Why did they drop this?

(A) Several reasons, but mainly because water circulated too slowly, and heat was lost via radiation due to the long hose required.

• • •

From H.G.: You advised that some brake linings tend to squeal more than others. Mine squeal quite a bit. What kind should I get?

(A) A softer lining will probably do it.

Episcopal Church Drive Made for Money to Aid R.C. Priests Train for Congo Duty

By BERNIE KENNEDY

DETROIT (AP) — What men of the cloth mean when they talk of unity of religions is being demonstrated here by an Episcopalian (Anglican) drive for money to help train Roman Catholic priests for missionary duty in the violence-torn Congo.

The plea for the unique campaign came from Very Rev. Richard S. Weaver, dean of the Episcopal Cathedral of St. Paul.

"But the inspiration," said Dean Weaver, "came from God."

Dean Weaver was moved after reading, in a Protestant publication, an account of how 21 members of the Holy Ghost Fathers order were massacred by fanatical soldiers at Kongolo, on the upper reaches of the Congo River, last New Year's Day.

Originally the number of dead was 18 and Dean Weaver set his goal in the drive at $180,000 or $10,000 for the training of each replacement. Even that, he admitted, might be difficult to achieve.

UNITY IS GOAL

"It may take three or four years, but we won't stop," he said. "We feel it is worth while if it helps at all in making us all one."

Dean Weaver said the opportunity for the funds drive came at a time when he and his two canons, or assistants, were contemplating a practical effort in the ecumenical (world unity) movement.

"How can you explain that," he asked, "except that it comes from God?"

Many of the 1,500 parishioners of St. Paul's — including some of the 500 Negroes which make it the largest bi - racial parish in the U.S. — have responded to Dean Weaver's first appeal by contributing to the fund.

Despite its unique aspects, the campaign, termed the ecumenical charity fund, has been conducted with as little publicity or fanfare that often attends such efforts.

But the word has nevertheless spread. Letters and contributions have come from as far away as California, New York, Louisiana and Canada.

There is to date no actual accounting of how much money has been collected. Contributions received by Dean Weaver are passed along unopened to Rev. Joseph B. Stocker, of the Holy Ghost Fathers' junior seminary in Pittsburgh Church secretary.

"The money is coming in slowly but we feel the drive is off to a good start," said Father Stocker, who himself has helped spread word of the drive by writing personal letters of thanks of contributors and urging them to tell others about it.

In reminders to his congregation, Dean Weaver says those to contribute to the ecumenical charity fund "cut out love for the Holy Ghost" sum.

And he adds, "In charity, we can do something about what we have always been praying."

Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Cooke of Toronto were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Cooke.

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. James Wilson on Saturday, at Belleville General Hospital.

I never imagined there was so much pleasure and benefit in wearing an can-level hearing aid!

I have worn other types of hearing aids for years . . . then I tried the Miniature Hidden Ear and I immediately realized how incomparable it is to wear, and how superior in performance because there is no clothing noise or body static. Best of all, it's tiny and comfortable and can be worn behind either ear easily and inconspicuously by either men or women. I'd never be without it again.

Improved hearing provides happier living for you and those around you.

Hepatitis Toll Is High

OTTAWA (CP) — Infectious hepatitis in Canada last year reached a provisional rate of 67.1 cases per 100,000 population, 6.4 per cent higher than in 1960—the bureau of statistics reported Friday.

The 1961 rate was four times greater than at the beginning of the last decade, the bureau said.

Increases were recorded for every four-week period throughout the year, and in every province, ranging from 30.6 per cent in Saskatchewan to 111.8 per cent in Quebec.

The higher incidence of the disease was not accompanied by a corresponding increase in the hepatitis death rate.

This was given as 2 per 100,000 of population in 1961.

Dear Henry—I am a girl of 11 but look like 13 for I am 5' 3½". All the boys in our room are smaller than me, and whenever I go to a dance the boy looks up to me.

Because of my height, I do not dance much. What should I do. LONG LEGS.

Dear Long Legs — Don't worry, by the time you are 13 or 14 you will be the same height as the boys. It's your growth pattern. And 13 is correct to set for you to become a lady. As for you start dancing. So use dancing now and save your dandy long legs for later.

HENRY.

Dear Henry—I hope you can help me and the teachers with our problem. I have an 11-year-old boy.

His last three teachers have complained about him being giddy at school and not putting his best foot forward in school subjects.

When they chastise him he just laughs at them. What would you do to get him more serious about his school work? Is he hopeless?—MOM OF TEN.

Dear Mom of Ten—Your kid isn't hopeless. Yet just have to twist him by the tail to get him to get going. Here are some hints I think you can use:

1—Team up with a GOOD teacher and give your son some extra work and don't let him wiggle out of it.

2—Plenty of praise and encouragement will put the train on the track.

3—And once he is on the track keep pushing him till he is going so fast that he can't stop for water.—HENRY.

Dear Henry—My girl friend Jane sits in front of me at school. Whenever I stand up to read she says funny things which make me laugh. What can I do about it?—JOAN.

Dear Joan—Tell Jane to shut up.—HENRY.

Dear Henry—Which child will have a better chance in life, one who is bright but lazy or one who is ungifted but industrious? — What do you think? — ASKING.

Dear Asking—I think if you work hard you have nothing to worry about. If you are smart all the better, but you can't be just plain smart. If you really want to be the guy who deals the top of the pyramid you have to be both.—HENRY.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

The Yankee powerhouse, headed by two of the deadliest home-run threats in baseball, will repeat their 1961 feat as American League champions.

That statement comes from a chappie who should know—and has the utmost faith in his Bombers of the Bronx to keep the bunting fluttering from the tall staff in Yankee Stadium.

He is Mr. Ralph Houk, who copped a pair of titular gratuities in his freshman year as the Yankee mentor, and who hopes in regard as a sophomore.

He can dial "M" twice for murderous shots in and out of the park. Name any one. His twin-barrelled shotgun dubbed Maris and Mantle, blasted 115 homers between them last season and drove in 370 runs.

While the "Double M" is Houk's main offensive threat he has cleaters hanging around like Blanchard, Skowron, Byrn and Elston Howard. All of them are capped dynamite. They helped the world champions set a home-run record last season. Howard swung at a .348 clip last season with 21 homers and 77 RBI's.

Houk says he sees no reason why Roger Maris won't have another good year. "He might not hit 61 homers but I still expect him to hit in the 40's. Home runs are glamorous but I still get a lot more joy he helps me in the field, on the bases and in coming through with runners on bases."

The Yankee manager believes that if Mantle can escape injury and everything goes right this can be the year the Mick will do everything that has been predicted for him. "I never saw a better team player."

Houk thinks Whitey Ford can win twenty games. "We have a more settled pitching staff. We began with Ditmar, Turley, Duren and James last year and wound up with Terry, Stafford, Daley, Sheldon and Reniff. This year we have added Robin Roberts. I'm high on a young fellow named Jim Bouton."

Houk says he knows how valuable John Blanchard can be. Yogi is doing a man's job in the batfield. Clete Boyer, Hector Lopez and Bill Skowron are capable of hitting better. Boyer has been one of the better hitters in training and Lopez looks like he should look in the field and at the plate. "Lain Arroyo proved himself a great relief pitcher. We didn't know how strong and he was that good."

The Yankee manager points to his bench of Bob Cerv, Billy Gardner and Jack Reed. "We had no bench this time last year," he said. "We also have a young fellow named Pepitone who looks like he might stay with us."

The Yankees' biggest problem is the shortstop position. The vacancy was created by Tony Kubek, a .276 hitter, considered by many the best shortstop in the league, who was called into the army.

Houk has Tom Tresh and Phil Linz battling for the shortstop and "I haven't made up my mind yet. There's making it awfully tough for me. Both have done exceptionally well. Both are excellent base runners, good range and hit pretty well. Linz has the quicker hands and maybe he's a bit stronger. Tresh is a little quicker and has more power."

"Which one will open at short, I don't know," said Houk. "And I'm sure we'll both be using them when we open the season. Tresh hit .315 with Richmond last year, and Linz had a .347 record with Amarillo. Either will be able to fill the berth."

He has gone through certain experiences last year that will prove greatly beneficial to him this year, the Bomber boss points out. "I'm not saying I'm a better manager but I may be a bit wiser."

So there you have the 1962 edition of the Yankees, a pretty formidable array. If the Bomber hurler has holds up—and it should—Yankee fans may have something to cheer about this season.

Hawks Seek 'Fourth Straight' Sunday

Habs Plan No Changes

By LAURENT CHIASSON

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Canadiens, disappointed but not downhearted, fly to Chicago today for their do-or-die Stanley Cup semi-final meeting with the aggressive Black Hawks Sunday night.

The Canadiens trail the Hawks 3-2 in the best-of-seven series.

The odds are against them, but coach Toe Blake said Friday the players morale remains high.

"It's going to be rough," said Blake, "But if we can't win an away game we don't deserve the cup."

It is the third time in nine years the Canadiens go into Chicago down 3-2 in a semi-final series.

WON IN 1953

In 1953, the club shuffled its lineup, won the key game and went on to win the Stanley Cup. But last season, the Canadiens, plagued by injuries, bowed 3-0 and the Hawks proved there to their first cup win since 1938.

The Canadiens, playing subpar hockey since the series began, have no drastic lineup changes for Sunday. Neither do the Hawks, who have reeled off three straight wins after losing the series first two games.

The Canadiens haven't been able to put in good periods together in the series so far Only the Phil Goyette-Claude Provost-Dickie Moore unit has been clicking.

Goalie Jacques Plante's goaltending hasn't been as sharp as during the season, but his defence crew hasn't been giving him solid support either. Plante, however, is a money man and is tough to beat when the chips are down. He was the one who picked up the team in 1953 after replacing the veteran Gerry McNeil.

HAWKS CONFIDENT

The Hawks, meanwhile, are confident they have the Canadiens on the run.

"We're playing with more confidence," said coach Rudy Pilous. "After all, we hold the Stanley Cup and we have the pride that goes with it. It might be hard to take it away from us.

"I can't tell you we're going to win four straight. But we'll win the last game of this year's playoffs."

The Hawks were given the day off Friday, but Pilous planned to send them through a light workout today.

Blake felt the Canadiens tuned in their best performance in the 4-2 Montreal win Thursday, that's no reason why we shouldn't win at Chicago," he said.

In regular-season NHL play, the Canadiens won four games, lost two and tied one at Chicago Stadium. Their Montreal Forum is the only one in which they've been clicking.

Palmer Takes Lead In Masters

Shoots Sensational 66, Player Trails

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — The 1962 Masters golf tournament shapes up as a rerun of an old movie thriller on television—Arnold Palmer against Gary Player, going into the final two rounds.

At the midway point last year the two greats were tied for the lead at 140. This time Palmer is 136 after a sensational 66 in today's second round; player at 138 after a conservative 71.

So thoroughly have Palmer and Player dominated the tournament the last two years that it is almost as though it were a match-play event with only two participants.

The closest challengers going into the third round today were United States Open champion Gene Littler, who rode a sterling 68 to a 139 total, and Dow Finsterwald, Dickinson, Jr., whose 71 game him 141. But they are forgotten pursuers. All the attention was on the Palmer-Player duel.

Either can survive the cut-off of 146 was Al Balding of Kitchener, who shot a 76 for 143. Stan Leonard of Vancouver scoreda 77-74—151 and Moe Norman of Kitchener, 83-80—163.

Player didn't seem disheartened that he lost his first-round lead and fell two shots behind Palmer. The opposite seemed true.

The small South African star, hoping to become the first man ever to win the Masters back-to-back, said he preferred to be two shots behind Palmer because that forces him to abandon his usual conservative style.

"You can't afford to play conservatively on this course against a man like Palmer. He is always attacking."

HE'S HAPPY

Palmer, whose 66 was his best ever in the Masters, was happy with the 136 total.

"I like just where I am," he said.

Palmer strung together four straight birdies on the back nine at the tough Augusta National course, closing with a 31, one shot over the back-nine record set by Jimmy Demaret in 1940.

The only excitement on Player's round was an eagle-three he picked up on the par-five 15th hole with a long drive, a four-iron to the green and a 30-foot putt.

Downes, Pender Tonight

By MURRAY ROSE

BOSTON (AP) — Britain's Terry Downes, no holder of the world 'middleweight boxing championship, feels he has Paul Pender's number and will knock out the American in their third title fight tonight.

"I'll get him after the eighth round," predicted the cocky Cockney, recognized as king of the 160 - pound set by Massachusetts, New York and Europe. Gene Fullmer of West Jordan, Utah, is considered the champion by the National Boxing Association.

Despite the 25-year-old Lon. doner's supreme confidence, the oddsmakers here had Pender, a former fireman from Brookline, Mass., as 8-to-5 favorite in the 15 - rounder. A crowd of 10,000 at Boston Garden and a gross gate of about $70,000 is likely.

The bout will be televised by ABC starting at 10 p.m. EST and will be carried by CFTO-TV Toronto.

Weston Fires Winner

Macs Edge Waterloo 5-4

A waist-high 30-foot sizzler midway through the third period gave the Belleville McFarlands a 5-4 victory over the Waterloo Siskins here last night.

A seasonal record hockey crowd of 1,232 saw the Macs spoil the Siskins' two goals in the first, raise back with four in the second and split a pair in a desperate hold-off third period.

The victory gives the Bellcoached youngsters the lead in the OHA junior "B" semi-finals round-o-rods. They own four points with two wins and a loss. Waterloo has three for a win, defeat and tie and the Woodbridge Dodgers hold a point with a tie and a defeat.

Pete Weston fired the game-winning blast at 11.21 of the third period, his second goal of the game. The Siskins had tied the score for the second time when Weston grabbed a loose puck 30 feet out and his shot rocketed into the net.

Waterloo sent the full force of its attack on the Macs defence from that point to game end. At one time the puck lay an inch on the right side of the Belleville goal line after a scramble.

Siskins coach Bob Noble pulled his goalie with 45 seconds to go but the Macs buried back the six-forward bid for victory and skated off with the win.

The Siskins got out and twiddled their hockey sticks for 35 minutes waiting for the Siskins to put in an appearance. It could have had an attendance of three goals counting like winners in a loosely played opening frame.

The referee was open and their passing was far from good. But deadening goalie front Mims nipped in for the opening goal at 4.14 with Ted Vail first to home, and night minister later. Bob Dietrich gave Waterloo a 2-0 lead.

But the Macs took over in the second frame firing home three goals in seven minutes to take the lead. Hinder banged home Hewby's pass at 4.36 and 54 seconds later Keller's shot slid off the Siskin goalie's stick for the tying goal.

Doug Slegstrich's blasting slapshot from 15 feet out knotted the count and two minutes later Weston slipped Mike Hinder a pass and he rifled around Bob Wall and stuffed the puck into the net.

The second goal, with only three seconds left, was scored by Bill Macmillan doing the scoring. He picked up a loose puck at centre ice, beat Wall to the loose corner of the net and then rolled it in.

There were 16 minor penalties called, nine to each side.

Irish Blank Red Wings

HAMILTON (CP)—A goalie who switched his first two minutes of the game from the stands took over in the net for St. Michael's College Majors Friday night and turned back 39 shots as Majors blanked the Hamilton Red Wings 2-0 in the first game of their best-of-seven Memorial Cup eastern semi-final.

The second game will be at Toronto Sunday.

Bill McNabb was pressed into service when regular Barry Gary Smith pulled a leg muscle while making a sprawling save on Pat Martin at 2:08 of the first period.

From then on, with a stone-wall defence in front of him, the 19-year-old McNabb rose to spectacular heights to hold off the OHA Junior A champions.

Menard and Larry Ellcotte and Mike's Barry Mackenzie serving minor penalties, Dupont took a pass from Gary Dineen at the Hamilton defence, went around Bob Wall and stuffed the puck into the net.

The second goal, with only three seconds left, was scored by Bill Macmillan doing the scoring. He picked up a loose puck at centre ice, beat Wall to the loose corner of the net and then rolled it in.

There were 16 minor penalties called, nine to each side.

Lead Series 2-0

Beavers, Frontenacs Win

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Kitchener - Waterloo Beavers came from behind to dump the Hull-Ottawa Canadiens 4-3 Friday night to take a 2-0 lead in their Eastern Professional Hockey League best - of - seven semi-finals.

In Kingston, the Frontenacs trimmed the Sudbury Wolves 6-3, also getting a two-game bulge in that series.

Third games will be played Sunday in Hull and Sudbury.

The Canadiens dominated the first 19 minutes of the game at Kitchener, scoring twice. The Beavers, who finished third in the league standings, came roaring back in the second stanza with three goals.

Jean Ratelle led the hustling K-W club with two goals—one in the second period which proved to be the winner, and an insurance marker in the third after Canadien goaltender Cesare Maniago had lost his stick.

The other Beaver tallies were by Len Ronson and Bryan Hextall.

Jean Gauthier and Keith McCreary scored for the Habs. Referee Frank Udvari called nine penalties, the Beavers taking five. A crowd, of 3,188 watched the game.

The Frontenac punch for the second straight game came from the second string of Terry Gray, Bobby Leiter and Don Blackburn.

Gray, who scored 40 goals in the 1960-61 season, but playing below that this year, set things for three of the Fronts' markers. Leiter, who centres the line, scored twice, and Blackburn added another.

Kingston took a 2-1 lead in the first period and added three more goals in the second.

Twenty - six minutes in penalties were handed out in the rowdy opening period, highlighted by a long argument from the Wolves about Tepper's goal, which seemed to hit the inside of the post and bounce out.

Sudbury marksmen were Ed Sneidewice, Dennis Kassian and Dennis Rathwell. Rathwell's goal came on a penalty shot in the first period.

Kingston outshot the Wolves 33-23.

Curlers Suggest Rule Change

LINDSAY, Ont. (CP) — The Ontario Curling Association executive Friday night recommended a rule change to make it tougher for curlers from other parts of Canada to compete in provincial bonspiels.

The OCA executive at the annual spring meeting proposed that curlers must take up residence in Ontario before they can qualify for competition the following winter.

The Canadian Curling Association last month in Kitchener set the residential rule date at Aug. 1. The rule is designed mainly to prevent western curlers coming east to take part in Ontario playoffs.

The OCA executive also recommended clubs with more than 350 members be allowed to send two rinks to district playoffs for the provincial championship.

These and other recommendations will go before the OCA's October annual meeting in Toronto.

Injuries Bother Blues

Rangers Underdogs Against Leafs

TORONTO (CP)—New York Rangers go to bet tonight with two strikes against them, and a possible weakness down Toronto Maple Leafs' centre probably won't help much.

Toronto leads the best-of-seven Stanley Cup semi-final 2-0.

Toronto centre Dave Keon fractured a bone on his left knee in Leafs' 3-2 overtime victory Thursday night and his status for tonight's game was uncertain. Ordinarily a club would be overjoyed when its opposition loses a top-notch forward, but the Rangers may find that his absence will not make much difference.

Leafs coach Punch Imlach said he wouldn't know until today, but the suspicion Friday was that Keon will be dressed for tonight's game, even if he doesn't see full-time action.

And if he doesn't play, Toronto has spare centre Billy Harris, a smooth-skating stick handler, to take his place. Even the most optimistic club wouldn't expect at Harris's admirable season record of 15 goals and 19 assists in 51 games and occasional appearances in several others.

Right as they might, even with the sensational goaltending performance that Gump Worsley gave them in Thursday's game, the Rangers haven't won a game on Toronto ice since Oct. 6, 1960. That adds up to one tie and 15 losses in 16 games here.

Left winger Dean Prentice, who has a bad leg, is a doubtful starter for the Rangers today. He left the ice Thursday night but returned to play a regular shift and finished the game.

Prentice "didn't look so good," Patrick said Prentice "couldn't push on his bad leg at all and was disappointed."

Left winger Guy Gendron, woke up Friday with a gimpy left thigh suffered Thursday night but New York general manager Muzz Patrick said he figures he will play. Gendron's injury is a bruise on the left thigh that playing-coach Doug Harvey said "seems to be bothering him while he is walking."

Patrick said he is "unsure of Schinkel" as yet. Harvey said Schinkel, a handful of his teammates — several of them out voluntarily — skated Friday. The Leafs also held a light skating session, but only those who hadn't played Thursday night were on hand.

They included left winger Bert Olmstead, the tough veteran who has been out since late in the regular National Hockey League season with a cracked shoulder bone.

Imlach said "no decision has been made one way or the other" on whether Olmstead will play tonight.

He also said right winger Ron Stewart will continue to play on the Frank Mahovolich - Red Kelly line. It may be just coincidence, but when Stewart took over the job full - time from Eddie Shack Thursday night the line had its best night in weeks, scoring all three Leaf goals.

Schinkel and Olmstead could be in a pickle. They have no left wingers in the minors, eligible to be called up. Harvey said he could call up a right winger and "shift (Andy) Hebenton from right wing to left wing."

HOLD LIGHT WORKOUT

Schinkel, Olmstead, Stewart, Mahovolich and Kelly held a light workout at the Leafs' practice session Friday afternoon.

Harvey said he could call up a right winger and "shift (Andy) Hebenton from right wing to left wing."

WINDSOR (CP) — Kapuskasing GMs downed Windsor 7-2 Friday night to hand the Bulldogs their worst defeat on home ice in two seasons and take a 3-1 lead in the best - of - five eastern Allan Cup semi-final.

The Kays skated and checked Bulldogs into the ice throughout the game. The clubs meet again here Sunday and if a fifth game is necessary it will be played here Monday night. The winner goes against Montreal Olympics in the best-of-seven Eastern Canada final.

NOHA scoring champion the two years, lanky Ted McCaskill paced the Kays, with three goals. Billy Degurse added two and Gerry Hicks and Russ Bellveau scored singles.

Playing coach Joe Klukay and Tommy Walker scored Windsor's goals.

GOALIE SPARKLES

Kay goalie Al Burns was a major cog in the win, turning back a number of dangerous Bulldogs shots.

Klukay scored with his team a man short in the first period, but Bellveau intercepted a pass - out and tied it within 15 seconds.

McCaskill's first goal put the visitors in front in the second and they never looked back.

Penalties kept the Bulldogs in hot water continually. They served nine of 14 minors and had three goals scored on them while a man short.

And then—may I go my way
Knowing that even though back a number of dangerous
I helped him to live again
All this I believe—because
I am a Blood Donor.

Would Trade Stewart Or Schrieder

Clair Likes Bobby Kuntz

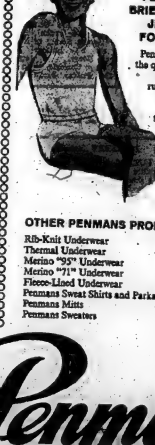
OTTAWA (CP)—Coach Frank Clair of Ottawa Rough Riders declared Friday he would be willing to trade halfback Ron Stewart or defensive captain Gary Schreider for Toronto Argonauts fullback Bobby Kuntz.

Kuntz was the only name Clair mentioned by Clair at a press conference at which he discussed the football plans for the 1962 season. The riders will open camp here July 1.

The reason Canadian Steward self Schreider may be traded is their plan to continue to Osgoode Hall Law School in Toronto. Stewart did this last year and Clair said Friday: "We are not going to go through another season of school and football."

Clair said Stewart and Schreider may play half the season, be traded or not play at all.

"There will be no trade unless we get a first-line Canadian player in return," he said. "We won't accept two or three untried players. We want to see Stewart and Schreider back but there will be no commutation."



Clair said 21 new players had been signed so far and out of that number there are two with a "wonderful chance" to make the club.

One hitch to a possible trade for Kuntz is that the Argo halfback announced near the end of last season he was retiring from the game.

The 29-year-old halfback, who has played nine Big Four seasons, lives in Kitchener and runs his family business. He also had a contract with Argos and this, along with a desire to devote full-time to his business, were the reasons he gave for his retirement.

The statisticians have the figures to prove that the established stars are the leading scorers in Stanley Cup play-offs, but it is the "unknowns, or city guys," who frequently come up with the big goals.

The record books are full of the exploits of Maurice Richard, Gordie Howe, Ted Lindsay, Elmer Lach, Bobby Hauser, Sid Abel, Howie Morenz, Charlie Conacher, Minah Marsh, Billy Cook, Frank Boucher and scores of others. They've all won cup games with clutch goals but the little men have sneaked in for their share of glory.

One theory—and it is logical—is that the stars are shadowed and checked closely and the unknowns, practically ignored, step in to break up the games.

GILBERT JOINS CLUB

Reg Fleming, a Chicago Black Hawk who had scored only four times in 26 National Hockey League games in the 1960-61 season, did it last year against Detroit Red Wings. He scored one goal in the final game that tied the score at 1-1. Then the Hawks on fire said they went on from there to win it.

The latest example is 20-year-old Rod Gilbert whose two-goals-one-assist effort Tuesday was enough to pull New York Rangers even with Toronto Maple Leafs after four games of their best-of-seven semi-final.

In 1951, defenceman Bill Barilko, never a prolific scorer, scored an overtime goal that gave Toronto the cup in a five-game set over Montreal Canadiens. Rocket Richard scored nine goals in that series, but the puzzling blonde defenceman, who later was lost during a Northern Ontario fishing trip, scored the cup winner.

Two years before, Sid Smith, who had played only one game with the Leafs in the 1946-47 NHL season, scored five goals in six games. He got three of these in the second match when Toronto won 3-2 over Detroit.

HELL WON MICKENAIRE

For real heroics, though, long-memoried folks go back to 1936 and Mel (Sudden-Death) Hill of Boston Bruins.

During the 46-game season he had scored only 10 goals but he went wild against New York Rangers in the semi - finals, scoring three overtime goals. In the seventh and deciding game of this series his goal after 48 minutes of overtime sent Bruins into the final against Toronto which they won in four straight.

The ironic part of the Hill story was that Lester Patrick of Rangers had turned him down years before because he figured the five-foot-10 175-pounder from Glenboro, Man. was "too small."

"I don't think he'd be able to stand the strain of a full season's play and, even if he did, he wouldn't have enough strength to carry over for the tough post - season playoff series," Patrick was quoted as saying.

Smart Money Being Placed On West Side Story to Win

By JAMES BACON

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — It's West Side Story all the way. At least so say the smart money bettors as Hollywood's annual Oscar race approaches.

The Manhattan musical's goal into Monday night's big show at Santa Monica Civic Auditorium an odds-on favorite to win in each of its 11 nominations, including best picture, best direction and best supporting actor and actress.

If that happens, then West Side Story will equal the academy award record of Gone With the Wind, which took home 11 Oscars in 1940.

The West Side Story band-wagon is even expected to get Natalie Wood the best actress award although she was nominated for another picture—Splendor in the Grass.

Miss Wood played the key doll of Maria in West Side Story, but the voters ignored that performance in the nomination-conference. Instead, her singing was dubbed by a professional singer and her dancing didn't compare with that of the Broadway professionals.

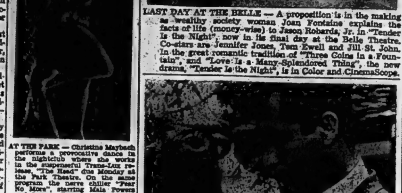
At best picture, West Side has strong competition from Judgment at Nuremberg, which also has been showered with nominations, and The Hustler, which got nine.

The Guns of Navarone, a box office smash and one of the most entertaining films in years, could surprise all. Funny, a charming movie, came out too early in the year to influence voters.

In the best actress division, Miss Wood's chief competition comes from Sophia Loren, who won plaudits for her dramatic performance of the year in Two Women. The Italian actress brilliantly crossed almost impassable charm between sexpot and serious actress. She's my choice.

The others are Geraldine Page (Sweet Bird of Youth), Piper Laurie (The Hustler) and Audrey Hepburn (Breakfast at Tiffany's.)

The top actor acc is the closest in years. Maximilian Schell is the favorite as the West defence lawyer of Judgment at Nuremberg but he's got ragged opposition from Spencer Tracy, star of the picture; Charles Boyer in Fanny and Paul Newman in The Hustler. And the surprise of the night may well be Stuart Whitman in the Mark. Watch this boy.



Rita Moreno must rate as favorite on the West Side tapestry but Judy Garland (Judgment at Nuremberg) is the sentimental favorite among supporting actresses. The others are Una Merkel (Summer and Smoke), Lotte Lenya (Roman Spring of Mrs. Stone) and Fay Bainter (The Children's Hour).

Unknown George Chakiris, as leader of the Puerto Rican street gang in West Side, picks the picture his size. He looks like a shoo-in for supporting honors, especially since George C. Scott (The Hustler) tried to withdraw his nomination. Peter Falk (Pocketfull of Miracles) and Montgomery Clift (Judgment at Nuremberg).

And then there's Jackie Gleason (The Hustler), big enough to steal the whole show. He's all on television, too.

LAST DAY AT THE BELLE — A proposition is in the making as wealthy society woman Joan Fontaine explains the facts of life (money-wise) to Jason Robards, Jr. in "Tender Is the Night," now in the final day at the Belle Theatre. Co-stars are Jennifer Jones, Tom Ewell and Jill St. John, in the great romantic tradition of "Three Coins in a Fountain", and "Love Is a Many-Splendored Thing", the new drama, "Tender is the Night", is in Color and CinemaScope.

AT THE PARK — Christine Maybeck performs a provocative dance in the nightclub scenes she works in the suspenseful Trans-Lux release "The Head" the latest film to open at the Park Theatre. On the same program is Jacques Bergerac's "Les Mains Moles", starring Mala Powers and Jacques Bergerac. Both pictures are first Belleville and District showings.

Canada Outdoors

By GERRY MORIEL

QUESNEL (CP) — When an Alaskan colonist found three of his sheep slaughtered and half-eaten, he didn't reach for rifle and snowshoes to go after the killers.

He called upon one of Quebec's slight professional wolf trappers.

The trapper waited three days, wolves travel an area with the regularity of salesmen, before lacing the carcasses with poison.

Eight dead wolves were found in the snow the next day, and the colonist's problem was over.

Operating with snares and poison, the trapper has reportedly snared about 500 wolves in the last nine months in frontier districts such as Alaska, where cattle and sheep are easy prey on forest-edged ranges.

More than 4,000 sheep were killed by wolves, wild dogs and coyotes in 1960 in the frontier fringe extending from Abitibi to the Ontario border, in Duplessis County on the Gulf of St. Lawrence.

Seeking a defense for new settlers and their livestock, the colonization department began talking the situation over with the fish and game department.

The result was a system started last April under which the colonization department hires the trappers and Dr. Lemieux's Wildlife Management Service directs them.

The aim is finding the wolf where he hurts the province.

"Under the bounty system, we were paying for wolves some of which would have been killed anyway," said Dr. Lemieux in an interview.

The bounty system, abolished last April, didn't allow an organized attack on harmful packs, he said.

Trappers came in from uninhabited, unhabited U p n o r t h, where the wolf wasn't a problem, with 100 pelts and claimed an easy $2,000.

Enterprising crooks—in some bush areas trained their own wolves, making the $20 bounty a profitable sideline.

More than $1,000,000 in bounties was paid by Quebec after the system went into effect in 1953. Critics said much of the money went for the ears of everything from cats to coyotes.

Now, the money goes into a concentrated attack on critical areas such as the Abitibi, mostly heavily colonized region in Quebec last year, five trappers have killed 235 wolves there.

Dr. Lemieux estimates that possibly 2,000 would have been killed under the bounty system to get the 500 that were actually harmful.

The director plans to send his trappers into deer areas once the threat to cattle and sheep is ended, and once biologists are available to study the effect of wolf control on deer populations.

Dr. Lemieux notes, however, that an abundance of wolves usually means an abundance of moose and deer. The wolves tended to strengthen these populations by killing off the weak and sick.

Hunsaker In Coma, Critical

Another Boxer Near Death

BLUEFIELD, W. Va. (AP) — Heavyweight boxer Tunney Hunsaker was unconscious and in critical condition today from effects of a knockout punch delivered in the 10th and final round of a fight Friday night.

He was hit by the same type of brain injury that caused the death of former world welterweight champion Benny (Kid) Paret, a New York fan, Today.

Doctor said he had a 50-50 chance for recovery.

Paret, to be buried in Miami, Fla., today never regained consciousness from the beating he suffered at the hands of Emile Griffith March 24.

Hunsaker walked to his corner after taking the 10-count and collapsed while being examined by ring physician Dr. I. B. Anderson about four years ago, where the fight was staged. His opponent was Joe Chetdon of Cleveland.

OPERATE ON BRAIN

Hunsaker, 32, father of two children and former police chief of Fayetteville, W.Va., underwent a two-hour brain operation. Dr. E. L. Gage said Hunsaker, a professional for four years, suffered a hemorrhage on the right side of the brain which caused pressure on the boxer's right side.

Paretz injury and death stirred up a storm of protest from politicians and fans to abolish boxing.

A New York state legislative committee opened an investigation in New York Friday armed with a resolution to inquire into the activities of racketeers, and gamblers and other unsavory elements in boxing.

Hunsaker's wife said that a few days ago a reporter asked her husband for his views on the Paret case. Hunsaker, with a record of six wins and 12 defeats, replied: "You can be killed in a traffic accident as easily."

In New York, assembly Speaker Joseph Carlino, R., Island, today urged legislative consideration of the boxing ban following the death of Benny Paret.

"It is very obvious there is an unwholesome influence in boxing with undue control in the sport and in the handling and manipulation of fighters."

Carlino said the committee will hold both open and closed hearings Monday for the first hearings have not yet been set, but they will probably be in a week or 10 days, he said.

Astrological Forecast

For April 8

By SYDNEY OMARR

Aries (March 21 to April 19) Good day to be with friends. To attend church. To listen and learn. To strive for wisdom. To read, exchange ideas. Later, flow for receiving friends at home.

Taurus (April 20 to May 20) Open purse strings when it comes to aiding in community or church projects. Revive interest in life, in what is going on about you by joining in local activities.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21) Cycle up. Today you can afford to be generous with time, money, efforts and emotions. Your judgment, apt to be "on the confidence.

Cancer (June 22 to July 21) Behind-the-scenes activity very necessary. Volunteer if your help requested. Offer benefit of experience and you gain more than you might imagine.

Leo (July 22 to August 21) Recent problem comes to fore. If persistent you can solve it. May involve older individual who eventually turns friendly. You will gain by silkswing Leo sense of fair play to shine.

Virgo (August 22 to Sept. 23) A phone call to close friend could do wonders for your morale. Express true feelings. Be sympathetic. Visit those confined to hospital. Volunteer for church, community activity.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Favorable lunar aspect to your zodiacal sign today means a new attitude could work in your favor. Sticking with "worn-out" ideas could find you out in the cold.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Your emotions run deep. Today you make a decision which will have great bearing on immediate future involving finance, loved one, career activity. Listen to one with experience, who's interested in your welfare.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Cycle not high but you can use this time to sum up, to satisfy emotional vacuum. Try now to get on right track. Re-evaluate recent efforts, make plans for future.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) If you can admit a past error, you might regain a friendship, even a way of life. You will be more than repaid for just a little humility.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Good for club meeting, for gathering of friends and family. Stress is on obtaining information and inspiration. Ask questions, attend church of choice.

Pisces (Feb. 20 to March 20) Everything needn't be black or white. Observe the subtle shades like gray, brown. Look for knowledge beyond the surface. Permit your sensitivity to reign and you will be happier.

If today is your birthday you are a positive person, you take sides, form definite opinions. You can be determined to the point of exasperating friends. But, with it all, you are wham, sympathetic and quite sentimental.

GENERAL TENDENCIES:— Much hustle, bustle. Transportation, modes of travel in the news. Cycle up for Taurus, Gemini, Cancer. Best for Sagittarius to "take it easy."

For April 9

Aries (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19): Gain through publishing, writing, sales and most of all, through a dynamic approach. Day to travel or contact persons who are far away. Don't wait. Act!

Taurus (Apr. 20 to May 20): Kind of day in which many transactions are made, reports, rumors fly. Most beneficial influence is created by steadiness. Keep purse strings under control.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21). Your word today is class. Be above gossip. If you can't say anything good, be quiet. Much in your favor if you set good example. Be independent behind. Have faith in yourself.

Cancer (June 22 to July 21): Absorb knowledge through reading. Cycle today encourages research, which could come in handy if you take the time to look, and then act on knowledge gained.

Leo (July 22 to Aug. 21): You may find yourself in the limelight. Act accordingly. Improve manner of dressing. Be neat, for later there may be so much activity you won't have time to "freshen up."

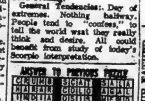
Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 23): Stress is on need to break away from restricting influences. Seek new avenues of expression. Meet new persons, shake off situations which weigh you down.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): You could perceive truth today without at first recognizing how right you are. So trust hunches, especially in connection with fantastic claims. However be practical and demand complete story.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): If you decide to sit back and take it easy today, you are in for a surprise. Plenty of activity indicated, which may include romance. Shifting emotions could lead to regret.

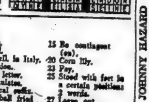
Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Get the "feel" of recent project. Study details. If carried out now, you can eventually gain. Pay attention to professional associate. He is not attempting to mislead you.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Be willing to change your opposing opinions. Course of action, if you are not producing desired result. Time to be reexamined, but not downright stubborn. Conserve energy. Rest tonight.

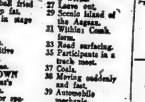


Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Favorable lunar aspect emphasizes long-rang view. Look for answers within realm of probability — discard quick-money schemes. Be practical. And keep mind open.

Pisces (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20): Allow romantic side of nature to shine. Trust others. You are practical today by being a bit impractical. This is a paradox, but likely to work.



If today is your birthday . . . you are apt to be impatient for results. You give your best and demand the same of others. You may think of yourself as "tough," but you're really quite warm in nature. October could be month which sees you been seeking.



General Tendencies: Day of extremes. Nothing halfway. People tend to "confess," to tell the world what they really think and desire. All could benefit from study of today's Scorpio interpretation.

McNAUGHTON

Canadian storage dams in B.C. totalling $44,000,000 to control the turbulent Columbia, joining southeastern B.C. and displacing 7,000 people. The project is a key concession made by the U.S. under Gen. McNaughton's insistence, would get half the extra U.S. power generated from the benefits of Canadian storage, plus $65,000,000 cash for flood-control protection.

Gen. McNaughton, who served in wartime commander of the army overseas, has been Liberal minister, United Nations diplomat and president of the National Research Council, gave his first public indication of Conservative disapproval at Washington.

DISAGREES WITH RESULT

But it was plain from previous evidence to the Commons external affairs committee that his views were at odds with the final result.

He felt Canada could have driven a much harder bargain than the one signed in January and the use of Columbia River basin water.

Speaking strongly Friday night, and indicating a fighting spirit, he said that the whole question is one that properly should be threshed out before a Commons committee rather than at public speeches. He said that indeed explain his silence up to now.

Ever since the treaty had been signed he had been criticizing for such a forum, he said, but "conspiracy of silence" had ever worked. He said he was not against the treaty "in principle" but that action should be taken to see that nothing was done that could be detrimental to the Canadian interest.

He didn't want to say any more on the technical aspects. His was considered his information was right, he would be shocked and rechecked it and this had been done too by competent authority he had every confidence in.

"I made it very clear to Mr. Fulton . . . and this is all on the public record, that I would not associate myself with this treaty. And I told the committee—there must have been 50 or 60 people present—that there was nothing for me to do as an individual, and the evidence I have predominantly against me based on what I think are my letters that are fallacious, until I have opportunity to refute them."

QUERIED ON 'REMOVAL'

He was questioned about his claim that he was "removed" from office. "I think that's a good word," he said.

He regarded himself as an international civil servant. His appointment was confirmed for life limit. There were proper procedures for ending the appointment.

"But I don't think a proper proceeding is to say because I or you're removed because of an age limit and reference from a statute, that is the end of the matter," he added, with a distaste.

He didn't elaborate but his remark was taken by some as a hint that he was going to be 75—the limit fixed recently for judges and which Prime Minister Diefenbaker is believed to contemplate for some of his colleagues in the cabinet.

Gen. McNaughton said he learned about Mr. Diefenbaker's remarks in the House of Commons.

Mr. Diefenbaker, Conservative leader, said Friday he was told by a well-known U.S. politician that the Canadian cut negotiators "threw Gen. McNaughton's ace in the air from the first throw."

Thomasburg

THOMASBURG — The houses and lot on the corner of the township road from Thomasburg easterly from the village on Highway 37, formerly occupied by the late Mrs. Hudson Adams and owned by Mr. Clifford Adams, has been purchase by Mr. and Mrs. Trooc-Whiting.

Miss Mary Hicks visited her sisters, Mrs. Clarence Barlow of Corbyville, and Mrs. Earl Dafoe of Foxboro, last Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Guy Thompson, Anne and Karen of Belleville, were recent guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Thompson.

Mrs. Charles Mills of Harlowe is visiting her sister, Mrs. Ed Thompson.

The annual meeting of the Thomasburg cemetery board took place in the school Tuesday evening of last week, at which time Mr. Herman Silliker resigned his position as treasurer and Mr. Gerald Goen was appointed his successor; also Mr. J. Fred Sexton, who was replaced by Mr. William Sargeant.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Porter of Toronto, are spending some time at the home of Miss E. Porter.

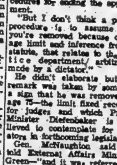
whether he was in or out of the convention meant little to him.

"Once it was established to my satisfaction that they would not reappoint from that office, then they could take their action in their own way. And once that action was taken, the next move is up to me."

OPPOSITION DARK

He referred to the Montana Libby Dam, which he has consistently opposed as a non-economic use of Canadian water, although provision for it is written into the treaty.

The dam, primarily a flood-control measure with some power benefits, would back Kootenay River water 40 miles into British Canada. The general wanted to channel the Kootenay into the Columbia headquarters at Libby "so they wouldn't have to pep up the Columbia Power project."



He said the Americans "pressured" when he first arrived on the joint commission that the Libby dam had been approved by the U.S. government. He said these Americans said the only thing holding up the dam was IJC approval and asked him to "sign on the dotted line."

"Well, they got the wrong man," said the general tersely.

The McNaughton comments on the whole Columbia issue highlighted Commons action Friday, with Finance Minister Fleming contending that the treaty the best deal he could be signed under the circumstances.

Mr. Fulton said when the treaty was signed that the B.C. government got about 50 per cent in cash conditions which then made the deal. He was not aware Ottawa an option on building Libby Dam as flood-control protection.

H. W. Herridge, CCF-New Denver, Kootenay West, Friday he was told by a well-known U.S. politician that the Canadian negotiators "threw Gen. McNaughton's ace in the air from the first throw."

ROUTE TO DISASTER — Map shows route of luxury liner Titanic on her ill-fated maiden voyage from Southampton to New York. On her fifth night out, April 4, 1912, the four-funnelled liner struck an iceberg southeast of Newfoundland and sank. (CP Newsmap.)

Fifty Years Ago, April 12th Titanic Said Unsinkable, Hit Big Iceberg and Was Lost

By CAROL KENNEDY

LONDON (CP) — "They're the breaking all records this time," said the people of Southampton that Wednesday morning in the spring of 1912. All eyes were drawn to the four huge funnels of the new White Star liner towering above the roofops.

She was the largest, fastest and most glamorous ship in the world. At noon she would sail on her maiden voyage to New York.

Small boys whose parents took them down to the dockside were to remember April 10, 1912, for the rest of their lives, and remember the stunned breakfast tables six days later when nothing would even seem quite as safe or secure again.

The Titanic had cost £2,000,000 to build. Already legends were growing around her. Though only 1,004 feet long, bigger that her 45,324-ton sister the Olympic, she gave the impression of being twice as huge, twice as solid.

COULDN'T SINK

She was 11 storeys high and a sixth of a mile long. A reporter on the quay wrote: "It was like standing by the wall of St. Paul's Cathedral."

And she was unsinkable. Not only the travel brochures, but even such sober technical journals as the Shipbuilder said so. By moving an electric switch the captain could instantly close 15 bulkheads and divide the hull into a honeycomb of watertight compartments. The ship literally float with as many as four of them flooded.

Pride in the "unsinkable ship" ran high. from ramrod, white-bearded Capt. Edward J. Smith, commodore of the White Star fleet, down to the Sheffield boy told a woman passenger: "Lady, God Himself could not sink this ship."

Some travellers may have felt a twinge of uneasiness about all the ballyhoo. There was a spate of last-minute cancellations and the first-class passenger list was less than half full.

But it was an impressive list, worth some $250,000,000. There was New York millionaire John Jacob Astor and his wife returning from a European vacation; the British editor W. T. Stead; J. Bruce Ismay, chairman of the White Star Line, and Montreal magnate Charles M. Hays, president of the Grand Trunk Railroad.

SUITE FOR $350

Their accommodation afloat was more sumptuous than any London hotel.

The Georgian Smoke - room was panelled in mahogany and inlaid with mother of pearl. There was a restaurant, run by Gatti's of London, lined entirely in rose-pink carpet in French figured walnut and hung with crystal chandeliers. A Turkish bath gleamed with mosaic, teak and antique bronze. There was an open - air Cafe Parisien wreathed in trailing ivy, a swimming pool — rare for the period—and two $350 suites with their own private stretch of promenade deck.

But in all the new liner's costly, equipment, two things had been overlooked. The lookout men had no binoculars and under a set of antiquated board of trade rules, the 32 lifeboats could carry only 1,178 people—a third of the liner's total capacity.

When the Titanic sailed for New York she had 2,207 passengers and crew aboard.

She nearly didn't leave Southampton at all that April day. As she edged away from the quay the suction from her bridge screws tore another steamer from its moorings and swung it within yards of a collision.

It was a sensational start to the most sensational maiden voyage of all time.

On the fifth night out, Sunday, April 14, the Titanic was racing at 22½ knots across a sea that looked like plate glass in the brilliant starlight.

Within three hours the temperature had dropped 11 degrees to freezing point. Lookout Frederick Fleet was on the alert for icebergs. But without binoculars he saw the black shape ahead just 15 seconds too late. By the ship to swing aside.

At 11:40 it struck the iceberg shaved along the starboard side with a grating, ripping sound. and five of the 16 watertight compartments lay open to the sea.

Two hours and 40 minutes later, the "unsinkable" Titanic went down, taking with her a total insured for £1,250,000 and 1,502 lives.

It was the worst sea disaster in history—and the one that need never have happened. What the papers called the "lifeboat scandal" was bad enough, but when the full story came out it revealed a chain of almost unbelievable human errors built on a blind faith in technology.

ROCKETS IGNORED

The ice warnings that were tossed aside because the Marconi operator was too busy sending greeting cards to Cape Race rockets, another ship saw but ignored; the way boats were put off half empty — all were partly due to the apparent inability of anyone to believe the Titanic could sink.

Editors found it as hard to believe that the first news flashes got incredibly garbled. A shipping office in Montreal was the first to hear from one of its liners, that the Titanic was calling for help.

The first stories to hit New York and London reported the liner being towed a crippled wreck to Halifax with all the passengers rescued. Then one of the unluckiest gambles in newspaper history. The Daily Express added: "Only the Titanic's watertight bulk held it prevented the most appalling catastrophe of modern times."

In New York, crowds besieged the White Star offices on lower Broadway, but nobody there knew what was happening. Twelve hours after the Titanic went down, special trains were still being chartered to meet her at Halifax.

STUNNED WORLD

It took until April 18, when the 705 survivors reached New York on the Cunard liner Carpathia, for the full story to filter through to a stunned world.

Newspapers brought out one special edition after another as the details became known. The Illustrated London News and Daily Graphic issued black-edged In Memoriam numbers.

King George V, President Taft of the United States and acting prime minister, George Foster of Canada sent messages of sympathy to the White Star Line. J. Pierpont Morgan, chairman of the line's parent company, who had survived the wreck, but he was soon the victim of a public that seemed to think he should have gone down with his flagship, resigned the following year and eventually died in obscurity in Ireland, a broken man.

In London, the much-heralded 1912 social season opened under a pall of national mourning. Society ladies cancelled balls, and volunteered to help the Lord Mayor's fund for the bereaved. But the memorial service held in St. Paul's April 19, the Titanic's 3rd day out, moved Mrs. Carlisle, collapsed from shock.

Nobody could have foreseen how the shock-waves of that April week would reach. Editorial after editor saw the sinking of the Titanic as a shattering lesson in humility; but the disaster was to echo down five decades as something more—the end of a smug and settled era in social history.

The curtain seemed to go down on Victorian way of living that Atlantic night. Much of it was privileged, arrogant and riddled with prejudices that vanished with it. Never again on a sinking ship would a steward slam a door marked First Class Only in the face of steerage passengers rushing to the boat-deck.

The night was hailed as a triumph for the code of "women and children first"—yet when the final list of lost and saved went up the death rate was higher for Third-Class children than First-Class men.

But the curtain went down with a theatrical flourish that caught the world's imagination.

Who could forget the picture of American mining millionaire Ben Guggenheim and his valet standing on deck in full evening dress declaring: "We have dressed in our best and are prepared to go down like gentlemen." They did.

STORY FIRST 8 O S

Or the scene in the Marconi room where young Jack Phillips stayed tapping at his set until the sea swirled in and all the lights went out. He was the first to send the distress call that had just been introduced. "Try 8 O S," he had told colleague Harold Bride. "It may be your last chance to send it."

The survivors who drifted for four hours in the icy sea had a vivid tale to tell reporters in New York. The scene has haunted writers and moviemakers ever since.

The boats bobbing around the brightly lit liner, sagging at the bows but still so solid-looking that J. J. Astor called out confidently from the rails: "We are safer here than in that little boat!"

The band bravely churning out ragtime until the dramatic moment when they broke into a hymn just before the end, thought by most who heard it to have been Nearer My God to Thee.

WAITING FOR NEWS OF TITANIC — Huge crowds gathered in front of the White Star Line office in New York's lower Broadway to get the latest news on the sinking of the Titanic in April, 1912. For days there were conflicting reports on the fate of the liner and its passengers. It wasn't until four days after the sinking—when first survivors reached New York—that the full story became known to a stunned world. (CP from AP).

THE UNSINKABLE SINKS — This is an artist's conception of the sinking of the "unsinkable" liner Titanic in 1912. The 46,328-ton liner with 2,207 passengers and crew struck an iceberg on the night of April 14 and less than three hours later went down, bow first. It was the worst sea disaster in history was 1,502. (CP from AP).

And then the unearthly roar of boilers exploding and furniture crashing loose as the huge ship stood on end against the stars and slowly disappeared from view.

STORY INCOMPLETE

Inevitably, the eye - witness accounts left tantalizing gaps. None of the survivors knew what happened to Capt. Smith or the first officer, who was rumored to have shot himself on the bridge. Only 306 bodies were brought to Halifax by the cableship Mackay Bennett, including those of Astor and C. M. Hays.

The story of the man who got off dressed as a woman was pinned down fairly on several prominent passengers. In fact, Harry Widener Lord in his book A Night to Remember, it was a frightened Irish lad from the Titanic's crew who stepped into the last boats with a shawl over his head.

Gossip about many male survivors grew so vicious that one Canadian who escaped, Maj. Arthur Peuchen of Toronto, felt his need to get a signed certificate from Second Officer Charles Lightoller that he had been ordered to take charge of a boatload of women.

Peuchen was commodore of the Royal Canadian Yacht Squadron and knew how to handle a tiller. He was the only man Lightoller allowed off the port side of the Titanic's boat deck that night.

Perhaps the biggest mystery about the Titanic — the part played by the Leyland liner Californian—now is about to be solved.

BLAMED CAPT. LORD

At the 1912 British inquiry presided over by Lord Mersey, Capt Stanley Lord was blamed for letting his 6,223-ton ship and fifty by within 10 miles of the sinking liner while his wireless operator lay asleep and distress rockets ignored.

Capt. Lord died last January with the 50-year old scandal still clouding his name. Now the case has been reopened by the secretary of the Mercantile Marine Service Association, Leslie Harrison.

Writing in the March number of the Merchant Navy Journal, he maintains the Californian was not 10 but at least 30 miles away. Third Officer Groves saw the rocket, she saw were probably from another ship and that in any case she could not move because the sea between her and the Titanic was choked with floating ice.

One senior official of the Cunard company, which took over White Star in 1934, has resigned from the association in protest at the article, which virtually shifts the blame from Lord to the Titanic's officers.

"Capt. Lord had stopped to avoid running into an iceberg but the Titanic went on," Harrison told a Daily Mail reporter. "Poor Lord became the official scapegoat."

Harrison says it is too late now to make amends, but "it may well be considered. Lord may was the victim of the greatest miscarriage of justice in the history of British marine inquiries."

Chief Operator at Cape Race Tells Story of Titanic Sinking

By ALEXANDER FARRELL

MONTREAL (CP)—"My God, Gray, the Titanic's struck a berg!"

These words, spoken by a young assistant wireless operator, shattered the midnight calm at Cape Race, Nfld., ending Sunday, April 14, 1912.

They were the first hint on shore of disaster for the glamorous White Star liner Titanic on her maiden voyage.

Gray—W. J. Gray, chief operator at the Marconi station on Newfoundland's lonely southeastern tip—heard them as he was trudging home after a cup of tea with the lighthouse keeper.

He rushed to his set and, as he recalled in an interview, "didn't have my boots off for the next four days."

"Within half an hour all hell had broken loose. The press was on our necks. Everybody wanted to know what was going on.

"'Cape Race, give us a story,' the newspapers said. 'Cape Race, name your price.'"

POWERFUL WIRELESS

The Titanic, 700 miles southeast of Cape Race, bound for New York, when she struck the iceberg shortly before midnight. Her wireless was as powerful for any ship-to-shore communication in existence and she had been in touch with the Cape all day.

Solid communication with the Titanic lasted for an hour and a half from the time of the first distress signal, Mr. Gray said. Later messages came from the Carpathia, the liner that picked up the 705 survivors.

The Carpathia was 80 miles away when she got news of the disaster. Her wireless had only a 100-mile range, meaning that she could establish contact with the Titanic but not Cape Race.

Her messages, including the tragic "all over" — meant that the Titanic had gone down and the survivors had been picked up—had to be relayed to the Cape through the liner Olympic, which was farther from the scene but had powerful apparatus very similar to that of the Titanic.

NEWS WAS SKETCHY

The world had only a sketchy story of the disaster until the Carpathia reached New York April 18 and, said Mr. Gray, "I was released of responsibility for information from the public in the meantime."

"These accusations were made by people who just didn't understand the setup. As long as the messages were in the answering category, they were heard everywhere. After that, they were private messages between the Carpathia and the subscribers one ashore."

Mr. Gray was full of praise for the Titanic's chief wireless operator, Jack Phillips, who stayed at his post until the radio room was swash and the power gone.

"He exercised excellent judgment. His messages were calm and concise, never hurried, never garbled.

"They picked him up out of the water but he died on a raft, poor chap."

Mr. Gray, who has been living in Montreal since 1936, retired in 1949 after 31 years in communications business.

And Mrs. Gray plan to move this spring to the Shetland Islands off Scotland's northern coast, where he was born.

His Cape Race assistant who heard the first word of distress from the Titanic—a man whom he remembers only by his surname, Godwin — was killed in Flanders in 1916 during the First World War.

Cuban Exiles Going To Havana To Talk Ransom

Invaders All Escape With Prison or Fines

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—Cuban exile negotiators will fly to Havana Tuesday in the hope of inducing Premier Fidel Castro to release the 1,179 invaders still held on the expatriat invaders captured at the Bay of Pigs.

A spokesman for the Cuban Families Committee said Castro applied favorably Sunday night to a radio seeking an audience with him.

Enrique Llera, vice-treasurer of the committee, disclosed that the committee already has raised $36,000,000 for ransom and pledges during four months toward aiding the prisoners.

The 1,179 prisoners captured in the unsuccessful invasion last April, were sentenced to 30 years' imprisonment each in fines ranging from $25,000 to $500,000.

The verdict was handed down Saturday night by a five-man military tribunal. Havana newspapers reported. The trials took place in the foreign press.

RANSOM TRIPLED

The price for prisoners has more than tripled since Castro offered last May to swap the captives for farm tractors.

A committee of U.S. citizens was organized at that time to set up a ransom trade. It was estimated that it would take up to $17,000,000 to buy enough tractors or bulldozers to free the prisoners.

Today, the prisoners may be released one by one on payment of fines ranging from $25,000 per a man in fre ranks to $300,000 for the leaders of the invasion.

(In New York, the chairman of the International Rescue Committee, Leo Cherne, said his organization would not negotiate with the Cuban government to free its prisoners.

Mr. Cherne compared such a deal with that offered by the Germans during the Second World War, when trucks by the lives of 100,000 Hungarian Jews.)

Expected to make the trip to Havana are Alvaro Barzaga, chairman of the families committee in Miami, and two other committee members.

Mrs. Virginia Betancourt de Rodriguez, wife of Manuel Rodriguez, Three of the expatriates who stood trial in Havana were acquitted out for fines of $500,000 each. They were named at the time as agents who had been sent from bases in Guatemala.

Manuel Artime, once a lieutenant Artime, once a lieutenant in Castro's revolutionary army before he was called upon to command of the invasion of Jose Miro Cardona, once an officer of ex-dictator Fulgencio Batista's army who commanded the Batallion 2506 brigade, and Edwin Oliva, commander of the invasion's artillery battalion.

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — A book that has been overdue at the public library for 63 years was turned up in a book drive Sunday. Read Librarian Clarence Graham said there is no way to tell who borrowed it. At the two-cent daily overdue charge, the borrower owes now $784.75.

"But, of course, we would never charge more than the book was worth," Graham said.

40 FEARED DEAD IN EXPLOSION OF GUNPOWDER

Village of 700 Is Evacuated

SAINT JUST D'ARDECHE, France (Reuters) — About 40 persons were feared dead or injured today after a series of explosions and a fire ripped through a munitions factory here, forcing the evacuation of this village of 700.

The fire that followed the early morning blasts still was burning uncheckedly more than six hours after it broke out as intense heat and further detonations of shells kept firemen and rescue workers back.

Authorities ordered the village evacuated when the flames threatened to reach a warehouse containing 50 tons of heavy explosives that could level the community.

The exact toll was still not known, but police said about 20 workers were dead or near the factory at the time of the first explosion. Forty of these were not accounted for and were assumed to be dead or injured.

By noon, all bodies had been recovered and 20 injured had been taken to hospital.

Schools in the southern village were emptied earlier in the day of further explosions. One blast smashed windows 15 miles from the plant.

Some of the workers in the factory escaped before fire broke out but others were trapped inside. Rescue workers reported hearing shouts from areas they could not reach because of the intense heat.

Two initial explosions were followed by smaller detonations lasting several minutes and dashing homes here and in neighboring communities.

The first blast rocked the factory in two, and was followed by a second as rescue teams were converging on the scene. The cause of the initial explosion was not known, but police said sabotage could not be ruled out.

Artillery shells and grenades exploded in the factory as fire raged through main buildings of the plant toward a storehouse containing large stocks o. explosives.

Some 75 workmen and 20 military guards were in the factory—which makes gunpowder for the armed forces—when the first explosion occurred at 7:30 a.m.

As the blaze raged an enormous mushroom - shaped cloud of smoke rose above the factory architecture and tree crown officials were unable to get close.

OPPOSITION MAY DEMAND PROBE OF CHARGES

'Sold Down River' Says McNaughton

OTTAWA (CP) — A sudden storm kicked up by a retired general who refuses to fade away was at the door of the Commons today as the House embarked on what might be its last full sitting week before the election.

The door was expected to be opened by the opposition parties with strong cries for an investigation of charges made Friday by Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, 75.

The former Liberal defence minister, head of the Canadian section of the International Joint Commission since 1950, charged he was improperly retired last week from the commission post and that Canada was "sold down the river" in the Columbia River treaty signed with the U.S. in January, 1961.

H. W. Herridge, parliamentary leader of the CCF-New Democratic Party group, served notice that his party leaders would seek an emergency debate on the issue at the outset of the session. Tory and Social Liberals acted first. Both pertain to Premier Bill Columbia treaty renegotiated.

Liberal spokesmen indicated privately they have not decided whether to seek a full-dress debate on the matter today ahead of scheduled House business.

PEARSON WANTS STUDY

However, Lester B. Pearson said Saturday that "the time surely now has come for the examination of this treaty at once, and also for an examination of the circumstances which have led to Gen. McNaughton's dismissal from office." He added that "this certainly should be done immediately."

Mr. Herridge, agreeing there should be an inquiry, said his colleague, Dil Gen. McNaughton was retired from his post "in a very shabby way."

Third and final reading of the government's controversial bill to give private corporations and trade unions to report to the Parliament on their dealings with Canadian operations is scheduled as the first item of Commons business today.

EXPECT JUNE ELECTION

Other items of government business expected to be dealt with include two of Prime Minister Diefenbaker's pet projects. Whether they will be passed before dissolution of Parliament for a June election now being widely predicted for June 18—remains to be seen. They are:

1. A bill to establish an electoral boundaries commission to redraw Commons constituencies in line with shifts in population revealed by the 1961 census.

The job of the independent commission cannot be done before 4 p.m. but it usually takes him about 18 months to carry out portion dealing with taxes.

2. A bill to establish a pre-election interim budget, it is taken by most observers that he will be big Liberal majority in the upper house and permit the government to make such sufficient new senators to give the Conservative party a Senate majority.

Finance Minister Fleming takes over the spotlight Tuesday with the presentation of his budget at 8 p.m.

Terrorists Toss Gasoline Bombs Into Moslem School in Algiers

ALGIERS (Reuters) — European girl students were injured by "Molotov cocktails" into a school building in the Casbah today, but the flaming bottles of gasoline exploded without injuring any of the pupils.

Two Moslems were killed in separate shootings and three others were injured in early morning violence that followed a weekend of looting and machine-gun attacks. This was the terrorists' reply to the referendum in France on President de Gaulle's Algerian policy of self-determination.

De Gaulle Wins Resounding Yes in Algerian Referendum

CP from Reuters-AP

PARIS—President de Gaulle received a massive vote of confidence on his Algerian policies Sunday and political observers said he may follow up the referendum victory by calling a general election.

Should de Gaulle choose this move it would mean the election, observers said, the voting may take place May 13 or 20. Sunday's vote went to the departments of France, including Corsica, showed that 91 per cent of the valid votes supported the Franco-Algerian independence plan signed March 19. A total of 17,505,673 persons or 26,403,300 who cast ballots voted "Yes" on the pact.

Results are still to come from an estimated 1,000,000 voters in the overseas territories. Algeria did not participate because of the treaty which eventually will lead to independence for the North African territory.

Only 1,794,583 persons voted "No" or 9 per cent of the valid votes.

Spoiled voting papers—asked by the Socialist splinter party of former premier Pierre Mendes-France — were handed in by 1,102,477 persons, or 5.4 per cent of all those who cast ballots.

Family Allowance Increase Looked for in New Budget

OTTAWA (CP) — Most advance speculation on the content of the federal budget to be presented Tuesday night has dwelt on the possibility of an increase in family allowances and on tax reliefs for industry.

Canadians will learn about 9 p.m. EST Tuesday night what Finance Minister Fleming plans to do with the money that he may put in their pockets. He is to start reading his budget speech in the Commons about 8 p.m. but it usually takes him about 18 months to carry out portion dealing with taxes.

Mr. Fleming, in a pre-election budget, is to take the form of a tax reduction since the Conservative party is Senate majority.

Finance Minister Fleming takes over the spotlight Tuesday with the presentation of his budget at 8 p.m.

Ambassador To Canada Resigns Post

OTTAWA (CP) — Livingston T. Merchant has resigned as United States ambassador to Canada and has retired from the U.S. foreign service, it was announced here today.

Mr. Merchant said in a statement that his resignation is effective immediately. He will become a foreign service officer emeritus and his resignation as ambassador has been accepted by President Kennedy.

Mr. Merchant's successor will be announced later in Washington, the President Kennedy.

The tall, slender diplomatic veteran succeeds Mr. Merchant plans to leave Ottawa about the middle of May.

Mr. Merchant is fond of Canada and the many friends we have made during 1956 with real regret," he said.

FINDS BABY IN CAR

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A man arrived at International Airport during a four-day business trip Sunday and found a new-born infant in his car at the airport parking lot. Edward Waddington, 46, of Alliway, N.J., summoned airport police, who then called police. Later, doctors said the baby boy was in good condition and apparently had not been in the car more than a few hours.

NUCLEAR ARMS HOT ISSUE FOR YOUNG PCs

Arms Now Beaten By 82-76 Vote

OTTAWA (CP)—Strong rightwing pressure—urging the government to provide nuclear weapons immediately for Canadian forces has been staved off in the Young Progressive Conservatives of Canada annual convention.

Debate on the issue during the weekend convention saw sharply-drawn battle lines on the questions of nuclear arms now or nuclear arms only if the international situation deteriorates.

Exponents of renouncing nuclear weapons under any circumstances failed to get a resolution past the resolutions committee and onto the convention floor.

After a long and bitter debate, the nuclear - arms - now forces suffered defeat by a vote of 82 to 76. The convention resolved that the government "accept its responsibility for acquiring nuclear weapons for our armed forces should the world situation deteriorate further" in the wake of appeals that any such course risk sabbing External Affairs Minister Green in the back.

Although held in the atmosphere on an impending election, the convention's decision was resolutely against the two days on policy and philosophical questions.

PRAISES RECORD

The election did intrude in the form of a call for a "campaigning-to-win" forum and the closing address of Prime Minister Diefenbaker, who flayed the opposition and extolled the Conservative record in preparation for an election "shortly".

"I tell you frankly and shortly I know the people are going to know their trust in us," he said and when they do I am saying so he will be satisfied with a 6 to 1 majority over other parties."

He indicated hopes for the future by noting that Sir John A. Macdonald, in the first prime minister, won four elections. The Conservatives have "have two to go to be equal and three to surpass that, and going for a fifth and sixth on that project."

Within a few days, he said, action will be taken on Senate reform, as had been promised in the 1958 election. He also singled the principle of retirement at age 75 in forging retirement age for federally appointed judges. That age should apply to the Senate, the Commons and Senate found it

PUT FLOWERS ON GRAVE

MOSCOW (AP) — Unknown visitors placed flowers and tiny Soviet flags on the grave of a woman on Stalin's grave under the Kremlin wall, Sunday. Tourists filing past the grave stared with curiosity at the memorial to Stalin, Soviet dictator. There was no clue to the identity of the mourner or the significance of the offerings.

Higher Defence Costs, Farmers' Payments Cause Deficit 20 Per Cent Higher Than Forecast

OTTAWA (CP) — A federal budget deficit of $791,400,000—largest ever in peacetime—was estimated today by Finance Minister Fleming for last fiscal year.

The deficit for the 1961-62 year ended March 31 was more than 20 per cent higher than the $650,000,000 deficit forecast in Mr. Fleming's June 20 budget last year.

The budget while paper, tabled in the Commons by the minister as the prelude to his pre - election budget Tuesday night, attributed most of the jump to expenditures unforeseen last June - payments to drought-stricken farmers and higher defence costs.

It was the fifth red-ink year in a row, and cumulative budget deficits April 1, 1957, now exceed $2,182,800,000. Last year's deficit compared with one of $340,400,000 in 1960-61 and the previous record-year high of $609,300,000 in 1956-59.

Mr. Fleming's preliminary accounts—still subject to adjustment—showed $5,772,000,000 in budgetary revenues, up $154,-300,000 or 2.7 per cent from the $5,617,700,000 collected in 1960-61.

EXPENDITURES JUMP

But budgetary expenditures jumped 10 per cent to $6,563,-400,000, up $605,300,000 from $5,958,100,000 the previous year.

Both revenues and spending were at record highs.

Mr. Fleming's budget forecast last June was almost on the nose in predicting revenues — his $5,765,000,000 forecast was only $7,000,000 short. But spending was $148,400,000 ahead of his prediction of $6,415,000,000.

Some big spending items not foreseen at the time: An extra $40,000,000 in crop-failure payments under the Canadian Farm Assistance Act. $42,000,000 in Prairie drought-area payments and a defence spending rise of $40,-000,000 resulting from decisions last February to increase the armed forces and train 100,000 militiamen in civil defence.

The report gave one explanation for last year's increase in the deficit—it was higher than double that of 1960-61. It also done "to enlarge the flow of purchasing power in the general public" in a period when the economy was lagging.

The white paper reported gross national product rose only 2.5 per cent in 1961 compared to below normal due in part to a steel industry drop in output and to the Prairie crop losses. If GNP had risen at the rate seven per cent between the first and fourth quarters of the year.

Old age pension payments included in the report's budgetary accounts, under the pension fund which finances the program, were

Britain to Tax Quick-Property, Stock Profits

LONDON (Reuters) — Chancellor of the Exchequer Lloyd today slashed British sales taxes in a move to prepare Britain for entry into the European Common Market.

Lloyd also promised to remove a property tax on homes as he presented his annual budget to the Commons.

But the treasury chief tempered his concessions by subjecting capital gains to taxation for the first time and by imposing a new 15-per-cent tax on confectionery, such as candy, soft drinks and ice cream.

Lloyd said Britain's purchase tax structure must be reformed if Britain is going into the Common Market.

He announced that the top tax bracket — 45 per cent—applicable to such items as automobiles and television sets—would be reduced to 45 per cent. Immediate rate of 27½ per cent—applicable to refrigerators and washing machines — would be reduced to 25 per cent. Two lower rates of 15% and 10 per cent would be consolidated at 10 per cent.

As the same time he announced custom duty would be reduced before most - favored-nation levels on manufactured tobacco, spirits, beer, matches and mechanically-driven lighters.

To Introduce Bill to Retire Senators at 75

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Diefenbaker's bill to reform the Senate by retiring senators at the age of 75 is expected to be called for introduction in the Commons today.

Exact terms of the bill will not be made public until it has been given first reading, usually a formality.

But Mr. Diefenbaker has indicated that the bill will require senators to retire on pension at the age of 75 but will not apply to him. Saturday night that it will apply to senators already in the upper House.

Speaking to a banquet of the Ontario Provincial Conservative Association, Mr. Diefenbaker said the Commons and Senate recently approved legislation requiring all federally appointed judges to retire at 75. That bill applied to judges who already were in office and had taken their appointments with the expectation that their terms were for life.

"I think that a similar principle should apply to the fact that they were appointed for life and should apply to the Senate and I shall apply to the legislation being there is acceptance by the Commons and Senate," Mr. Diefenbaker said.

While all senators do not make their views public on Parliamentary Guide, it is believed that at least 28 and possibly 30 would be required to retire when the bill becomes law.

Toronto Man Sent for Trial In Car Case

A 37-year-old Toronto man, Howard D. Dean, was committed for trial at the next sittings of the Supreme Court of Ontario by Magistrate C. R. Willis at a special sitting this morning on a charge of being in possession of a stolen car.

Mr. Dean elected to be tried before a police jury and entered a plea of not guilty. He is being defended by Robert Carlaw.

Arthur J. Donald, 197 Wellesley Street, Toronto, owner of the car, said he had parked it on Bleecker Street, near Wellesley St. on the night of March 9th and when he went out to go to work the next morning, the car was missing.

Mr. Donald said he reported his car stolen to Toronto police and the next time he saw it, was at the fair grounds here in the city. He told the court he had known Mr. Dean for about two years and at no time did he give him permission to use his car. Mr. Donald said when he saw his car at the city fair grounds it had been damaged considerably, the radio and other articles stolen from it and that a new ignition had been installed.

A College Motors mechanic told the court that on March 20, the accused, Howard Dean, had left the garage with a 1960 Ford convertible and asked him to install a new ignition, that he had lost the keys to the car. He said that on March 23rd, he received a call to Memorial Park Avenue and the person who called said their car had stalled. He said when he arrived he found it to be the 1960 Ford he had repaired earlier.

Mr. Eyers from Oshawa testified that the license plates found on the car in question were his, that they had been taken from his car either at his home or while it was sitting at the service station where he works in Oshawa.

Crown Attorney John Prinzie asked for a remand in the evidence. He will appear for trial in June. Dean was further charged with stealing $6 worth of gasoline and will answer to the charge in city court here on Tuesday. Bail was set at $3,000.

BRITAIN TO TAX

Britain's fellow members in the European Free Trade Association — Sweden, Norway, Denmark, Austria, Switzerland and Portugal, with Finland as an associate member.

Lloyd said the new tax is designed to help the country apply to wholesale prices, raising the rate from May 7 and yielding £250,000,000 a year.

Other changes announced today include a higher ceiling on football pool betting which would go up to 30 per cent from 20 and betting and entertainments up to 25 per cent from 10.

Lloyd also announced a small reduction in revenue duties on sugar, cocoa and coffee which would reduce prices slightly.

The exemption limit for death duties was raised slightly along with an additional amount for investment income.

Lloyd said he would not introduce a capital gains tax as such — which had been widely predicted.

Instead, such profits would be taxed within the present taxation system, the Treasury chief said.

The tax would apply to profits only from the sale of stocks within six months of purchase and on those held within three years of purchase.

Gains from the sale of cars, pictures and other movable objects would be exempt from tax.

Local Cadets Guests Aboard Training Unit

Members of the Royal Canadian Sea Cadet Corps were guests aboard the mobile anti-submarine unit HMCS Lynn (MASTU) of the Royal Canadian Navy this past Saturday afternoon in Kingston.

The first is the "sub" and the "ship", as controlled by the equipment installed, are electronically correlated to produce a situation and reaction in the attack crew. One of the "ship" which is identical to an actual attack on a submarine.

The MASTU travels across Canada visiting Royal Canadian Navy Reserve divisions and Sea Cadet Corps. It is on the road about nine months of the year and is crewed by seven man under the command of a Chief Petty Officer.

By the time its stay at H.M.C.S. Cataraqui in Kingston is completed approximately 500 Sea Cadets plus more than 100 members of the RCNR division will have received training aboard MASTU.

This experience is but one of the many opportunities which members of the local Sea Cadet Corps "Quinte" which is a member of the Belleville United Appeal, receive in the course of their year's training.

Over $36,000 Collected in March of Dimes

Over $36,000 was collected in the eastern Ontario district during the recent March of Dimes, it was reported recently by the Rehabilitation Foundation for poliomyelitis and the orthopedically disabled. The sum was an increase of almost 10 per cent over the 1961 campaign returns for this area, which was well above the average for Ontario.

In this community the funds were raised by the Marching Mothers campaign, as was the case in the majority of Ontario communities. The local district covers the counties of Hastings, Prince Edward, Lennox and Addington, Frontenac, Leeds and Grenville.

The total amount raised in Ontario has reached the figure of $642,065, with a few returns yet to come in. When these are received it is expected that the campaign will have exhibited its $650,000 objective. Rehabilitation Foundation officials here stated.

Six Counties Represented At P.S. Trustees' Assoc.; J. H. Adamson New Head

Over 100 school trustees from six counties representing Zone 7 of the Public School Trustees' Association of Ontario met for their regional spring conference at Prince Charles' School Saturday to discuss school administration problems and elect new officers.

New chairman for the group is J. H. Adamson of Picksering township, and vice-chairman H. M. Mackie of South Darlington School Area.

Members of the Belleville Public Schools' Board, host for the conference, were on hand throughout the day. Among those in attendance were G. Laurence Tron, Pembroke, chairman of the Public School Trustees' Association of Ontario.

Chairman of the conference was Belleville board member William VanTassel, who has been active in the work of the trustees' association for many years.

Delegates from the counties of Hastings, Northumberland, Peterborough, Victoria, Ontario and Haliburton, attended the conference, while although outside the zone, trustees from Prince Edward and Frontenac also attended. Rev. C. W. Coltman of Holloway Street United Church, pronounced in vocation at the start of the conference.

CHORAL GROUP HEARD

A grand choir made from the Harry J. Clarke School under the direction of Miss Phyllis May were an entertainment highlight of the session. Pupil Scott Bradford acted as accompanist for the group.

During the morning a panel of public school inspectors under the chairmanship of Inspector J. M. Cousins of Belleville, conducted a discussion on trustee problems. Subjects under discussion included school instruction, teachers, staff and public relations, qualifications beyond the B.A. degree, curriculum and grade IX courses in secondary schools.

In the afternoon interest groups on schools administration problems were held. The groups and those taking part were as follows:

I — Secretarial, Business and Accounting: Chairman, Inspector C. W. Young; Resource Person, Inspector H. H. Langford, Supt. L. A. Kells, Mrs. Irene Raney; Recorder, Mr. M. M. Hackett.

II — Construction and Building: Chairman, Trustee Mac Smith; Resource Person, Mr. W. A. Watson, M. Arch; Recorder, Mr. H. S. Prick.

III — Salaries: Chairman, Trustee G. H. Trill; Resource Persons, Mr. Fred Bartlett, Trustee F. P. Clarke; Recorder, Mr. Robert Moorcroft.

Mr. J. Russell Reid of Belleville brought in the report of the resolutions and nominating committee.

Included among the resolutions from the conference was a motion to have Prince Ed. County included in No. 3 Zone because of its geographical location. It was felt this would make it more convenient for delegates to attend zone conferences.

The conference also asked that a salary scale for music teachers and/or music supervisors be laid down by a committee from the Public School Trustees Association for guidance of school boards across the province. This would result in a standardization of such salaries throughout the province.

A third resolution asked that authorization be given permitting school board representatives to interview Ontario Teachers College graduates at the colleges at Peterborough and Ottawa for the full day on April 19th. Under the present system board representatives may interview graduates at the schools until the afternoon of April 19th, or than 250 delegates and and members wintering well ... district councils attended was the heavy mantle of snow the two day conference. which covered the ground.

Scout Spirit Should Apply Says Speaker

PORT HOPE, Ont. (CP)— Viscount Amory, United Kingdom high commissioner to Canada, advised applying the scout spirit to international problems in an address Saturday to the Boy Scouts o. Canada provincial council for Ontario.

"If people would apply the scout spirit, the most intractable problems would yield to treatment," he said.

The high commissioner received his first scout warrant from Lord Baden-Powell in 1923 and still holds the position of chief scout commissioner.

He advised scout leaders to provide attractive challenging programs for their troops. Even uniforms could be changed, he said in describing experiments with long trousers for scouts in Great Britain. "Scouts should be seen more in public and should be proud of their uniforms."

Three Alarms Over Weekend

A fairly quiet weekend was reported in the city and district this morning.

Provincial Police reported no serious accidents on highways throughout the Quinte district.

There was a little activity in the fire department though, as three calls were answered on Sunday.

The first call was answered at the home of Richard Leich 4 Wilkins Street, when a paper which was placed in the oven, caught fire. No damage was reported.

The second call, a grass fire, took the fire department to the residence of Mr. John Hangley at R. R. 2, Bellville, and then a false alarm at 23 Elvins Gardens.

City police reported a quiet weekend also.

Winter Wheat In Good Shape

Fall wheat throughout the Bay of Quinte district came through the winter in good condition, with very little winter kill, according to district farmers.

Meadows in most cases also apparently came through the winter in good shape, and current prospects are for a good hay crop this year.

One of the reasons for wheat and meadows wintering well was the heavy mantle of snow which covered the ground.

Pleads Guilty To Having Gun In Possession

A Montreal man, Gregory Sjolander, age 20, was remanded for sentence until Tuesday, when he appeared before Magistrate T. Y. Wills in city magistrate's court here this morning.

Sjolander was charged with being in possession of an offensive weapon, a 22 calibre automatic revolver. He elected trial by the magistrate and pleaded guilty to the charge.

Evidence was that on March 23rd, two city policemen, Const. Tom Davidson and Const. Dale Ashbury, had a house on Dundas Street East, under observation.

A complaint was received from an occupant of the house and when the constables arrived, found a car bearing Quebec markers. Upon searching it, they found a .22 calibre automatic revolver, in a door pocket.

Inspector J. McLauchlan told the court that when the constables arrived, Mr. Sjolander was near the vehicle and a companion, Leslie Fox, was in the back door. He said that the serial numbers on the gun had been rubbed off, and that while the gun had no magazine, it contained one live cartridge.

Mr. Lee, who was also charged with being in possession of the gun, elected to be tried by a judge and jury, entering a plea of not guilty. The case was enlarged to April 17 and bail was set at $3,000.

The budget is concisered virtually certain to implement the government's announced intentions of removing the duties on Canadian advertising sold to imported American magazines.

It has been generally predicted that the finance minister may announce a $1 increase in family allowances. The last increase, of a like amount, was made in 1957 by the former Liberal government just before the general election that year.

The cost to be paid at the rate of $6 a month for children up to age 10 and $8 for those aged 10 to 16. The annual cost to the government is $536,000,000.

Another suggestion is that family allowance may be continued past age 16 for children remaining in school in an effort to reduce the number of idle youths in the land who have been swelling the unemployment rolls.

418 Belleville Wing RCAFA Lists Officers

Last Thursday evening the annual election of 418 (Belleville) Wing, RCAFA, was held at 6 R.D. social centre with the members being conspicuous by their absence. Bill Phillips, first vice-president, who was expected to move up to president, was forced to decline due to business pressure. The following were elected: president, Tom Kelley; 1st vice-president, Pat Mallorie; 2nd vice-president, Frank Burns; secretary, Bob Cairns; treasurer, Bob Mebourne; directors: Bill Hogan, Vern Vanderwater, Jim Stone, Tom Burley and Clayt Burley.

Following the business of the evening a "millionaires' night" was held and quite a battle developed between Len McGaughey of 413 Trenton Wing, Pat Halloran, Lorne Foley, Harry Mutt, C. Burley with Pat Halloran emerging victorious, and he was presented with a fine fishing rod and reel, supplied by Frank Burns' Cigar Store.

The usual buffet lunch followed.

A good turnout is expected for the May meeting as the final dirapoint the new president.

Ethnic Groups Sometimes Unwise

Sam Borbara of Toronto, past president of the Canadian-Italian Business and Professional Men's Association, told the Association's tenth anniversary dinner that the growing influence of the Italian community in Canada is not reflected numerically in its political representation.

If this had been a mere statement of fact, no reasonable person could quarrel with it. But, from a report in the Toronto Daily Star, it appears evident that Mr. Sorbara was arguing that Italo-Canadians ought to aspire to be represented in Parliament in proportion to their number in the country. "Canada's representation ratio, he said, is one parliamentary member for each 65,000 of population. This ratio would call for 10 Italian-Canadian M.P.'s. "There is only one Italo-Canadian in the House of Commons, Quinto Martini, Progressive Conservative member for Hamilton East. Hon. Philip A. Gagiardi, British Columbia's ebullient Minister of Highways, is the only Italian member of a provincial legislature.

We suggest that Mr. Sorbara does Canada, and Italo-Canadians, a disservice in this approach. If all ethnic groups followed the principle which he appears to be advocating, and sought to elect candidates of their own race, it is questionable whether there would be even one Italo-Canadian in the Commons (we doubt whether Canadians of Italian descent form the majority of voters in Hamilton East.)

Mr. Sorbara's argument could perhaps be safely disregarded were it not for the fact that there is more than a suspicion that his attitude is common amongst the members of various ethnic groups and is applied in more fields than politics.

The U.S. theory of immigration is that of the "melting pot," of the transformation of newcomers from many lands, with their varying customs and cultures, into a homogeneous North American mass. Voices have been raised in Canada against the application of this theory here, on the reasonable contention that this system deprives us of a wealth of talents and traditions, handed down over the centuries, which if preserved could vastly enrich our Canadian scene and provide for us a rewarding variety of colorful customs, arts, hobbies, games and pastimes.

It is natural, too, that those who find themselves strangers in a foreign land should welcome contacts with people of their own blood, language, traditions and upbringing. Thus the formation of ethnic organizations is not only understandable but could be praiseworthy. These organizations, though, harm both their members and these members' new homeland if they seek, as they sometimes do, to divide Canadians of different racial origins into separate groups, to speak of Italo-Canadians, German-Canadians, Greek-Canadians and Dutch-Canadians. (Canadians themselves may have to share some of the blame in this, because of our habit of speaking of French-Canadians and English-Canadians, but this division is primarily, and ought to be solely, based on the language these Canadians speak in Canada—some whom we call French-Canadians are actually descendants of Wolfe's soldiers.)

Ethnic associations would do well to examine their operations. If the choice has to be between balkanization and the U.S. theory of the melting pot, then the melting pot is infinitely the better choice. Surely, though, we do not have to be all poured in the same mold in order to accept the fact that, in politics and in businesses and professions, we are all Canadians, no matter what our origin.

Control Vitamin Sales

Hon. Mathew Dymond, Ontario's Minister of Health, is to be complimented for introducing a bill which, when it becomes law, will require a doctor's prescription for ordering large quantities of high-potency vitamins.

Dr. Dymond says that too many Canadians are taking vitamins they do not need. Most vitamins now sold without prescriptions are harmless, he says, but he adds experts are concerned about the possibility of people obtaining overdoses of certain vitamins. From the report on the nature of the bill it seems evident it will endeavor to control the sale of only certain vitamins. Requiring prescriptions for the sale of all vitamins would involve a great deal of red tape.

One may be pardoned for hoping, however, that this bill will serve to make more people consult their doctors before launching on a pill diet. Even if vitamins do them no harm, they may easily be doing them no good. Many people are thus paying out large sums of money for nothing.

Strictly Personal

What Will We Be Like in Years to Come

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Whenever people say, "I wonder what life will be like 30 years from now," or when every issue of Look magazine draws a portrait of life in 1990, it is always the material conditions that are sketched that intrigue them.

We listen to speculations about our buildings, highways, merchandising and scientific and technological changes. The portraits are attractive, if a little frightening — but none of them considers the most important thing.

Nobody asks "What will people be like, 30 years from now?" or "How will we behave with one another and toward one another in 1990?" We fail to ask the fundamental and unbelieve (mistakenly) that human conditions will remain substantially the same, that "human nature doesn't change."

But what the basic nature doesn't change, different social orders bring out different traits and patterns of conduct in people. We do not behave like the people of the Middle Ages, or the medieval French, the Renaissance Englander or even the Englanders. For better or for worse, our attitudes and relations are fundamentally today.

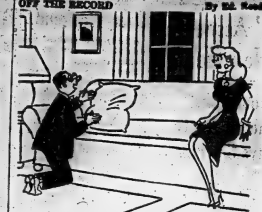
It seems plain to me that the essential question we must ask about the future is, "What sort of people will this world be home to produce?"

As our society becomes more urbanized, mechanized, militarized and specialized, there can be no doubt that there is subject the ethos of the American people will change along with our ways of physical living. Certain traits will be encouraged, and others will be suppressed; certain kinds of knowledge will be highly rewarded and others will be ignored or even frowned upon.

And this is why our most speculation about the future strikes me as fruitless and meaningless. At the root of all our problems is always the human personality; and this is the one thing that inquiry we seem interested in. Or, at most, we talk of "adjusting the personality to the technical and social changes, rather than changing the culture to fit what we think a full human being ought to be.

We don't even think in terms of a full human being, as the old Greeks and Romans did. We shout it. We think of "economic man" and "technological man" and "man the citizen" and "man the maker." Our pragmatic and mechanistic attitudes functions, not with goals, with "will it work?" and with "is it worth the human effort?"

What kind of children are we turning out? What attitudes, ideals and sentiments are we encouraging or discouraging? These are the proper questions for the future, not space travel or electronic kitchens.



This Virtue Is Obsolete?

Sault Ste. Marie Star

A generation ago the sayings according to Poor Richard and prudent wage earner contained much about the cash price of an automobile if one was to achieve bold convenience. But it stayed in the public and the family went without the automobile for a holiday or whatever the food allowance might have been. It stayed in the bank against the day when it was a measure of the security that being so much decried as an automobile.

Where would the automobile industry be today if every prospective purchaser waited until he had the full purchase price of a car? Now face-to-face basic industry and into how many "service" industries and businesses would the slump in motor vehicle production reach? How many employees, as a result of today's "perssities" — and their employees — would be equally hard-hit by a return to this philosophy?

What price, to everybody, a return to the vaunted pioneer virtues?

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

SECOND STEPS

The most difficult thing about doing anything if to decide to do it. Thereafter the process itself, of doing, is put into drive.

Take the child. The encouragement of having taken one step without and gives it the crossed courage to try another.

It's the same in everything we do in this life.

The second steps are not the ones to worry about. Take the first. Harry A. Curtis, B.A., Inspector of Public Schools for Belleville and South Hastings, has been elected a member of the Council of the Educational Association of Ontario.

Seven members of the Belleville Curling Club are wishing to establish a record of late in the season curling, played a match recently at the rink, Percy Pitney, P. McL. Forin and C. H. Vermilyea, skip 2. J. A. McFee, B. Ier, Joseph D. Clarke and W. M. Waters, skip 13.

STRENGTH FOR THE DAY

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

NO FOOLING

There is a lot of talk today about the necessity of getting to know communism better. If we know it better, we will get together and discuss it with our countries, perhaps the tensions between east and west will be lessened.

The truth is that we understand communism very well. From the standpoint of economics it is hokus-pocus. Politically it is not a government but a criminal conspiracy. Let us not waste our time discussing communism, let us do something about it. What we should like to do is crush it from off the face of the earth. But this is not possible. We are members of a nation, and nations move slowly. We are handicapped, and we must admit those handicaps. But let us not be deceived by the appearance, the seeming.

The second steps are not the ones to worry about. Take the first. Harry A. Curtis, B.A., Inspector of Public Schools for Belleville and South Hastings, has been elected a member of the Council of the Educational Association of Ontario.

Seven members of the Belleville Curling Club are wishing to establish a record of late in the season curling, played a match recently at the rink, Percy Pitney, P. McL. Forin and C. H. Vermilyea, skip 2. J. A. McFee, B. Ier, Joseph D. Clarke and W. M. Waters, skip 13.

How we would grow were we to resolve each day to do something beyond what we think we are capable of doing!

None of us realize the greatness of the hidden forces, unused and untested, that slumber within us.

There is a thrill, an exhilaration, even in the attempt to do something that looks impossible. And it's the first step that looks so difficult.

But so many say: "Suppose I do start, or take the first step, what then?" What then? Why, the second step, the third, and so on, each clear to the end of the job itself!

Never bother you head about the second steps. Take the first step and the second will be already on the way.

Life is made up of steps. Simple steps, long steps, steps that are very hard to take, the second steps, however, are the easiest of all.

Letter To The Editor

Belleville Theatre Guild Lauded

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer.

Please allow me to congratulate the Belleville Theatre Guild on the standard of performance attained on the Belleville Theatre Guild in its production of "The Chalk Garden" at the Eastern Ontario Drama League Festival last week in Kingston. This production, together with the one set play which won a trophy for Belleville last year at Cobourg, has created a great deal of interest in the group, outside of Belleville, and I am sure you realize that in the Guild you have a most valuable public relations asset, as well as a theatrical company of great artistic integrity. I've heard that they did not come home with any prizes from this particular festival does not mean quality of what it appears to do on the surface.

HIGH STANDARD

This festival was of unusually high standard, according to officials who have seen many others this year, and many people cannot remember having seen one of such a close standard had to be made, while I myself have seen festivals where this was worse. It is quite possible that had this play been sent to another festival, it might have received first place, but it could have been no lower than second, certainly by the standard of the adjudicator in the least by this group.

I would like to close by publicly thanking the Guild for their theatre in our society, and to do this must borrow the words of George Bernard Shaw:

"There are four boards and a passion. Two boards for acting goes; and yet those novices get through all their performance which you will never get in professional performers. It is because they are all doing it for the love of doing it, because they have almost unlimited time for rehearsal. Their devotion produced by various causes and in spite of all manner of difficulties, stakeshifts, absurdities, and sometimes disasters, they got something that you do not always get in professional theatre. Remember that your theatre, the composer, said, quite truly, that the true motive not in our great opera houses, but in the concert rooms, but on the cottage piano of the amateur". I tell you — and this is one of the secrets of the drama in this country and all every country — the best selve by the great theatres, although they do something for the higher development of the art of acting, but by the love of the people for the drama and the attempt that they make themselves, when they are served by the professionals artists, to give performances in the places the professional circuits do not entertain.

NEED ENCOURAGEMENT

I quote Shaw at such length, because I wished to bring out a strong witness for the defence. It is generally admitted, unfortunately, there are this kind of entertainments open to themselves and others, who cannot see the sense in helping or supporting anything else but sports, theatre, music, on any activity which is going to us, simply because of amateurs they work for and not for money. It is possible, I suppose, to set oneself up as a critic, but I am sure that any man of greatly refined taste, who is indulging in this kind of contemplation, would as soon of real culture would so indulge themselves in a movement.

Great actors, great art directors, great playwrights have always paid close and even minutest attention to the development of the amateur. Established in the suburbs of "The Chalk Garden" allowed as amateur group to put on the Belleville Theatre Guild the first play "Poor Judas" and the play was produced and the performance of the leading man, a local physician, that still tried to persuade him, in vain, to go to London to star in the professional productions, and the world premiere of Sean O'Casey's "Cock - a - Doodle-Dandy" was given by the amateur "People's Theatre," in the only production of O'Casey, worth suspence in the whole of England.

Canada, even more than other countries, because of the dearth of good theatres, absolutely needs her amateur theatres as a proving ground for new authors, besides new actors and directors. It is essential, therefore, that every encouragement by its communities be provided, financial assistance for such extra-curricular activities as out-of-town representation in a festival be offered, and that the newspaper adopt a general attitude towards the encouraging of real theatre and development where it is needed.

Of course, I am quite sure

The Reason Tranquilizers And Alcohol Don't Mix

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: You have mentioned that alcohol and tranquilizers do not mix why?

Can one say a craving for beer the same as some people crave whisky? — M.B.

Alcohol is a sedative. Tranquilizers are just what the name implies, drugs which relax your tensions. "Don't-worry pills," somebody once called them. And some of us, sometimes, need drugs to help us accept the tensions of living more placidly.

Well, you get sedatives and tranquilizers together, and you can become as relaxed as a pool of cooked spaghetti.

Living requires a certain amount of caution and a useful amount of tension. Being too "relaxed" means lassitude, poor judgment, irresponsibility, lack of caring about things.

In addition, tranquilizers have a variety of physical side effects, which may or may not be aggravated by alcohol.

Too much sedation-and-tranquilizing makes you into something more like a clam than a person.

Your inquiry about a "craving for beer," is begging the question. It isn't the beer, it's the alcohol. A craving for alcohol is another way of saying "alcoholism."

Dear Dr. Molner: Is it true that human milk contains brain cells? Would a breast-fed child stand a better chance intellectually? — J.P.

While I'm thoroughly in favor of breast feeding, both from the standpoint of somewhat better physical health and economy, and easier emotional adjustment, I can't say that I think it results in a better baby "intellectually." It is not true that human milk contains brain cells.

Dear Dr. Molner: When I travel a long distance in an automobile, I get a dull ache in my left side. It is also lessened when I stand in one position for several hours, usually when I am fronting. Can I do anything to prevent it? — H.P.

You suggest back strain, and isn't it all uncommon. Adjusting the car seat forward (to lessen stretch on the legs) or using a pillow or support at your back may help. Break the ironing into two periods. Rest may not be needed. Do twists, to some other activity which takes the steady strain off the affected muscle or muscles.

• • •

Dear Dr. Molner: Is it wise to store food, such as sauce or corn, overnight in an aluminum pan regardless of its age? — E.V.T.

There's no danger in storing food in aluminum containers or foil overnight or longer. The age is of no significance — it's still aluminum, and safe.

But food should be refrigerated no matter whether it is in containers of aluminum, tin, china, stainless steel, glass, or anything else. Refrigerating suppresses the action of bacteria. Engrave on your memory this rule: Keep it hot, keep it cold, or don't keep it.

Dear Dr. Molner: I have heard all my life that removal of moles can cause cancer. That is why I haven't had one just under my arm taken off. It is continually irritated by my bra, although it never really gets sore and hasn't seemed to grow much in the last few years. — B.A.

You've heard all your life" the exact opposite of the truth. The irritation may have come from moler which became cancerous — and were removed, after it was cancer.

Generally, however, most moles are harmless, but if continually irritated may become cancerous. So in such cases have them removed before the real trouble starts.

The worry can when you add that yours "hasn't seemed to grow much," because any mole in your age group deserves immediate examination.

What are ulcers? How should they be treated? What can you do to help avoid them? To Heal Peptic Ulcers And Keep Them Healed, Dr. Molner has written Dr. Molner in care of Intelligencer Small Stamped Envelope, P.O. THE PACKSAK

By GREGORY CLARK

What is the true nature of a man? The philosopher, and theologian, have been digging away at it for several thousand years. The lawmaker is at it, he's been struggling to define its boundaries. Politicians would like to provide a workable definition of it. Our novelists and playwright sometimes are groping up to their armpits into the turgid depths, trying to find it with their eager fingers and dredge up.

But it doesn't take any great exertion of the mind and imagination to obtain a very practical measure of the moral nature of man. All you have to do is walk up your stand at some corner around 5 o'clock in the morning or five o'clock in the evening and watch the traffic.

Let some poor soul try to back his car out of his side drive. Or the swift passing through, who stops to give him that a community which could produce such a thing as a traffic wardle of all this without a policeman from outside. It would close with further thanks the group and to the city of Belleville for allowing it to see such fine work.

Hotel Will Hire All Except 5 Of 452 Strikers

TORONTO (CP) — Striking employees of the Royal York Hotel have voted to return to work under a contract giving them "considerably less" than they demanded when they walked out on Feb. 26 a year ago.

Members of the Hotel and Club Employees Union (CLC) decided by a 316-to-214 ballot Sunday to go back to work.

A total of 447 workers will be rehired by the hotel between now and Aug. 30. Five others will not be rehired, but Archie Johnstone, Canadian vice-president of the union, said the hotel provided satisfactory reasons for its stand.

When the strike was called last April some 1,186 workers were involved. About 330 returned to work before the settlement—and now are under suspension by the union—and 200 others resigned.

The three - year contract, drawn up in secret negotiations under the direction of Montreal lawyer H. Carl Goldenberg, provides wage increases of five cents an hour.

WON'T NEED DEDUCT

The contract also:

Removes the hotel's obligation to deduct union dues from the workers' pay cheques for seven days' notice. The Royal York wanted this cut to four hours for all workers but gave in when the union fought for retention.

With the pay increase, 2½ cents an hour immediately and one more cent after 18 months, a waiter will get $1.64 an hour. Pay rates in chambermaid $1.52 and a bellboy $1.57 cents. The union had asked for a 10-cent increase.

Compulsory checkoff of union dues—$4 a month—from all permanent employees has been abolished, but the hotel will continue deducting dues from those who request it.

CAN APPLY

The contract also removes 70 of 250 jobs from the union bargaining unit, but the union can apply to the Ontario Labor Relations Board to have the classifications reinstated.

Angus MacKinnon, hotel manager, said about 400 workers hired during the strike probably will not lose their jobs but some may have to be transferred to other CPR hotels.

Edward S. Miller, international president of the union, said in a telegram to Sunday's membership meeting he did not "favor, or condone" the agreement and said the international office was prepared to continue financial support for the strike.

Mr. Miller said the wage offer was too low and that the proposed contract jeopardized union security of the 1,500-room hotel, largest in the Commonwealth.

He added, however, that he felt the strikers should reach a decision "without undue influence from this side of the border." Union headquarters is in Cincinnati.

LEAVES SCARS

The year-long dispute leaves deep scars.

Archie Johnstone, Canadian vice-president of the union, said that the cash cost to the union stood at $810,000 in a March 15 audit — $415,000 contributed by international headquarters, $245,000 of local funds, and the balance in contributions from other unions.

Mr. MacKinnon estimated the loss in hotel business at $500,-

CANNINGTON - CORBYVILLE

The annual banquet held in the Canniington United Church Hall on Wednesday, April 4th, was an unqualified success. Green and yellow streamers on the white tablecloths and daffodils in green vases made a most attractive background for the appetizing dinner, prepared and served by the Mothers' Auxiliary, convened by Mrs. Stan Kerr and Mrs. Ralph Stewart. Five miniature Scout flags mounted on a base of Ontario badges graced the head table places. Scoutmaster Stan Kerr was responsible for these unique souvenirs and also for the humorously illustrated programs. Stan devotes many hours every week to Scouting and is one of our most valued leaders.

Flag-breaking ceremony was smartly performed by Cubs Brian Holgate and Jim Hannah, Scouts Wayne Dawson and Dave Pound, followed by "The Queen" and grace by Mr. Harvey Putman.

Thanking the ladies, on behalf of the 100 fathers and sons for the excellent meal, mention was made of the continuous good work of the auxiliary the year round. Mrs. Fred Furmidge, president, in her reply, said the group was always pleased to be of service in the Cubs and Scouts. Mr. Bob Farquharson, replying to Scout Bob Hanna's toast to the fathers, intimated that the fathers should attend group committee meetings. Mrs. Furmidge stressed this point and said she expected to see them at the church hall on Monday, April 16th, at 8.00 p.m.

VIP'S PRESENT

Among the head table guests introduced by chairman Fred Furmidge were. Lillian Ashley, ADC Training and Provincial Cadet Officer, St. John Ambulance; Mr. James, secretary, St. John Ambulance; Mr. P. W. Pickering, president, District Council, and District Commissioner Murray Maw. Mr. Belstead, who welcomed the guests, said that it was a very important night to Cubs and Scouts, because they could show their fathers their meeting place and have them meet the leaders. The preparations by the Scoutmaster and leaders, in addition to the ladies, totalled up to a very warm and sincere welcome. S.M. Kerr outlined briefly the activities of the guests and invited them to address the boys and fathers. Mr. Pickering and the District Commissioner both stated that they had good reports of this group. A very enviable record dating back to 1919. They invited the Cubs and Scouts to visit troops and packs in Belleville. A representative at all Council meetings kept the group up-to-date on current Scouting affairs.

BADGES

A.D.C. Ashley and Mr. James presented St. John Ambulance badges and Boy Scout ambulancemen's badges to the following Scouts: L. Adams, G. Adams, A. Belstedt, D. Carlette, H. Cozze, W. Dawson, E. Emerson, D. Fremantle, A. Hanna, L. Laifman, G. Laifman, D. McKay, D. Putman, D. Pound, S. Pound, W. Park, J. Reynolds, B. Reynolds, J. Ritz, J. Stewart, D. Sullivan, D. Thornton, R. Thornton, R. Kerr. Additional badges earned by these boys included five swimmers, four campers, three pathfinders, etc.

Mr. James informed us that he was a Boy Scout in 1910. B.P. learned Scouts potential leaders with skills. Many people have been helped by Scouts with knowledge of first aid. Fraternities encourage it because it means safety. St. John Ambulance was started by monks 900+ years ago. Brothers of St. John formed the standard of the Crusaders' white cross. Their motto is "Service To Mankind." They are always ready and willing to train groups free. He concluded, saying how pleased he was with the results of the Scouts. The boys rated very high in efficiency.

As M.C., Stan Kerr kept the meeting lively with humorous remarks. He introduced the leaders, A.S.M. Fred Furmidge Jr., Scouts R. Kerr, J. Stewart, Akela K. Putman, ACM's B. Reynolds and B. Crone. The Cubs reported 98 badges earned, several second stars and seven Cubs went up to Scouts.

A film, "Animals of Africa," was shown through the courtesy of the Coca Cola Company, who also provided drinks for everyone. We might add that the young man in charge did a wonderful job in public relations.

On this happy note the evening was brought to a close with the singing of the Grace.

Chairman Fred Furmidge wishes to thank all those who helped make this a really good Banquet and the fathers for their generosity. Our thanks and congratulations to 1st Canniington-Corbyville. It was a pleasure to meet smartly uniformed Cubs and Scouts, clean cut and bright, and the efficient leaders.

CAS Panel At Bayview H-S Assoc.

Bayview parents listened to an interesting talk last week, given by a panel from the Children's Aid Society, led by Mr. B. Marr. Topic of the night was "Parent, Child Relationships".

Mr. B. Kerr is the chief attendance officer for the Bay of Quinte District High School Board, and Public School Board. He introduced the panel which consisted of Mrs. Janet Thompson, Adoption Department; Miss H. Meaker, Child Care Department and Mr. D. Adamson — Child Care Department.

FIRST FIVE YEARS

Mrs. Thompson expressed the opinion that a child's initial formation of character, depends solely on the family around it. The first five years are extremely important as to how the child will react in later years. Babies can be spoiled by the fussy type of attention, feeding problems are usually given too much attention, and also, most children with strong encouragement will solict train themselves. The child who is over-trained can become stubborn and hostile. Mrs. Thompson also stated that parents should tell the child the truth about sex, in the child's own language, but using the correct words terms, and they should be encouraged to come to the parents with questions.

WIDE GROWTH PATTERNS

Mr. Adamson says parents can expect the unexpected from the child of five to eight years, and poor table manners, coupled with a better appetite than in previous years. He quoted, a child this age, as "an appetite wrapped up in skin!" The important things about this age range are that the child develops a sense of ethics, becomes less primitive, is more expressive and more robust. There are wide variations in growth patterns and parents should not expect their children to keep up with the neighbors' children. Encouragement to a child, gives a sense of worth. Mr. Adamson believes the discipline being immediate, inevitable, inevitable, and adequate.

IN BETWEEN AGE

Miss H. Meaker expressed views on twelve years as being the in between age, and compared it to "floating the bridge between the cooking", as the child of this age group is preparing for the teenage years. At this stage, children are developing a conscience, and becoming an individual. Understanding from the parents is needed, because the child is sensitive at this stage of life, and parent-child relationship can be strained. At twelve, boy-girl interest is awakened, it is the age of enlistment, it is the final edition of childhood.

Altogether the panel passed on information, invaluable to parents, in an effort designed to help them enjoy their children more.

DDP Visits Lodge Officially

Tuesday night a tired but happy Belleville Rebekah Lodge met to welcome Sister Mary Hulin, DDP, of District No. 4, on the occasion of her official visit. The degree staff, under the direction of Staff Captain Sister Alice Adams, were the guests of Kingston the night before. They beautifully conferred the Rebekah Degree on two candidates, Miss Twigg of Kingston Lodge and Alvin Miller, M.O. of Belleville Odd Fellow's Lodge No. 81.

Lodge was opened in the regular form with Sisters Irene McMartin, N.G., and Connie Wilkinson, V.G., in their respective chairs.

Sister Mary Hulin, DDP, was escorted to the centre of the floor, presented with a beautiful corsage, and seated on the right of the N.G. Attend by Sister Ila Addy, J.P.N.G. Other visitors were welcomed from Stirling.

Following the regular business, Sister Irene McMartin, N.G., called the DDP to say a few words. She thanked the lodge for her corsage and also thanked the guard of honour, who were colorful in their floor-length, white evening gowns and carried dainty little nosegay bouquets with streamers to which were attached shamrocks. Sister Mary Hulin recited a lovely poem, entitled, "The Hills Ahead." She was also presented with a gift from the lodge by Sisters Connie Wilkinson, V.G. and Ila Addy, JPNG, for which she expressed her thanks.

Sister Ciara Ironside was escorted to the centre of the floor and wished a Happy Birthday" most enthusiastically. After the Noble Grand of Stirling said a few words all retired to the supper hall where a delicious lunch was served by Sister Lena MacMillan, Lena Belnay and their committee.

The theme in the upper hall of course was "Easter." The social table was decorated in mauve and yellow and the side tables each had a cute little bird's nest filled with Easter eggs. A social half hour was spent.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

Mary B. — I think he justs like to talk about going into business.

Matthew B. — I'd need a different type wife before I could open up.

* * *

Mary B. — My husband has been a waiter or bartender for 16 years. He claims to know the restaurant business inside and out. He's often talked about owning a place of his own. Well, if he's serious about it, now's the time to stop talking and start planning.

With a growing family, Matt's pay just doesn't cover any more. We've been married 14 years. We have five children, of whom four are school-age daughters. With not enough money coming in, I plan to put our youngest, a little boy, in a nursery school and go out to work part time. We need so many things — a larger house, for instance, or big repairs on this one — that I'd better get busy on the money end myself. I can't count on Matt making more unless he gets out on his own and, frankly, I don't think he ever will. It's just talk.

* * *

Matthew B. — It's true I'd like to have my own business. I'd know how to run it and make it pay. But the only restaurants I know which work out well are family undertakings. The wife especially pitches in. She's at the man's side from the beginning, the raising of the money, to the end — the enjoyment of the profits.

But Mary, not the hustling go-getter type of business woman. She says she's free to help me now. She wants to be my business partner. Well, you can't run a business with a slow-poke, a daydreamer who takes an hour just to make up her mind what to wear! I see the type of wife and relatives my boss has. They're sharp and quick.

I certainly can't run my kind of business alone. And Mary'd be no help. I'll have to wait for a better offer than hers to set me up.

The Council: Never underestimate the power of prayer. If you've belittled, Matt! There's fighting words on both sides of the way and we're ready to bet the first part-time job she takes will be in somebody else's restaurant, studying what those wives have that she, according to you, doesn't have. Slow-poke, indeed!

It looks as though this pals has each put in long years of daydreaming. Now it's put-up or-shut-up time. Since there's obviously no wad of cash in the sugar bowl for a first payment on "Matt's Place," money is the immediate hurdle. Mary's plan to go out to work now is an excellent one, even though it certainly won't raise much for the "buy-a-business" fund. It will fill a few day-to-day lacks — small comforts around the house, extra logs for the kids, quicker paying-up on instalment debts. But, even more important, it will show Matt that she can be businesslike.

And what's businesslike? Not necessarily being sharp and quick, Matt, it's being reliable, responsible and responsive to people. If Mary can get herself a job on time, fill her assignment satisfactorily, sustain a record of competence over a period of a year or two — well, Matt, that should remove one excuse for not proceeding with your life's dream, the purchase of your own business.

Meanwhile, as Mary learns the ropes while someone else pays the overhead, Matt's object is financing and fund-raising. We can't offer specific advice on this, but suggest that he discuss borrowing with such groups as trust companies and, of course, the banks.

If Matt really wants his own business and Mary really wants to be his shoulder-to-shoulder helpmate (and we agree he needs her) each must now say, "Stop talking and show me." Matt must start asking around and Mary must start punching a time clock.

SPEAKING of MANNERS

PATRICIA LEWIS

COURTESY IS A GOOD INVESTMENT

A genuinely courteous person — if he's solvent — rarely has a leaky roof, a wheezy furnace, a lukewarm clothes dryer or a sagging porch. Or, if he does, it's not for long.

The reason is obvious. He's understanding and reasonable in all his dealings with the roofer, the plumber, the electrician and the carpenter. When there's an emergency, maintenance man always seems to make time for you much additional expense to the long run.

Cheating well-qualified men is the first step in building up a mutually beneficial relationship. When you first move into a new neighborhood, it's always wise to have neighbors recommend resources. Many, you'll find, have compiled a master list through trial and error over the years. A newcomer often can line up experts in this way without having to go through expensive shake-down periods and tiresome weeding out.

When you have a crew lined up, find out what their rates are — if they charge by the hour or by the job. Knowing how you stand financially is an important part of establishing trust. Nothing strains relations so acridly as bickering over a bill once repairs are made. Reputable repairmen usually have a rate they can quote for service calls and can give a fairly accurate estimate for anything that requires more extensive time and materials.

When an emergency does arise, give the repairman as much information over the phone as you'd give a doctor if someone were sick. Outline symptoms and take whatever first-aid measures are recommended. When you call, don't be demanding. State your case. If you're in dire trouble, he'll most likely put in a fast appearance. It's also wise not to exaggerate the trouble in the hope of getting faster service. If you "cry wolf" too often, your word may not be taken too seriously when a true emergency arises.

When repairs are being made, try to stay out of the way and not interfere. It's always discourteous to look over anyone's shoulder when he's working or to try to hustle him along. A back-seat driver only distracts, and such tactics hold up progress.

We know of one case locally here good manners paid off in cash. A neighbor heard a bubbling in the basement and found virtually a waterfall cascading from the wall. Her plumber was out on another job, but when his wife relayed the message, he grabbed a sump emergency sump and flew to the rescue. Our neighbor was always one of his kindest, most courteous (!) and confidents customers, and he was darned if he was going to let water flood up and ruin her furnace. Luckily, the firebox was not touched. But our neighbor certainly was.

Plentiful Eggs and Potatoes Combined in Egg and Potato Scramble For Lent

by Mary Moore

Every mail brings requests for more and more Lenten dishes. The one I am featuring today is a dandy for it is inexpensive, and quick and if you want to you can give your total meal glamour by serving a lobster and oyster bisque first — which will almost, but not quite, ruin your budget resolves. (see tomorrow).

Dinner Menu

Broiled Bacon - Wrapped Beef Cakes; Mustard Corn Relish; Crosspatch Baked Potatoes; Creamed Carrots; Shredded Fresh Pineapple; Shortbread; Coffee.

EGG AND POTATO SCRAMBLE (Lenten — serves 4):

Heat 2 tablespoons vegetable oil or margarine in large frying pan. Wash pare and slice thinly 4 medium potatoes. Fry potatoes in fat until they begin to brown, sprinkle with 1-2 teaspoon salt and cover. Reduce heat and cook very slowly until potatoes are tender. Beat 4 eggs slightly, add 1-4 cup milk and 1-4 teaspoon salt and shake of pepper and if desired, 1-4 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce. Turn up heat under potatoes, pour egg mixture over potatoes and when it bubbles reduce heat and cook until eggs are set, loosening bottom a little with egg turner to allow liquid to flow under. Fold over and serve on hot platter.

Variations: 1) If you are not observing Lent in your menus boil are geared to a strict budget you can use fat from frying 3 slices chopped side bacon instead of oil in which to cook the potatoes. Skim out cooked bacon pieces and sprinkle on top of Egg and Potato Scramble just before serving. 2) If you are observing Lent in your menus grated cheese may be sprinkled over egg and Potato Scramble just before you fold it after it is cooked. 3) Flakes of smoked fish such as sardines or anchovies or canned oysters may be sprinkled over top of Egg and Potato Scramble before folding.

An excellent accompaniment to and I recommend this — is a creamed vegetable used as a colorful border around the Scramble. You could be creamed broccoli or green beans or green pepper or cauliflower in cheese sauce. Try Creamed Green Peppers are very specific. I will give [illegible] 4 [illegible] strips Gently saute, covered, in 2 tablespoons butter, until limp, but not brown. Add to White Sauce. Melt 3 tablespoons butter or margarine, stir in 3 tablespoons flour until blended, stir in 1 1-2 cups milk until thick. Add 1-2 to 3-4 teaspoon salt and shake of pepper. Add sauteed green peppers. When Egg and Potato Scramble is turned out on platter, pour the creamed green peppers around in a uniform border. Serve at once.

Canada's Economy Enjoyed 'Year of Expansion' Says White Paper on Budget

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's economy took a cue from improved business conditions in the United States and enjoyed "a year of expansion" in 1962, the government said today.

Finance Minister Fleming's budget white paper, tabled in the Commons, indicated last year's spring thaw coincided with a major shot-in-the-arm to Canada's economic bill of health.

In the last nine months of the year the pace of economic activity picked up rapidly.

Employment, industrial production, consumer and government spending rose; the rate of unemployment, interest rates and the deficit in Canada's international balance of payments dipped.

The white paper, in its review of the 1962 economy, reflected the economic growth partially to a new set of federal economic policies and also to favorable world conditions.

It noted that as economic conditions began to improve in the U.S. last spring, the subsequent business upswing had a beneficial effect on Canada's economy, in the same time Canada's first merchandise trade surplus in many years, helped by additional large grain sales, improved the external balance books.

A mid-year decline in interest rates narrowed the gap between Canadian and U.S. rates and resulted in Canadian flotation of a larger share of the country's borrowing needs. This was reflected in a decline in the inflow of foreign capital and the reduced exchange value of the Canadian dollar.

Money supply conditions were "relatively easy."

The white paper said the government's budgetary deficit was increased to $791,400,000 in the 1961-62 fiscal year from $540,400,000 in order to increase the flow of purchasing power to the general public "in a period when there was a considerable amount of unused economic capacity."

Between March and December the index of industrial production rose 9.1 per cent, while in the same nine-month period the gross national product in value of all goods and services produced—rose seven per cent to an annual rate of $38,300,000,000 in the fourth quarter.

Output of services-producing industries, mines, natural gas and petroleum wells and power utilities showed substantial increases. There were more housing starts and a general three-per-cent boost in the construction industry. Forestry production declined, while that of fishing and trapping was up.

The pickup in production, combined with relatively stable costs, netted sharp gains in corporate profits towards the end of the year.

Canadians had more jobs and more money to spend in 1962.

Employment rose by more than three per cent. The unemployment rate, adjusted to offset seasonal factors, declined to 6.1 per cent of the labor force in December from 7.5 per cent in January.

Personal income rose 5.6 per cent between March and December to $28,040,000,000. Drought - affected farmers earned less but sales of previous years' harvests helped improve their cash situation.

Consumer spending increased by about 3½ per cent in the last nine months with the biggest gains recorded in purchase of cars. Spending by all governments was up in 1962 by seven per cent.

The consumer continued to borrow heavily from finance companies, retail stores and chartered banks but credit eased in 1960. The biggest increase was in dollar exchange rate. In addition, the unemployment insurance fund repaid $67,000,000 instead of requiring $170,000,000 as Mr. Fleming had forecast. As CMHC deficit and lending by the CMHC were both less than expected.

In all, the government collected $312,400,000 from these non-budgetary sources, which more received another $880,300,000 from the net increase in its borrowings.

CASH ON HAND UP

Thus, after financing the budgetary deficit, the government ended the year with an increase of $401,500,000 in its cash on hand.

The government's gross debt rose by $1,754,000,65) to $22,856,890,000. This is partly offset, by various net other debt movements and the net debt increase was $791,400,000 on the amount of the budgetary deficit — $13,238,500,000 last March 31.

The white paper's review of the economy in 1961 showed an improving picture after the recession's low point during the first quarter was passed.

The seven-per-cent rise in the rate of gross national product from the first to fourth quarters, it said, compared favorably with the 8½ upswing in the early phases of previous economic recoveries.

It pointed to a relatively small increase in prices of less than one per cent, and showed an improvement in the job situation.

Employment last December was 180,000 higher than a year earlier, and the rate of unemployment, adjusted to offset seasonal factors, fell to 6.1 per cent of the labor force in December compared with 7.8 per cent the previous January.

ECONOMY IMPROVES

The report said that during the year the economy responded to new economic policies. Interest turned downward at mid-year; the spread in interest rates between Canada and the United States narrowed; the inflow of foreign capital declined, and more of the country's capital needs were borrowed in Canada as the money supply situation became a "relatively easy."

Defence spending continued to take the biggest share of the budget—$5.1 per cent—as net cash outlays for defence rose by $135,300,000 to $1,667,200,000, a new, large, since, 1,200,000—a delayed-action result of reduced company profits rose $42,100,000 to $830,700,000.

Welfare and anti - unemployment measures accounted for some of the big spending increases.

On the revenue side, personal income tax collections rose $58,... 800,000 to $1,800,000,000. Bus. corporation income tax collections dropped $71,600,000 to $1,205,...

Defence Expenditures Up $135,300,000 Last Year

OTTAWA (CP) — Net cash expenditures for defence rose by $135,300,000 in the 1961-62 fiscal year to $1,667,200,000—approximately one-quarter of all federal spending—the budget white paper officialsed today. Net cash outlay in 1960-61 was $1,531,900,000.

Defence department expenditures amounted to $1,623,000,000 in the fiscal year ended March 31, 1962, or an increase of $108,200,000 over the previous year.

Expenditures by the defence production department were $24,700,000, up $4,300,000.

Net disbursements from the defence department's material account and the defence production department's revolving fund amounted to $20,200,000 against net receipts the previous year of $8,000,000.

Each of the three armed services cost more to operate than the year before.

Army expenditures were up $45,600,000 to $447,200,000; RCAF $27,000,000 to $778,600,000; and Navy $17,600,000 to $282,900,000.
